WHITE KILLARNEY

MARYLAND

O. P. BASSETT

Ask the man who grows them

WHITE KILLARNEY

Grafted plants, 2½-inch pots, $12.00 per 100, ready for delivery March 15th, 1910. The White Killarney is far superior to the Bride, paying at least 50 per cent greater return per square foot of bench than the Brides. We graft only on selected Manetti and our young plants have a national reputation for superior quality.

MY MARYLAND

Grafted plants, 2½-inch pots, $12.00 per 100, ready for delivery March 15th, 1910. My Maryland is a splendid rose and must be grown to appreciate its heavy blooming qualities.

O. P. BASSETT

The best Red Carnation. Rooted cuttings ready by December 15th, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. The Bassett has made good wherever grown. 200,000 plants were sold last year, which is the greatest test. As a money maker it is far ahead of all other varieties; it is in carnations what Killarney is in roses.

The above three varieties have been thoroughly tested and are the leaders for this season.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

AN AUTO IN FLOWERS.

Pretty nearly every city of any consequence now has its annual automobile show, and the week of this event the merchants in nearly every line make special effort with their automobile windows.

The accompanying illustration shows how W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, took advantage of automobile week in Buffalo to catch the attention of the people. The photograph was made from the store, looking outward, and the decoration was worthy of special note because it was equally complete, viewed from either side. The automobile was made entirely of natural flowers, just like a funeral design, made up on a wire frame. Galax was used to represent the smooth metal surfaces, and smilax for the pneumatic tires, carnations being used to outline all the edges. W. J. Palmer says the piece attracted as much attention as anything they ever had in their window.

THE TREND OF PUBLIC TASTE.

[A paper by Frank J. McKenna, of Montreal, Can., read at the twelfth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, in Toronto, November 11, 1909.]

If we are to judge by the superb specimens of blooms which daily pass through our hands, floriculture has reached an almost superlative degree of perfection. For this we are deeply indebted to some clever and enterprising growers all over the country.

The part of the business in which I am most interested and which, to my way of thinking, is by far the most difficult to handle, is the retail. On account of dealing directly with the public, we are daily confronted with difficulties so formidable that it makes the growers' troubles so insignificant as to fade away into oblivion.

Before beginning to show in what direction the trend of public taste is traveling, I must mention the fact that there is one thing the retail florist has to be thankful for, and that is that people are, and always will be, of varied tastes and opinions when it is a question of decoration.

Crazes in Colors.

In my opinion, yellow for decoration purposes has no equal. Some have a mania for yellow; they want it at all times and seasons, first in mums, then in daffodils, tulips, daisies, roses, Iceland poppies, Spanish iris, coreopsis, goldenrod, marigolds, helianthus, rudbeckia, dahlias, gladioli, etc. Nothing but yellow appeals to their sense of beauty, and I think that the craze will not be satisfied until American Beauties in yellow tints have been introduced. Some others want red, the brighter the better; not only at Christmas, when other people want it, but also at any other time when occasion presents itself. But worst of all is the white flower fiend, who always happens along when we have a rush of design work, with white roses and carnations at a premium. He wants white flowers only, no matter what the occasion, regardless of its purpose or color scheme. A basket or bouquet is not perfect unless it contains some white roses. Why, they even send white flowers to their sick friends, who really need all the bright things possible to brighten them up. These are special color fanatics, and it is not on such that we can base our opinions on popular taste.

The demand for new ideas is growing daily and the florist who caters to up-to-date people must be up-to-date and original in his floral arrangement. Consider how fast the age is advancing in other channels; then why not in our line? Well, it is up to the floral artist to be always ready with new creations and avoid exact duplication of designs for the same occasion.

A Modern Requirement.

There is one feature, or rather change, in the business that is very noticeable even in my short experience. Not long ago it was the grower of specimen blooms and plants who was the hero of the hour. His productions were admired by all. A bunch of mammoth chrysanthemums, extra fine roses, or Beauties of excellent quality could be exhibited in an old bucket or ugly stone vase, and they were the talk of the town. Now it is different. It is floral arrangement, in my opinion, that holds the attention of the people today. A daintily arranged basket, bouquet or wee hamper of orchids, violets, pansies or valley will attract a hundred per cent more attention than even a dozen specimen mum plants with a hundred blooms on each.

For wearing, the cabbage-head bunch of double violets predominates. Only about two years ago we could not sell one bunch of doubles to a hundred singles; now the doubles have a larger sale, showing that it is not the flowers but the arrangement that counts. A little distinction may be added by inserting a cattleya, a few sprays of valley or a few small rosebuds. A rich moire taffeta ribbon of a good violet shade is the favorite tie, although at times we use a great many different kinds of cords, some very costly. Huge corsages of cattleyas and valley or violets and valley are quite fashionable, as much as 200 best valley being worn in one bunch, tied with shaded ribbons. With the best of these we furnish corsage shields.

Table Decorations.

As to table decorations, there is so much to say, so many different arrangements are in vogue, that I have not the time to go into any lengthy descriptions.

Smilax is seldom used on the table nowadays. Other greens are preferred and its sole purpose is for festooning and draping mantels.

We have always on hand a stock of tins of various sizes, to fit almost any shape of basket or fancy receptacle, which we fill with water and in which we arrange the flowers at the shop and deliver all ready to place on the table. This is much simpler than working in someone's pantry or dining room. We carry a great assortment of baskets for this purpose. In these, natural colors and neutral shades are preferred. Some are of bark, others twig, but willows are the best of all, with or without handles.

Always arrange flowers as loosely and as naturally as possible. The stems are cut to different lengths for best results.

For the debutante there is no set flower, but blush pink rosebuds, Carnots or Bon Silenes meet with the most favor, the tinier the buds the better, and what flowers are pinned to the ribbon are of the same variety.

Window Decoration for Automobile Show Week.

Wedding Bouquets.

For bridal bouquets, orchids and valley seem to be the choice of the majority who can afford them, white orchids being preferred when obtainable. Next in favor comes valley, and, following, the arm bunch of Brides only, or Brides and valley. White Killarney as yet meets with little favor. A ball of valley makes a unique bridal bouquet.

The expensive embroidered scarfs make a beautiful tie, but, in my opinion, wide, heavy moire taffeta or fine maline is just as good. We never use flowered or striped chiffon. For showered bouquets the half-inch chiffon ribbon is the prettiest.

Bridesmaids almost invariably carry a large flat bunch of one or another variety of pink roses. My Maryland has the preference. Mums, marguerites and yellow daisies are also effective and are extensively used. On such bunches we use maline or heavy wide ribbon. At some of the more fashionable weddings we use muffs, balls or fans for the bridesmaids.

The use of ribbons and chiffons with flowers is becoming more popular every day, and we use a great deal of expensive imported stock especially made for flowers. On the more expensive bunches we use the dotted chiffon over the ribbon, producing elaborate effects.

There is always a demand for dainty, well arranged baskets of flowers for gifts, of which we always have a few in our window or around the store.

For the Different Seasons.

For decorating in the fall, bronze beech sprays and yellow mums I find the most admired. In the summer, white and pink peonies are good; later on, Clematis paniculata cannot be beat. For Christmas, laurel and poinsettias and plain red Porto Rico mats are attractive. At any other time southern smilax or Sprengeri, hung with open Killarney roses, are most effective. Harrisii lilies are still the best Easter church decoration, and, I suppose, always will be; we have never yet had enough to supply the demand.

There are always a few customers who know it all, and, when ordering a floral design of any kind, they want to show us how they make it. The most profitable way to handle this class of customers is to jolly them a little and give them as near what they ask for as possible. Do not waste your time trying to talk them into something else. Do not force anything on them if you wish to retain them as customers, unless you have previously succeeded in securing their confidence. I must say that the general run of flower buyers of today are not quite equal to telling the florist what they want, but they usually have an idea, for everybody has more or less natural taste for beauty in flowers, and a suggestion or two from them may be helpful. Their ideas may perhaps seem odd, but coupled with our own artistic experience in such matters, the result will most likely be some pretty good design, perhaps entirely different from anything we might have conceived without the aid of their suggestions.

Some Popular Arrangements.

I will not attempt to enumerate here all the beautiful arrangements that seem to please the public so well, but the following are a few simple ones which are popular in our city:

A wreath of all roses, such as Brides, Carnots, Richmonds or Queens, with a well arranged bow of good ribbon, using only rose leaves for foliage.

The magnolia wreath is also quite popular, especially when a few croton leaves are used to give it some color, or a wreath of cattleyas and Amerpohlii and orchid ribbon speaks for itself. Combinations of valley make another swell arrangement.

The standing cross appeals strongly to the poorer classes. We find it the most showy design for the price.

All kinds of baskets are beginning to meet with approval and we expect that in a few years they will take the place of a lot of designs in use at present.

In cut flowers the most popular, in my opinion, are as follows: In roses, Beauties, Killarneys, Marylands and Richmonds always have a steady sale. In carnations, Winsor, White Perfection, Enchantress and Beacon are the flowers for us. Double daffodils are a dead letter. Paper White narcissus, as a cut flower, is likewise out of favor. We find a steady demand for sweet peas all winter, as well as mignonette and freesia when possible. Best valley sells at any time.

In mums there is an enormous demand for flowers of all colors, in the medium size. The incurved petals are the favorites, and although there is always some sale for the extra large blooms, the demand is limited. The mums that sell best of all, though, are Pink Ivory, White Ivory and Bonnaffon, old-fashioned, but hard to beat as keepers. Probably the most important introductions of recent years are the pompons. There is a great variety of colors among these, the whites, yellows and bronzes being the best sellers.

The Favorite Plants.

In plants, Boston ferns have the field to themselves. Scottii, when well grown, is most satisfactory and sells on sight. The newer varieties of fancy or crested nephrolepis, although much admired, move slowly, as the public seems scary as to their keeping qualities and cannot be convinced that they are just as good as the Bostons.

What has happened to the rubber plant is a mystery. There is no hardier house plant, with the exception, perhaps, of the aspidistra; still we could not give them away at 50 cents last year, though fine plants, twenty inches high. This year, though nobody has any in Montreal, I think a half dozen will put us through the winter. Not long ago two or three hundred rubbers could be sold by the average florist in one season. I wonder what is going to replace it.

Ficus pandurata, although greatly admired, is not as yet really popular, probably on account of its high price.

In palms, kentias are still the most popular, but since the duty has been placed on them, I think I can safely say that not half of the palms are sold in Montreal that were sold some years ago. This duty, in my estimation, is helping along the fern men some, but certainly does not help the florists' trade any.

In blooming plants, the azalea is by far the most popular. The rhododendron is also good and we find no difficulty in selling it all through the winter. It is a plant that usually gives great satisfaction to the purchaser. For anything out of the ordinary, in plants or flowers, we find a ready sale.

Mum plants are a scarce article in Montreal; I don't know why. We pay pretty good prices for the ones we get. I think it would be profitable for someone to make a specialty of growing them.

Well grown rose plants and ramblers find a steady sale at holiday time, but are practically useless at any other time.

I hope I have not been too tiresome in this, my first attempt in this line. One thing I have learned in putting these lines together; it is, that there is some difference between putting flowers together and telling in an intelligent manner how it is done. If this humble effort of mine, however, has the effect of bringing out for our next meeting a paper from one of the many clever artists of this association on this subject, which, owing to the rapid development in our profession, can always contain something new, I shall feel that my efforts have been amply repaid.

The Review can supply any horticultural books at publishers' prices.

One of the Stores of J. A. Mendel, Chicago.

MENDEL'S NEW STORE.

Not by any means all the flowers sold in a big city go to the fashionable districts; indeed, if it were not for the stores that do thriving business in the workingman's parts of town the trade could not be the success it is. To those who do not visit the southwest side of Chicago it is a surprise to know that some of the largest flower buyers in that market have their stores located there. J. A. Mendel makes no pretense of being a "big" florist, but he has sold so many flowers on West Eighteenth street that one store no longer serves his needs and he now runs two within three blocks of each other. The new store, to which headquarters was transferred last July, is shown in the accompanying illustration. The trade there is steadier than it is in the society section, for the use of flowers is largely for funerals and weddings. A large quantity of stock is worked up each day.

PROFIT IN GOLDFISH.

A large number of retail florists are now handling goldfish as a side line and find them surprisingly profitable, as a globe of them placed in a window attracts attention and not only sells the fish, but also helps the sale of the flowers.

It is popularly supposed that goldfish are hard to handle and die quickly, but such is not the case. If handled according to the directions given by the houses that specialize in this line, they will be found to be practically no care whatsoever and a good investment for any enterprising florist.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

I usually read "The Rising Eastern Market," as I like to keep up with what is going on as to flowers at the hub (so far as this part of the country is concerned). In the issue of the REVIEW for November 14, I noticed your Floral Calendar, and was surprised to see that you had omitted February 14, St. Valentine's day. I find here in North Carolina that on February 14 a good many flowers are sent as valentines. I wonder if this is not the case in the larger cities also?

IMPROVEMENT IN THE CANNA.

Work of Van Fleet and Wintzer.

It was one of those sunshiny days in October when there is any amount of work to do on the place that would be the better for doing at once. Yet there was no work that had to be done and frost was but a few days off. It was now or never, for, as everybody knows, cannas are apt to be at their best just before Jack mars their beauty. West Grove, Pa., is the home of the canna. From West Grove have come the most valuable additions to the canna family in recent years. West Grove is known the world over for these marvelous introductions, pink and white cannas with flowers of immense size, gladiolus type, adding a range of color unknown and undreamed of before the hybridizing days of Van Fleet and Wintzer.

Dr. Walter Van Fleet commenced the work, producing some wonderful seedlings that showed the possibilities within the range of the hybridizer. His seedlings were handed over to Antoine Wintzer, who continued the work as a hobby in his hours of recreation—continued it so skillfully that two years ago the London Horticultural Society awarded the highest honors to his productions.

Canna Rosea Gigantea.

The cannas are not at their best this season, for the long periods of drought have had their effects on this water-loving plant. Perhaps for that very reason an hour or two spent in the canna fields is of unusual interest, showing, as it does, the varieties that appear to advantage under trying conditions. Rosea Gigantea, last year's introduction, is a most beautiful pink, of a shade that might at random be compared to the tulip Salvator Rosa. The gladiolus-type flowers are, as the name implies, of immense size. The plants under the drought conditions are dwarf and vigorous, showing extraordinary freedom of bloom. There was a clearness, a depth, a brilliancy in the color of Rosea Gigantea that go far to convert the believer in reds and yellows only as canna colors. Minnehaha, another introduction of last year, makes a beautiful foil to Rosea Gigantea; a soft, delicate shade of blush pink evenly diffused throughout the immense flowers. The aim in naming the bronze-leaved cannas is to use Indian names for all of this type, so it is unnecessary to say that the Laughing Waters is a bronze canna.

Experiments in Selection.

The field devoted to last year's seedlings under number has many varieties of great merit; so many that the retaining of a few of the best is a task of unusual difficulty, a task that must be accomplished for fear of a financial crisis, lest the canna should overflow its space and drive every other species of plant from the neighborhood. The most striking novelty in this field was a seedling obtained from a cross between Blanche Wintzer (large flowering white) and Maiden Blush, both Mr. Wintzer's earlier varieties. There are fourteen plants of this novelty, bearing large gladiolus-type flowers of a pink and white that Mr. Wintzer assured me closely resembled La France rose. It has many of the qualities of a great canna, and will be watched with intense interest. The name Mrs. Alfred F. Conard is suggested for this variety.

This is the period of selection for hybridizing, when choice clumps are carefully housed with due regard to constitution, color, habit and foliage, as subjects for the potent spells of the camel's-hair brush. The work is done, never at random or haphazard, but with a definite object in view. It takes years of careful work to eliminate the tiger spots from the yellow field, to improve the size and freedom of Mont Blanc, to produce a pink of surpassing beauty, like Rosea Gigantea, or a bronze-leaved blush, like Minnehaha. The world recognizes William Saunders as Mr. Wintzer's greatest canna production, bearing, as it does, the stamp of approval of the English Royal Horticultural Society. It is a canna of the popular type, with a brilliancy unsurpassed for decorative effect.

SALE OF COMPOST AND SAND.

Will some of the retailers who sell compost in small quantities for potting house plants please give other readers the benefit of their experience in that line? What price do they ask and how is it handled, etc.? Also similar information about clean sand for bird cages, aquariums, etc.? My thanks to the one who will volunteer the information.

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

MILWAUKEE.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club sprung a surprise on the trade last week. Everybody knew that Milwaukee was going to have a right smart flower show, as a southerner would put it, but few, if any, looked for a show which would rival the exhibition at Chicago, which has come to be known as the country's biggest autumn exhibition. The Milwaukee show lacked only the encompassing circle of retail booths, the frame for the picture, to bind the exhibition into an harmonious whole, to stand comparison on every point with the exhibition at Chicago. Indeed, in some respects Chicago was outclassed. There were more entries for cut mums at Milwaukee than at Chicago, and the arrangement and general effect of the ensemble was not less satisfactory. There were not so many roses as at Chicago, but there were more carnations.

This is the first time the Milwaukee Florists' Club has had an adequate building for a show. The new Auditorium leaves little to be desired. Milwaukee never before has had an exhibition of this magnitude, so the attendance was not much of an evidence of what it will be in years to come, except that the later days of the show the public thronged to the exhibition in numbers sufficient to tax the capacity of the floor space. It was a strictly trade exhibition, the exhibits being practically all those of commercial growers, the private gardener element taking no conspicuous part. In the future Milwaukee will have, if this year's show is a fair indication, one of the big commercial exhibitions of the country, one which will command the attention of the trade and be no less an educator of the public taste because of the element of the personal interest which enters into the efforts of flower sellers to create flower lovers.

The awards at the Milwaukee show were as follows:

Roses.

Fifty Beauty, Holton & Hunkel Co., first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second; Peter Reinberg, Chicago, third.

Jottings.

It was well done and a grand success, thus reflecting great credit on the executive committee, which consisted of C. Dallwig, C. C. Pollworth, J. G. Heitman, N. Zweifel, W. Zimmermann, G. Kellner and H. V. Hunkel, with the latter as chairman, upon whose shoulders practically the whole thing rested. When the opening hour was reached everything was finished. The main hall of the new Auditorium, in which the show was held, with its white finish, furnished an elegant background and the decorations under the supervision of A. Kellner were fine, presenting a garden spot with five full-sized garden houses, one in the center and one in each corner, covered with wild smilax, trailing vincas and Japanese lanterns, which furnished a most pleasant resting place for visitors.

Alex. Klokner had a display of nursery stock and some aquatic plants, which, although not beautiful, were out of the ordinary and did not mar the beauty whatever. The competing display of palms and ferns plus the original hanging baskets of wild smilax, with yellow tinted electric light effects, gave the whole thing an artistic appearance.

Friday was carnation day and this brought out an exhibition which as to quality and quantity compared favorably with any other flower show of the country. There were 108 vases of carnations and only a few of these were put up, not for competition; in fact, competition in a good many cases was so keen that it took more time to judge than was looked for.

Saturday was rose day and, as there are not so many grown around here, the display was not large, but the exhibits on hand were a credit to the show.

Sunday the only new feature was the changing of dinner table decorations, which also were on display Friday and Saturday.

This being the first show of any kind by the local club since 1905, the public really did not know what it might expect, and with rain the first day the attendance was small. On the second day the attendance was fair, but Saturday the hall was crowded to the doors and Sunday afternoon and evening was also well attended.

The judges for the table decorations were lady representatives of six Milwaukee newspapers, and this, with the good work of the press agent, undoubtedly brought the desired results. Emil Buettner, Rogers Park, Ill.; J. E. Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis., and Otto Speidel, of Oconomowoc, Wis., acted as judges in the general classes.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. had forty-seven entries, which shows that they did their share to help make a big show.

In the American Beauty class the entry of Holton & Hunkel Co. was fine.

Heitman & Baerman had several vases of fine mixed carnations for exhibition only, and a good sized geranium bed bordered with salvia.

F. Hesse had quite a display of well grown Rex and other begonias and a neat basket of mixed plants.

Theo. Boettcher had a neat group with a specimen latania as a center, finished off with chrysanthemum plants in 6-inch pots, cyclamen, stevia and Salleroi geraniums.

Kenneth Barnhart, Peter Schilt, gardener, Evanston, Ill., had a unique mum plant, Dr. Enguehard variety, trained in two rows, semicircular form, which attracted considerable attention.

In the class for single specimen cut blooms E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., came in strong with good stock. Others who displayed fine mum cut blooms were Herman Staeps, Elm Grove, Wis.; C. C. Pollworth Co., Holton & Hunkel Co., Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; Wietor Bros., Chicago, and Currie Bros. Co. The E. G. Hill Co. had a fine display of anemone mums.

In carnations, the following varieties were displayed for exhibition only: Shasta, May Day, Mrs. Knopf, Afterglow, Pink Delight, Sangamo, Conquest and Mary Tolman. In the seedling class there were few entries.

It was a great show and the participating retailers deserve great credit for their aid in every way. Some outsiders remarked that this show compared favorably with the Chicago show.

In carnations, Winsor was the best keeper, for it showed up just as well Sunday night as when staged Friday morning, with N. Zweifel's Bright Spot a close second.

The back yard, before and after, exhibit did not occupy a conspicuous place and as the one was too far distant from the other, it did not serve the purpose intended.

J. Finger, West Allis, Wis., had a creditable display of cut mums of the smaller commercial varieties.

Saturday evening after 9:30 the visiting florists were tendered a banquet at the Republican house by members of the Florists' Club. C. C. Pollworth was introduced by President Dallwig as toastmaster. He in turn called on most of the visitors for a few remarks and thus the time passed and everyone seemed to have enjoyed the little social. H. E. Philpott, president of the Canadian Horticultural Society, was among the guests. E. O.

ROCHESTER.

Charles H. Vick, who was chairman of the general committee in charge of the recent exhibition of the Rochester Commercial Florists' Association, states that the success which attended the recent exhibition has insured the show becoming an annual event. At a meeting of the association November 8 at the office of James Vick's Sons, Treasurer W. S. Keller gave a partial report of the financial result, showing a profit of approximately $1,000 as a result of the show. The records show that 17,375 people passed through the gate, of whom 16,289 paid the admission fee. The committee which managed the show was as follows: C. H. Vick, chairman; George B. Hart, W. L. Keller, J. M. Keller, F. J. Keller, R. G. Salter, E. P. Wilson, A. H. Salter, Charles J. Brown, F. W. Vick, William Pitkin, Thomas F. Brown, Sydney R. Clarke, C. B. Ogston, H. B. Stringer, E. A. Osborne, William C. Barry, W. H. Dildine, Guy W. Ellis, William H. Campbell, Woodworth Clum and Harry C. Goodwin.

ST. LOUIS.

The flower show given by the St. Louis Horticultural Society opened November 9, in the Coliseum building, under favorable conditions, and closed November 12. The big hall was nicely decorated. The exhibition was staged in the big arena, laid out as a park and the edge sodded, which gave all exhibits a neat appearance. The competition in cut flowers was not large on the first day, but became stronger the last three days. In the class for plants Fred C. Weber's Japanese pagoda, decorated with cut flowers inside and surrounded with plants, was one of the most attractive displays in the hall. The booth of Ostertag Bros. consisted of a fisherman's dinner table, with electric effects, which was much admired for its originality. F. H. Weber had a neat booth surrounded with plants, and a table decoration in the center. The St. Louis Seed Co. and the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co. both had fine booths, displaying their seeds and bulbs. Otto Sander had a large platform on which he displayed several well made-up designs, which were favorably commented upon. Taking everything into consideration, the show was complete in every detail and deserved the success it achieved. The executive board deserves a great deal of credit on the management of the show. Fred H. Meinhardt and O. G. Koenig had charge of the floor and the exhibition.

The pomological display was not what was expected and only a few tables of apples and peaches were shown, mostly from Stark Bros. Nurseries, of Louisiana, Mo.

The St. Louis park department had two splendid groups of decorative plants at the front end of the hall. The large fountain in the center of the hall was arranged by the city water department. The Missouri Botanical Garden display was largely made up of odd plants of biblical mention. The judges were: J. T. Temple, of Davenport, Ia.; I. C. Bertermann, of Indianapolis, and R. F. Tesson, of St. Louis, and they did their work to the satisfaction of all exhibitors. The awards were as follows:

Roses.

One hundred American Beauties, Peter Reinberg, Chicago, first; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, second.

Fifty American Beauties, Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, first; Peter Reinberg, second; F. H. Weber, third.

Fifty Richmond, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, second; A. C. Brown, third.

Fifty Killarney, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Weiland & Olinger, second; J. F. Ammann, third.

Fifty Chatenay, J. F. Ammann, first.

Fifty White Killarney, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, second.

Fifty Bride, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Weiland & Olinger, second; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, third.

Fifty any other variety, J. F. Ammann, first, with Ivory; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second; Weiland & Olinger, third; the two latter with My Maryland.

Six vases of roses, six varieties, twenty-five blooms each, Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, first, with Killarney, Richmond, Bride, Perle, My Maryland and White Killarney; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, second, with Rhea Reid, White Killarney, Bride, Maid, My Maryland and Chatenay.

Fifteen new white roses, John Steidle, first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second; both with White Killarney.

Fifteen new pink roses, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first, with My Maryland.

Fifteen new red roses, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first, with Rhea Reid.

Carnations.

Fifty white carnations, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with White Perfection; H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., second; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, third; the two latter with White Enchantress.

Fifty light pink carnations, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Enchantress; J. F. Ammann, second, with Rose-pink Enchantress; H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., third, with Enchantress.

Fifty dark pink carnations, A. C. Brown, first, with Sangamo; Chicago Carnation Co., second, with Alvina; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, third, with Afterglow.

Fifty red carnations, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Victory; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, second; Mueller & Schroeder, third; the two latter with Beacon.

Fifty carnations any other color, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Conquest.

Five vases of carnations, five varieties, fifty blooms each, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first, with Enchantress, R. Craig, Winsor, White Perfection and Lawson; Chicago Carnation Co., second, with White Perfection, Beacon, May Day, Enchantress and White Enchantress.

Fifty carnations, competition open to growers of St. Louis and vicinity only, H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., first; J. F. Ammann, second; Charles D. Hecht, third.

Twenty-five carnations, seedling not yet disseminated, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with Conquest and Sangamo.

Twenty-five new white carnations, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first, with Sarah Hill.

Twenty-five new pink carnations, J. F. Ammann, first, with May Day.

Twenty-five new red carnations, J. F. Ammann, first, with O. P. Bassett.

Chrysanthemum Cut Blooms.

Fifty chrysanthemums, five varieties, ten blooms in a vase, E. G. Hill Co., first, with Eaton, F. S. Vallis, Golden Wedding, John Lemon and Souvenir de Mme. Manoir; Fred H. Lemon & Co., second, with Rousseau, Percy Plumridge, Nellie Simon, Jossier and O. H. Broomhead; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, third, with Roosevelt, Laurent, Mlle. Donellat, Mary Mann and Robinson.

One hundred blooms, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first.

Twenty-five blooms, white, E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., first, with Timothy Eaton; Fred H. Lemon & Co., Richmond, Ind., second, with Chadwick Improved; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., third, with White Bonnaffon.

Twenty-five blooms, yellow, E. G. Hill Co., first, with Golden Eagle; Fred H. Lemon & Co., second, with Yellow Eaton; J. F. Ammann, third, with Percy Plumridge.

Flower Show at Kearney, Neb.

Twenty-five any other color, E. G. Hill Co., first, on O. H. Broomhead; F. H. Lemon & Co., second, with A. J. Balfour; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, third, with Montford.

Ten blooms, pink, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first, with Dorner's No. 7.

Fifty chrysanthemums, blooms on mossed boards, E. G. Hill Co., first.

Display of pompon or anemone and single varieties, F. H. Lemon & Co., first; Koenig Floral Co., second; E. G. Hill Co., third.

Retail Exhibits.

Chrysanthemum dining-room decoration, C. Young & Sons Co., first; F. H. Weber, second; Fred C. Weber, third.

Basket of roses, Theo. Miller, first; F. H. Weber, second; C. Young & Sons Co., third.

Basket of carnations, Theo. Miller, first; C. Young & Sons Co., second; Ellison Floral Co., third.

One hundred roses arranged for effect, Koenig Floral Co., first; Theo. Miller, second; F. H. Weber, third.

Fifty chrysanthemum blooms arranged for effect, E. G. Hill Co., first; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, second; F. H. Weber, third.

Bride's bouquet of lily of the valley, C. Young & Sons Co., first; F. C. Weber, second; J. F. Windt, third.

Floral display, Theo. Miller, first; C. Young & Sons Co., second; Ellison Floral Co., third.

In addition to the regular premiums the sum of $100 was set aside for a new and meritorious exhibit, which went to Theo. Miller with a handsome fruit plaque on a large easel with chrysanthemum accessories.

Display of 1,000 violets, C. Young & Sons Co., first; F. H. Weber, second.

Plants.

New and meritorious plant, F. R. Pierson, S. A. F. bronze medal for Nephrolepis elegantissima compacta.

Pair of standard bay trees, C. Young & Sons Co., first; E. L. Loyet, second.

Display of decorative plants, William Schray & Sons, first; E. L. Loyet, second.

Begonias, one or more varieties, J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, first; C. Young & Sons Co., second.

Eighteen berried plants, Koenig Floral Co., first; Sanders Nurseries, second; F. J. Fillmore, third.

Twenty-five blooming plants, chrysanthemums excluded, William Schray & Sons, first; Sanders Nurseries, second; F. J. Fillmore, third.

Twelve geranium plants in bloom, Koenig Floral Co., first; F. J. Fillmore, second.

Specimen palm, William Schray & Sons, first; E. L. Loyet, second.

Specimen fern, William Schray & Sons, first; C. Young & Sons Co., second; E. L. Loyet, third.

Blooming plants other than chrysanthemums, Koenig Floral Co., first; J. A. Peterson, second; William Schray & Sons, third.

Fern dish, William Schray & Sons, first; Sanders Nurseries, second.

Pair of hanging baskets, William Schray & Sons, first.

Group of variegated foliage plants, William Schray & Sons, first; Sanders Nurseries, second.

Group of chrysanthemum plants, Koenig Floral Co., first; Sanders Nurseries, second; C. Young & Sons Co., third.

Twelve chrysanthemum plants, pompon, anemones or single varieties, Koenig Floral Co., first; C. Young & Sons Co., second; Sanders Nurseries, third.

Twenty-five chrysanthemum plants grown to single stem, Vaughan's Greenhouses, first.

Three specimen chrysanthemum plants, any color, Koenig Floral Co., first; Sanders Nurseries, second.

White specimen chrysanthemum plant, Vaughan's Greenhouses, first; Sanders Nurseries, second.

Yellow specimen chrysanthemum plant, Vaughan's Greenhouses, first; Sanders Nurseries, second.

Specimen chrysanthemum plant, any other color than the above, Vaughan's Greenhouses, first; Sanders Nurseries, second.

Collection of evergreens, Sanders Nurseries, first.

The Shaw gold medal was not awarded, as the judges did not think the entries worthy.

A. C. Brown, Springfield, staged for exhibition Carnation Sangamo and a pink seedling, Clara Mae.

J. A. Peterson's new begonia attracted a great deal of attention. Henry A. Dreer's plants of Acanthus montanus were also an attraction, as was F. R. Pierson's new fern.

KEARNEY, NEB.

There is an idea for other florists in small towns in the success which attended the exhibition given this year at Kearney, Neb. The ladies of the Twentieth Century Club were anxious to have some sort of an autumn festival and decided to give a flower show in co-operation with the Kearney Floral Co. It was, of course, up to the florist to provide most of the stock and to do the work of making an attractive exhibition, but the ladies took charge of the publicity end of the proceedings and provided the attendance. The City hall was engaged, and the ladies gave a supper on the opening night in an adjoining church parlor. A ticket to the supper admitted also to the flower show and the ladies sold tickets throughout the town for days in advance. In addition to the cut blooms and plants of the florists, there was a large display of amateurs' plants and Ed Williams, of Grand Island, was called in to judge. The Kearney Floral Co. thinks this exhibition did more in an advertising way for the flower business than anything which has happened in that community for years, and it is an affair which can be duplicated by any enterprising florist.

WASHINGTON.

Sunday night, November 14, the annual flower show given by the Washington Florists' Club came to a close, this exhibition proving to be the most satisfactory in the history of the club. On Sunday afternoon and evening Pistorea's band rendered sacred selections, which were greatly appreciated by the large attendance. All day long on Saturday and Sunday the hall was crowded, the attendance being a great deal larger the latter part of the week than at the opening.

The table decorations in the small room were quite a drawing card, there being table and mantel work by a number of retail florists.

Tuesday, November 9, members of the Baltimore Florists' Club paid a visit to the show. Those in the party were John Perry, Charles Seybold, Frederick Bauer, George Clutch, Frederick Boone, Isaac Moss, Matthew Richmond, James Glass, Philip Welsh, James Hamilton, Charles Wagner, Edward Seidewitz, Conrad Hess, John Nutz and Charles Cooke. The party returned much pleased with the trip.

Geo. C. Shaffer's displays were among the most attractive. Besides decorating the pagoda in the center of the hall, Mr. Shaffer had a table and mantel decoration. On the opening days the table was decorated with yellow pompons, then changing to valley and orchids, producing an effect which was extra good, something unique and out of the ordinary in the arrangement. The mantel was decorated with adiantum and Baby mums.

Directly across the room was the arrangement of W. Marche, this being a large group of palms on each side of a stand on which Mr. Marche had various arrangements of fancy baskets and vases, changing them completely each day. Mr. Marche also had a table decoration, something different from almost anything else in the hall, a tall vase of odd single white mums in the center, with small arrangements of red bouvardia at each plate, the effect being excellent. A shower bouquet caused quite a bit of comment.

Mayberry & Hoover, besides showing a fine group of palms in the large hall, came in with a handsome table piece of Killarney roses.

Geo. Cooke's table of yellow pompons in a number of different arrangements was most attractive, one especially so, an immense shower, with adiantum and pompons on the cloth. Mr. Cooke's mantel to correspond with the table was good, made of yellow pompons and adiantum, with yellow ribbon used lavishly. In the main hall some large mums were displayed by Mr. Cooke.

The Washington Florist Co. had quite a showing of plants, in which some fine stock was seen, especially palms. A lot of Araucaria excelsa and dracænas formed a fine group. In the foreground two large Italian marble vases filled with Golden Wedding mums were conspicuous. This firm's new rose, Mrs. Taft, has proved to be quite a favorite.

In the display of Gude Bros. Co. the main attraction was a large mill with chrysanthemums and Beauties in the foreground.

Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, represented by J. J. Goudy, was on hand as usual with a fine lot of stock, showing plants of the commercial varieties, among them the new crested Scottii, Nephrolepis Scholzeli.

Edward Schmidt had quite a lot of miscellaneous stock, including bulbs, air plant, goldfish and white mice.

W. S. Clark showed some fine single chrysanthemums.

Fred H. Kramer's display consisted mostly of his new rose, Queen Beatrice, and was well taken to by the public. Mr. Kramer also showed fine mums.

W. W. Kimmell had in his exhibit a large number of Baby mums.

J. W. Dudley & Son, of Parkersburg, W. Va., were here with a fine lot of Silver Wedding mums, the only ones in the show.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., had the largest and most complete display of pompons. W. F.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The annual exhibition of chrysanthemums, carnations, orchids and roses by the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held November 12 and 13 at the Churchill House. While not so large as previous shows, the quality of the blooms was somewhat better than usual. The largest single exhibitor was John Macrae, who took most of the awards. Fred S. Peck had a fine display from his private residence, a vase of Appleton being without exception the finest mums ever shown in this city. Albert Holscher also had some fine Appleton. Other exhibitors were John Gerrard, of Bristol; Mrs. E. A. Pierce, F. Macrae Sons, Mrs. S. F. Paine, Miss Bessie Paine, William A. Steele, B. A. Holbrook.

One of the features of the exhibition was a display of Japanese evergreen planting and miniature fancy bedding by William Appleton. This is the first display of the kind ever attempted in this city. The landscape garden occupied one corner of the main hall and Mr. Appleton received many compliments. The show was benched under Mr. Appleton's directions. W. H. M.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The annual chrysanthemum show of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was held in the society's hall November 11, and brought out a goodly number of entries. Admission being free and the weather fine, a large and appreciative crowd attended. It would be interesting to see the result if a charge was made.

The prizes offered by the society are worth competing for, but outside of H. F. A. Lange and the Worcester Conservatories, who took first and second premiums for decorative groups in the order given, there was not much competition. H. F. Littlefield and C. D. Mackie staged well, but the stipulation of growing the stock exhibited barred them from competing.

H. F. A. Lange had some grand mums, showing a large assortment of singles, also the yellow pompon, Savannah, which is a good seller all through the east. Mr. Lange says the sale of the single varieties does not warrant growing many. He will cut down the list.

The Worcester Conservatories had roses and carnations that surprised many, they were so fine. George McWilliams, of Whitinsville, was a large private exhibitor and had a lot of choice stock. He also acted as judge.

The display of fruit was good—not so extensive as usual, but of excellent quality. M.

TORONTO.

The sixth annual exhibition of the Ontario Horticultural Society was held here November 9 to 12 and in both fruits and cut flowers brought out a larger showing than ever before. The trade was well represented in the classes for miscellaneous plants and cut blooms of chrysanthemums, roses and carnations, also for retail displays. The principal exhibitors were the Dale estate, D. F. Collins, W. Jay, Thomas Manton, T. Pewtress, R. Jennings, W. Lawrence, J. H. Dunlop and the Steele, Briggs Seed Co.

AUGUSTA, GA.

The Georgia-Carolina fair featured floriculture this year more than ever before, a liberal premium list being provided to bring out a larger number of exhibits than usual. The principal exhibitors were the Boatwright Floral Co., which had sixteen premium-winning entries, and the P. J. Berckmans Co., which was awarded ten premiums. Other trade exhibitors were Balk's Nursery and W. K. Nelson. The quality of the plants was better this year than ever before, the chrysanthemums, both plants and cut blooms, being especially good.

NEW YORK.

The American Institute show, which opened November 10, in conjunction with the C. S. A., was, from the standpoint of quality of blooms, the finest ever held in New York city, which simply goes to prove that the C. S. A., wherever it holds its meetings, carries with it the endorsement of the best growers in the country.

The blooms of Merza, as staged by Proctor and Turner, for size and splendid finish have perhaps never been equaled, the former winning first for twenty-five white, and the latter capturing the coveted C. S. A. cup, for ten flowers of this popular variety.

William Turner was successful in capturing twelve or thirteen first prizes, which included the thirty varieties, short stems, and more of the vase class. His ten yellow, which were Mary Donnellan, took everyone's eye, and Appleton no longer has a chance in an exhibition with flowers of Donnellan, such as Mr. Turner staged.

Thomas W. Head, of Groton, Conn., staged Pockett's Crimson in the best shape that I have seen it anywhere this year, foliage and flower being alike magnificent. He deservedly won the Wells gold medal with six wonderful flowers of this variety. Harry Turner, of Port Washington, L. I., won the Wells silver medal.

The date of the show was too late for many of the varieties that were shown in splendid condition one or two weeks ago, but there were still plenty of varieties to make a show that crowded the hall to the doors.

The largest flower in the show was Onunda, a new variety raised by William Duckham, of Madison, N. J., and staged by him in the class for six, any white variety. The color is not a pure white; it shades more toward a cream, and many of the judges thought the flower coarse, but this flower was, without exception, the largest flower that has ever been staged at an American show, when one combines breadth and depth. A tape placed around the flower showed a circumference of forty-three inches. Many of the visitors, looking at it, exclaimed, "What next?"

Thos. W. Head set up Mrs. O. H. Kahn in splendid condition for the Totty prize, and the same exhibitor captured many of the prizes in the vase class.

The classes for anemones were well filled. James Bell, of Garrison, N. Y.; Joseph Kennedy, of Red Bank, N. J., and Francis Milne, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., were among the principal exhibitors.

Bush plants were also a splendid feature of the show. W. H. Waite, of Yonkers, N. Y., was the principal winner in this class. In the competition for the Vaughan prize, which he won, his splendid plant of Annie Laurie was deserving of special mention.

Chas. H. Totty staged a table of singles and individual flowers of next year's novelties, which were much admired.

Other non-competitive exhibits were staged by R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., who set up several hundred varieties of pompons in excellent condition, and some fine exhibits were also made by Thomas Meehan & Sons, Germantown, Pa. These exhibits created as much interest in their way as anything in the show.

The Stumpp & Walter cup was won by William Duckham with fine Miriam Hankey, and the Buckbee cup for American seedlings was captured by Elmer D. Smith & Co.

It is impossible to enumerate all the prize winners, but the quality of the flowers staged will long be remembered.

At the meeting of the C. S. A., held during the evening, the old officers were reëlected, the only change being the substitution of Eugene Dailledouze for Harry Turner as vice-president.

Several ways and means were discussed as to increasing the usefulness of the society. Among others was a suggestion from the president that he be permitted to appoint committees at flower shows, to judge seedlings that might be exhibited, but such committee to consist of members of the C. S. A. This was adopted.

An interesting paper was read by I. T. Powell, of Millbrook, N. Y., and several of his suggestions will probably be adopted in the near future.

The question of a meeting place for next year was left to the executive committee, with power. Invitations were read from Boston, the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, the New York Horticultural Society and St. Louis. So long as there is this rivalry for entertaining the C. S. A., its members need have little fear of the future.

W. Wells, of Merstham, England, was present and gave the members an interesting talk on the behavior of American varieties in England. He also told how the Australian varieties, as grown in America, had impressed him. He endorsed the methods of the C. S. A., in its system of scoring varieties at shows so that only the most deserving gained recognition. By his statement, many of the Australian varieties are much finer, as shown in America, than they are under England's climatic conditions. He was particularly impressed with the splendid vases of Merza which he had seen at the different shows, and regretted the fact that it made a poor showing when grown in England.

PHILADELPHIA.

David Rust, secretary of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, succeeded in having all the prizes placed on the exhibits at 6 p. m. on the opening day of the show, two hours before the public was admitted. This is a feat to be proud of, in face of the unusual lateness of the exhibitors in staging their plants and flowers. One exhibitor, John McCleary, made eighty-four entries, several of them elaborate displays, making it impossible for him to finish staging his exhibits on time, with the limited force of employees at his disposal.

The show was held November 9 to 12 and was the largest in a number of years. It was replete with interesting plants and flowers. The quality of the cut blooms of chrysanthemums was superb; personally, I am inclined to think they were better than I have ever seen in Horticultural hall, though this may not be the general verdict. The quality of the chrysanthemum plants evidenced that they were too costly or cumbersome, or insufficiently prized, to bring out the best efforts of the growers. The feature of the chrysanthemum plant exhibit was the dozen or more plants of the single varieties, which promise to revolutionize the taste for chrysanthemums in this city.

The specimen ferns were of the highest merit. There were three splendid displays of orchids and several novelties of unusual interest. Taken as a whole, the show reflected credit on the management and on the exhibitors, especially the private gardeners, who made the affair a distinct horticultural success.

The space at the foot of the grand stairway was filled by an immense specimen fern, six or seven feet tall and proportionately broad, one of Thomas Long's triumphs, which was awarded by the judges the prize for the best foliage plant in the exhibition. Flanking this masterpiece, two on either side, were four of the best specimen chrysanthemum plants. The yellow was Golden Age; the white, Gerald Foster (it seems to me this was the first time the variety had been shown here), and there were two pinks, Dr. Enguehard.

The stairway was ornamented on both sides with superb vases of cut blooms of specimen chrysanthemums, twenty-five in each. Among these, Nellie Pockett was prominent. At the top, in the post of honor where the stairway divides, was a group of the new crested fern, Nephrolepis Scholzeli, from Henry A. Dreer, including a great specimen, the original plant, I fancy, with medium and smaller plants in front, all well grown. To the right and left, lining both sides of the smaller stairway, were vases; then 6-inch pots of mums, with a specimen bloom on each; a feature was the pink Viviand-Morel, exhibited last year for the first time by Heck Bros., Wyomissing, Pa. At the top of the stairway, on either side, were superb vases of roses from Edward Towill, Hillside, Pa.; one was My Maryland, with flowers like Beauties in size, the other Sunrise, a variety rarely seen, which Mr. Towill is growing for variety's sake.

The center of the main hall was filled with the specimen plants of chrysanthemums and the first prize winning group of foliage plants, a 10-inch Cocos Weddelliana adding grace. The right-hand wall, nearest the door, was filled by a long table of orchids in bloom, arranged with ferns. This exhibit, one of the features of the show, was from John H. Dodds, gardener to John Wanamaker, and the varieties and arrangement won admiration. Next came two groups of crotons, with an intervening exhibit; there were eight plants of each, all specimens, the exhibits being in marked contrast. In the first the plants were of great size, very leafy; in the second they were dwarfer, though large and highly colored. The prizes were reversed.

Two groups of flowering and foliage plants, arranged for effect, followed. The first was made up of superb material, specimen blooms of chrysanthemums in 6-inch pots, cattleyas, Easter lilies, lily of the valley and bouvardia, with a glorious areca and graceful palms and ferns at back and edge. These were from Samuel Batchelor. The second group, a masterpiece in arrangement, was fully fifteen feet high, a wooden staging being depended upon for height, rather than size of plants. The quantity of green, especially arecas, gave grace. Yellow and white mums, oncidiums and Dracæna Godseffiana were conspicuous. The effect produced was that of a canopy, suggestive of a betrothed couple receiving. This was John McCleary's. The order of the prizes was again reversed. The right-hand corner was filled by a group of hardy pompons, in fifty or more varieties, from the Overbrook Gardens (Edward A. Stroud's modesty did not permit his name to appear). This group attracted much attention, with the pink sport from Garza in the post of honor.

The stage was completely filled by Henry A. Dreer's palms and ferns; all choice varieties, well grown, with but one or two specimens of each. Phœnix Roebelenii and Cocos Weddelliana in specimen sizes, a well colored variegated pineapple (Ananassa sativa variegata), and a nicely fruited plant of the Otaheite orange, were features. This exhibit was in charge of John S. Hay. Beyond the stage was a table containing a baker's dozen plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in a variety of sizes, all perfect specimens, full of flowers, from the Robert Craig Co. Next, a table from the same exhibitors of handsome cyclamens in many colors, with one grand plant, Nephrolepis Scholzeli.

Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., sent a showy collection of orchids in bloom, Cattleya labiata being especially admired. A variety of Cypripedium insigne, Harefield Hall, was large flowered and parti-colored. Croton F. Sander, green and gold, beautifully colored, completed this fine exhibit. Two exhibits of foliage plants from private gardeners contained specimen Pandanus Sanderi in the center, both well enough grown to please the most critical. Then came Lager & Hurrell's exhibit, from Summit, N. J., containing thirty-seven varieties of orchids in bloom, many of them rare plants of value, the balance well known commercial varieties in fine form. This, the largest orchid exhibit in the hall, was in charge of George Strange.

W. H. Ritter had a table of tiny cacti,

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

MUMS FOR EXHIBITION.

[A paper by Thomas Proctor, superintendent of Blantyre Gardens, Lenox, Mass., presented to the Chrysanthemum Society of America at New York, November 10.]

The cultivation of the chrysanthemum for the production of exhibition blooms is accomplished by several different methods. For years some of our most prominent growers have demonstrated that good exhibition blooms can be produced by what we term the bench system of culture, and others have equally good results growing their plants in boxes. I venture to say, however, that the cultivator who has the time at his disposal to give his plants the necessary care and attention will produce a larger percentage of exhibition blooms by growing his plants in pots against an equal number in either bench or boxes.

As far as my own experience goes, relative to the above three systems, I have given each what I consider a fair trial by devoting an equal space in the chrysanthemum house to each system, and with the exception of two varieties I have invariably found that the plants grown in pots produced by far the better blooms. The reason is obvious; the plants are under control. The exceptions referred to above are Beatrice May and Merza, which with me do better in boxes.

And, as each cultivator has his own particular way in growing his plants, I will endeavor to state briefly our method of culture in pots for the production of exhibition blooms, and will commence with the treatment of plants after flowering.

As soon as the plants have finished flowering, the stems are cut back to within a few inches of the top of the pots. Selecting the required number of the different varieties for the future production of cuttings, we prepare one of the side benches in the chrysanthemum house by filling in to the depth of about five inches with a mixture of the following: Two parts loam, one part each leaf-mold and sand, and a sprinkling of soil is shaken from the roots and they are planted firmly in this, and afterwards given a good watering to settle the compost. The plants respond well to this treatment by giving us a plentiful supply of cuttings.

Treatment of the Cuttings.

Most of the cuttings will be in the sand by the middle of January. They are rooted, without the aid of bottom heat, in a night temperature of about 45 degrees, when in from three to four weeks a majority of the varieties will be rooted and ready for a shift into 2½-inch pots, the compost consisting of leaf-mold and sand with a little fine loam added. They are still retained in the above temperature until they have filled their pots with roots, when they are shifted into 4-inch pots.

The compost for this is two parts loam, half a part each old mushroom bed manure and leaf-mold and a sprinkling of Clay's fertilizer and hard wood ashes, all passed through a ½-inch screen. When potted they are transferred to one of the side benches in the chrysanthemum house, where they receive plenty of light and air with a night temperature of about 40 degrees. After again filling their pots with roots they are shifted into 6-inch pots.

The compost for this is three parts good fibrous loam, half a part each old mushroom bed manure, lime rubble and half-decayed leaves, with a handful of Clay's fertilizer and soot added, passed through a 1-inch screen. Along about the first or second week in May the plants will be ready for their final shift into 8-inch pots.

The Final Shift.

The compost for this is four parts good, rough, fibrous loam, one part each of charcoal, lime rubble and half-decayed leaves, half a part of crushed bone with a few handfuls of Ichthemic guano and soot added. When thoroughly mixed the plants are firmly potted in this, leaving about two inches for top-dressing.

Sometime in June the plants will make their first break. The bud is rubbed off and one of the best shoots selected to continue the growth. Most of the plants will again break in July, when the bud is rubbed off and the best shoot selected, as before, to continue. The first bud that appears in August is secured. Buds taken from August 5 to 15 give us the best results.

Feeding commences as soon as the pots

TWO OF THE NEW MUMS.

Wells' Late Pink is a large, handsome flower, with fine foliage, Lady Hopetoun shade, but the stem is easily able to carry the flower erect. It is too late for the early shows, but fine for later ones, or for the commercial grower.

W. Mease is a rosy pink flower, large and spreading. This is a splendid addition to the section to grow for exhibition in the collections of twenty-four or more varieties; a dwarf grower with fine foliage. This will be a popular variety. C. H. Totty.

Work of Committees.

At Philadelphia, October 30, Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., exhibited No. 227-1, deep golden yellow, shaded bronze, Japanese reflexed. It scored as follows: On the commercial scale — Color, 18; form, 13; fullness, 9; stem, 12; foliage, 13; substance, 13; size, 9; total, 87. On the exhibition scale—Color, 9; stem, 3; foliage, 4; fullness, 14; form, 13; depth, 12; size, 30; total, 85.

At Cincinnati, November 6, Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., exhibited the following chrysanthemums: Clorinda, bronze pompon, scored 89 points; Red Light, single, scarlet maroon, scored 77 points; Arlee, single, three to four inches, terra cotta, scored 87 points.

At New York, November 6, Heck Bros., Wyomissing, Pa., exhibited Hawthorne, light pink, Japanese incurved. On the commercial scale it scored as follows: Color, 17; form, 13; fullness, 7; stem, 14; foliage, 14; substance, 13; size, 7; total, 85.

At Philadelphia, November 6, Heck Bros., Wyomissing, Pa., exhibited Hawthorne, light pink, Japanese incurved. It scored as follows: On the commercial Annual Meeting.

The eighth annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America was held Wednesday evening, November 10, at 20 West Forty-fourth street, New York, with President Elmer D. Smith in the chair. All the old officers were elected, except vice-president, Eugene Dailledouze receiving that honor, Harry Turner retiring. W. Wells, of Merstham, England, was unanimously elected a member of the society. Arthur Herrington filled the secretary's chair in the absence of C. W. Johnson. Robert Rutter, president of the American Institute, gave the address of welcome. He declared the desire of the Institute to cooperate with the Chrysanthemum Society in the holding of an exhibition in the future in Madison Square Garden, that should eclipse anything ever seen in New York. The present rooms of the Institute are entirely inadequate for exhibitions of any kind. President Smith's address and the paper by I. L. Powell were both interesting and able efforts, and have already appeared in the columns of the REVIEW.

The horticultural societies of St. Louis and New York and the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, of Morristown, N. J., tendered invitations for the meeting of 1910, the latter society announcing through William Duckham a guaranteed premium list of $3,000 from a gentleman of that city. C. H. Totty also presented an invitation by request from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston. The decision was left in the hands of the executive committee.

Chrysanthemum Wells' Late Pink.

W. Wells gave an interesting address. Thomas Proctor's paper on the "Pot Culture of the Mum for the Production of Exhibition Blooms," was, in his absence, ordered printed in the record of the proceedings.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cyclamen.

A few flowers will now be opening on the earliest cyclamen plants, and if these are kept in a night temperature of 50 degrees they may make nice, salable stock for Thanksgiving. The plant demand at that time is lighter than at Christmas, but even if any plants in bloom do not sell at the earlier holiday they will be in even better shape for the later one. Do not try any forcing tactics in an endeavor to get plants into bloom which seem backward. You may get the flowers, but they will be lanky and spindling and will not stand up stiffly above the foliage as when grown under cooler conditions. We have now removed all shading from our plants and for the next three months none should be necessary. Of course, in the case of plants with the flowers well expanded, they will hold better if the glass is clouded. Cheesecloth as a shade is preferable to whitewash on the glass.

Be sure not to crowd the plants. Each plant should be so spaced that it does not touch its neighbor. Continue to afford weak doses of manure water to all plants which have the pots well filled with roots. Cow manure and Clay's fertilizer are reliable fertilizers. Bon Arbor is also splendid for promoting leaf growth. If thrips makes an appearance, spray with a nicotine solution every day for a week. One application or even two will not clean it out. If leaves and flower buds show by their twisted, malformed, spotted and generally sick appearance unmistakable evidence of the mite, it is better to throw away every plant having traces of it. Many a fine batch is ruined each year by this disease and we are still without a real remedy for it. Certainly it is disheartening to grow along a few hundreds and thousands of cyclamen and then have to sacrifice the whole lot.

The little seedlings to flower a year hence will now be making rather more rapid headway. They should be either transplanted to shallow flats or potted off singly. We like the flat method a little the better, as the soil is less liable to dry out. Be sure the compost is light, with plenty of rather flaky leaf-mold and sand, and let the soil be pressed lightly. A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night, a position well up to the light and free ventilation is what these little plants want now.

Cinerarias.

Christmas is a trifle early to have cinerarias in bloom. We have this season a batch in 6-inch pots, which promise to be well flowered at that time. These are now being well fed, shaded from direct sunlight and in a house averaging 45 degrees at night. Later plants will need some attention in regard to potting. They speedily fill pots with roots and it is unwise to allow any shifting to larger receptacles to be delayed. Pot firmly at the last shift, and for compost use two-thirds loam and one-third old, dried cow manure. A little fine bone may be added also, a 4-inch potful to two bushels being sufficient. Grow cinerarias cool and airy all the time. They prefer an atmosphere rather damp than dry. Growing, as they do, rapidly at this season, they will require a fresh stand every week. Of course, spraying with nicotine or fumigation is a necessity to keep aphis in check.

Where plants are not wanted in flower before February or March, they will grow capitally in frames until December, provided they are well protected at the sides and over the glass. Anything just clear of freezing will suit cinerarias and they will stand even two or three degrees of frost if allowed to thaw out in the dark.

ROSES FOR EASTER FORCING.

[A paper by George A. Robinson, of Montreal, Can., read at the twelfth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, in Toronto, November 11, 1909.]

I suppose every grower of pot plants for Easter includes in his list pot roses and generally finds them among the most difficult subjects to handle for that particular holiday. They last in flower so short a time that careful manipulation is necessary to have them in perfect condition for a given date. But what more glorious sight than a bench of well flowered rose plants? The hybrids with their gorgeous colors and delicate perfume, the ramblers' immense clusters of bloom and the polyanthas' dainty pink or white flowers appeal to everyone and are probably more admired than any other flower at this spring holiday.

These three sections are the principal ones for Easter forcing. Hybrids are the most important. These are shipped into this country in large quantities every spring and fall from the British Isles and Holland. The Holland roses are entirely unsuited for pot culture, being budded foo high on the stem; they consequently make unsightly pot plants. The British roses, being low budded, make excellent pot plants.

Hybrids.

Plants imported in the spring should be potted up as soon as possible, selecting the largest and strongest for single plants. These will require a 6-inch pot. The smaller and more unshapely plants can be put, two or three together, in a 7-inch pot and they will make elegant specimens. They should be pruned back hard, placed on or plunged in a bed of ashes outside and allowed to break naturally. They make a sturdier and hardier growth than if started in the greenhouse and put outside later in the summer. Water liberally during the summer months, with frequent syringing to keep down thrips and red spider. As the season advances and wet weather sets in, the pots should be raised, placed on boards and kept on the dry side, to insure thorough ripening of the wood. This is the one essential point in all forcing roses.

The fall imported plants will force fairly well, but will not give as much satisfaction as pot-grown ones. These should be potted up on arrival, rather than heeling them in until wanted to force, and should be placed in a root house or coldframe until time to start. They will require two or three weeks longer to get into bloom than the established plants.

There are only a few varieties of hybrids really worth forcing. The best of all are Magna Charta, dark pink; Mrs. John Laing, light pink; Brunner and Jacqueminot, red, and Frau Karl Druschki, white.

American Beauties are very satisfactory pot plants for Easter forcing; that is, if they are well grown and properly timed. Procure some plants from the cut flower growers when they are throwing them out in June. Pot them up, but do not prune them at all. Keep them in the greenhouse until well established, when they should be stood outside and treated like hybrids.

Building of the McCallum Co.

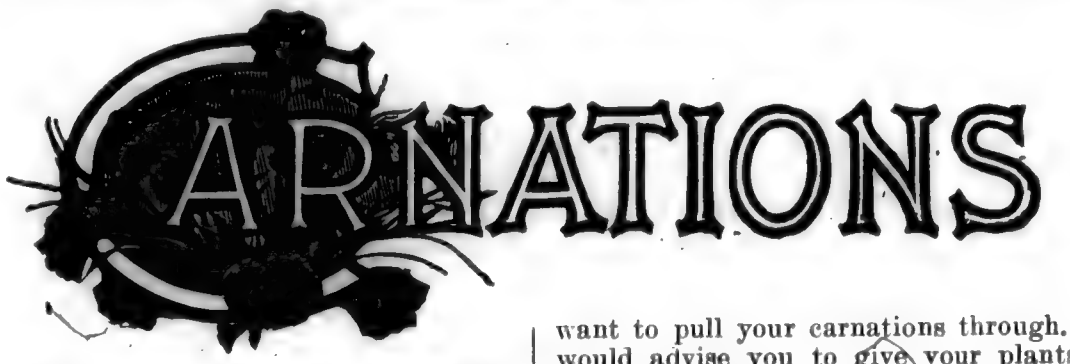
Ramblers.

The rambler varieties force more easily and flower more freely if pot-grown, especially the small sizes, but two or three old plants dug in November, potted up at once and kept cool until time to start them, will flower satisfactorily if the weather has been favorable for ripening the wood during the fall. Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay and Wedding Bells are among the freest bloomers and best colors for Easter. One-year-old ramblers used to be extensively grown around here for Easter forcing, but it was always a speculation as to whether they would flower, and with the advent of the Baby Ramblers they are no more needed.

Baby Ramblers do not need to be pot-grown. Freshly imported plants, or plants lifted from the field in the fall, root and break away as freely as if they had been established in pots. This variety I consider the most valuable of all the roses for forcing at this season of the year. Two-year-old plants, potted one in a 6-inch or two or three in a 7-inch pot, make elegant plants, which retail at $1.50 to $4 each. They require but little pruning, as they break freely from any part of the old growth, whether ripened or not, thus enabling you to grow tall, medium or dwarf plants from the same stock.

Polyanthas.

The polyantha section has not given us any good Easter varieties as yet, apart from Clothilde Soupert, but I think it is our own fault, for they have not been given a thorough trial. They are free blooming, as a rule, easily handled and should prove useful if the right varieties could be procured.



In this latitude it is necessary to give pot-grown roses a slight protection until time to start them into growth. During November they should be stored in a cold root house, or laid on their sides covered with boards and some litter, first being sure that they are well soaked with water, or the roots will suffer. When brought in they should be pruned, not too severely, and top-dressed, using cow manure, Thompson's manure, Clay's fertilizer or any animal manure you are accustomed to, mixed in reasonable proportions with good soil.

They should be started in a cool house, about 45 degrees, and the temperature gradually increased as growth advances. Hybrids and Beauties require from ten to twelve weeks to get them in flower, Crimson Ramblers about twelve weeks and Dorothy Perkins about two weeks longer. Baby Ramblers need about twelve weeks to get them in flower.

Always remember that freshly potted plants need about two weeks longer to make roots than pot-grown plants. It is far better to start in time and grow them moderately cool than have to force them at the last minute. The blooms will be of better substance and color and will give more satisfaction to the store man and purchaser.

HISTORY OF DOROTHY GORDON.

At the meeting of the Philadelphia Florists' Club November 2, Joseph Heacock gave the story of the new carnation, Dorothy Gordon, in the following words:

"Dorothy Gordon owes its existence to the enterprising efforts at hybridization of one of the members of this club, Edwin Towill, who six years ago used the pollen from a Lawson flower on an Enchantress and the next spring sowed the seed. Two years ago we were short of plants for our houses. My son, who had recently been at Mr. Towill's and had seen his seedling, told me that he wanted someone to grow it and give him cuttings from it in the spring. We called on Mr. Towill and found that he had 1,200 good plants, was short of room, and would be glad if we would take them and give him 5,000 rooted cuttings the first of March following, and then gave us an option on buying at that time if we so desired. It did so well for us that winter that we closed the option in January, buying Mr. Towill's interest in it for $650. If we ever disseminated it he was to get $50 more, or $700 for 5,000 rooted cuttings.

"Before buying it we sized up its good qualities and decided that it would be profitable to pay $650 for it to grow as a cut flower, even if we never disseminated it, and that it would pay for the room it took better than American Beauty roses were paying us. To show you what faith we had in it, the next season we grew 6,000 plants, devoting all the space we could possibly spare and throwing out the American Beauties entirely, the growing of which rose had been quite a feature at our place."

SPIDER AND FAIRY RING.

Kindly inform me what is the trouble with the enclosed carnation plants. All their bottom leaves are turning yellow, and nearly all the blooms on the White Perfection split. The house is kept at a night temperature of 52 degrees and the plants are syringed once a week. A. O.

The White Perfection stems and buds appear to have been taken from plants which lack vigor. We have noticed this trouble where plants were not getting proper culture, but never saw it where the variety was growing normally. You may have plants which were propagated from weak stock, or your soil may be deficient in plant food. Irregular watering will also affect this variety more quickly than most others.

You have a serious condition confronting you, if your carnations generally look like the ones you forward. You have a twofold trouble. Your plants are infested with red spider, for which you ought to syringe, and they are also badly affected with fairy ring, for which you want to keep moisture away from the plants. You will have to use good judgment for the next few months, if you want to pull your carnations through. I would advise you to give your plants a hard syringing, with all the force at your command. Then spray them with Bordeaux mixture. Paint a steam pipe with a mixture of lime, sulphur and water, and strew some slaked lime around in the walk and under the benches. In the early morning of a prospectively bright day, spray the plants with salt water. Use a 2-inch potful of common salt to four gallons of water. Do this twice the first week and not more than once a week thereafter. Discontinue the salt spray as soon as possible, as it will make the stems brittle, if continued too long. Pick off all the bad leaves and burn them. Give all the ventilation possible and run steam in at least one pipe every night, even if it is warm and you have to open the ventilators. Water carefully, though not too sparingly. Do not apply any heavy mulch until the trouble has disappeared. There will be enough food in the soil until the plants get to growing strongly again. The cause of fairy ring is a close, humid atmosphere, and just the opposite conditions will bring on red spider trouble.

I would advise you not to propagate from these plants. They are weakened and can not give good, strong cuttings, even should you succeed in eradicating the two evils. Buy clean, fresh stock from some grower whose stock is vigorous, and next season guard against these troubles. A. F. J. B.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The Miami Floral Co., Dayton, O., registers Carnation Miami Queen; parentage, Mrs. Lawson x G. H. Crane; color, cerise pink; size, three to four inches; habit, compact, no surplus grass; strong, healthy grower; blooms early and continues through the season; calyx, strong and does not burst. A. F. OBITUARY.

John H. Menard.

John H. Menard, one of the oldest, longest established and most widely known florists in New Orleans, died November 13, at his home, Rampart and Valmont streets, at the age of 63 years. His death came suddenly, being struck by apoplexy. He was born of French parents, coming from Brittany, but he passed all his life in New Orleans. His father being engaged in the seed business, he followed the florists' trade all his life, being of the old school of gardeners, making good plants and selling them at good paying prices. He is survived by his widow, several children and stepchildren, one being the wife of Paul Abele, of Abele Bros. Of the two others, Richard and Claude Orry, the latter has been a valuable assistant in his establishment. He was a good hearted man and belonged to several organizations, the Knights of Honor, the Elks and the New Orleans Horticultural Society, of which he was one of the founders, serving a term as president. M. M. L.

G. W. Flick.

George W. Flick, 60 years of age and long identified with the florists' business in Fort Wayne, Ind., died at 10 o'clock Monday morning, November 8, at St. Joseph hospital. His death was due to cancer of the bowels. He had been in failing health for several years. About three months ago he submitted to a surgical operation and improved so markedly that he was able to leave the house and give some attention to business affairs. Later, however, there was a recurrence of the malady and a second operation was performed Saturday, November 6, but the effort to prolong his life was futile.

Mr. Flick was born in Ohio and removed to Fort Wayne thirty years ago. He is survived by his wife and six children. There are also three sisters. He was an excellent citizen, quiet and unassuming, and throughout his extended illness he bore his suffering with marvelous patience. He was widely known and universally esteemed.

S. J. Thompson.

Samuel J. Thompson, of Louisville, Ky., died suddenly on Monday afternoon, November 8, and was buried in Cave Hill cemetery. His death came as a shock to his relatives and friends. He was found unconscious at 10 a. m. in his apartments over the store at 532 South Fourth avenue. Three physicians were called in and worked with him, but he gradually sank to the end. It is believed that while in a coughing spell he suffered a rupture of a blood vessel. He was weak from the loss of blood when found, and his death resulted from exhaustion.

Mr. Thompson was 54 years of age and a native of Salem, Va. He was a son of George Thompson, who thirty-five years ago originated the firm in Louisville. When a young man he engaged in business with his father. He was a member of the Louisville Lodge of Elks and Cherokee Tribe of Red Men.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Cora B. Rammers Thompson; one son, Edwin L. Thompson, associated in business with his father; a sister, Mrs. Charles Schleeter, and two brothers, George Thompson, of Louisville, and John W. Thompson, of Seattle, Wash. The family residence is at 806 East Broadway.

Siegmund J. Bach.

Siegmund J. Bach, founder of the firm of Semon Bach & Co., of 50 Hubert street, New York, died November 13, aged 75 years. He was born in Bavaria in 1835 and came to this country in 1855, soon after forming with his brother-in-law, the late S. B. Ulman, the mercantile concern of which he was president for the greater part of his life, and through which many greenhouse owners have at various times imported considerable quantities of window glass.

Mrs. B. Ackley.

Mrs. B. Ackley, who for the last twenty-six years had been in the florists' business in Oneonta, N. Y., died October 26. She was about 60 years of age.

William Rupp.

William Rupp, who for many years has sold flower pots to the trade as the Harrison Pottery, died October 20 at Harrison, O., where he also had other business interests. Mrs. Rupp is left, with three small children, and will continue the pottery.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

This issue of the REVIEW, all in the day's work, contains 100 pages.

BOXWOOD is used in immense quantities, plants one to two feet high, for filling winter window boxes in the eastern cities.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

MOST of the big flower shows have been kept open on Sunday this year, possibly with a sacred concert, and the Sabbath attendance has been generally the best of the season.

THE Cincinnati Florists' Society finds its treasury enriched nearly $1,600 as a result of the S. A. F. convention last August, but those who carried the work of preparation believe they earned it. It is proposed to use the money as a reserve fund to back a big flower show next year.

ONE of the chief obstacles in the advance of the trade is the neglect of business methods on the part of those who grow and deal in flowers and plants. It has been in spite of their methods rather than because of them that many men have succeeded. But every year now sees an improvement in this respect, for example is quickly followed, especially when benefits are so apparent as in the case of those who learn and adopt the modern methods of doing business.

EFFICIENT.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

The advertisement in the Review did its work nicely and very quickly.—Mellen Greenhouse Co., Ravenna, O., November 8, 1909.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the executive committee preparations for next spring's exhibition were considered. The date, the fourth Wednesday in Lent, comes this year so early that various parties raised the question, "Why do you have it so early? We cannot be sure of a crop." Upon deliberation the date was fixed for March 16 to 18, 1910. This exhibition is to be held under the auspices of the New York Horticultural Society. This society is one of the best supported in the east, and we look forward to the coöperation of many of the large private estates. The place of exhibition is a public hall of the highest class, the admission is free, and a large attendance is expected.

The matter of securing a list of handsome prizes is being looked after, and the society asks the support of every one interested, not only in roses, but floriculture in general. The second edition of the schedule is issued and has been mailed to the members of the society and others as far as it was practicable to do so. The Bulletin for 1909 will be mailed during Christmas week.

BENJ. HAMMOND, Secy.

OUR BIRTHDAY.

With this issue the REVIEW begins its thirteenth year. With no axes of its own to grind, it has sought to uphold the mirror to the horticultural trades and is content with the measure of appreciation with which its efforts have been rewarded. The REVIEW has had its full share of the growth that has come to the trade in the twelve years that are gone. It feels that the years to come hold out for the trade at large a promise of prosperity even more pronounced than that of the past, in which this paper hopes to share in proportion to the honesty and industry with which it plays its part.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week was undoubtedly one of the most generally unsatisfactory periods in the recent history of the market, but the reason seems quite apparent. It did not lie in any adverse fundamental factor, but in the weather only. The Chicago flower market is always more or less of a weather market. Good weather brings in the crops simultaneously all over the Mississippi valley, and bad weather curtails production, not only at Chicago, but wherever Chicago flowers go. The result is that the market has wide swings. When production is large, demand is least, and when production is at the lowest level, demand is strongest. Last week production was at the top notch, because the weather was the warmest the weather bureau here ever has recorded for the second week in November. Not since 1882 have the records of the weather office shown anything like the November temperatures recorded last week. With April days, bright skies and everything right for a crop, flowers were crowded into the market at a rate far in excess of any requirements. This was particularly true of roses, though only in a less degree of chrysanthemums and carnations. Rose crops were on the upgrade and the plants were just in the condition to respond to the warm sun with a heavy cut. The stage of growth was such that a large part of the stock was of the better grades in length of stem; indeed, the proportion of the medium, long and fancy was unusually great. The large supply of white was noticeable.

With the market in such condition it was, of course, impossible to realize anything like the real value of the stock; though the selected shipping orders might bring fair returns, the jobbing off of the accumulation could not be accomplished, except at extremely low rates. But Killarney sold far better than Maid, and White Killarney better than Bride. Beauties have begun to shorten up and prices have advanced.

The situation in chrysanthemums began to change last week. While the supply was extremely heavy, there began to be a shortage of the better grades of smaller varieties, though this did not ap-of us and you will be back for Christmas, and before.

We ship large quantities of these Killarneys, but there are still some buyers we have not yet been able to reach. Our stock runs mostly to good "Selects" (medium to long). This grade you can sell in quantity to your good trade, but we also have enough of the "Special" stock to supply your wants in this line.

BEAUTIES

Our crop of Beauties is steady, remarkably fine and especially strong on medium lengths. If your trade calls for good medium Beauties you should get in touch with us at once. Enough finest long and medium Beauties o fill all orders.

Carnations

Carnations always have been one of our strongest holds. We are again in full crop and can supply any and all demands. Our Carnations always are the best the market affords. Push your sales and order of us.

MUMS

The best Mums of the year are here, just right for the Thanksgiving trade. Bonnaffon is extra good with us, but Chadwick, Nonin, Eaton and all the other best varieties are awaiting your orders. Can supply thousand or a single dozen. Let us hear your needs—we do the rest.

Violets

There is no house in the west that is pushing violets any harder than we are—and we certainly are getting the stock. Our supply of the Cream of the Hudson River Doubles is very large, and we have fine home-grown singles. Our stock for Thanksgiving will be especially good.

Smilax Strings

Use Smilax in your decorations. We can supply it by the hundred or thousand; $10 per 100; $80 per 1000. Plenty of Asparagus bunches. All other Greens in large supply.

ply to Bonnaffon, which is available in quantity in all sizes. A good many of the mums have been and are of poor quality, and would command only low prices at a normal stage of the market, but this week the best, big late blooms are in and splendid stock is offered. It appears that the chrysanthemum season is approaching an end, rather earlier than usual, because the warm weather has rushed along the flowers.

Buyers are beginning to appreciate that carnations once more are plentiful and at ordinary prices. The result is that the carnation orders are increasing, and the carnation held its own last week rather better than any other flower in the market, though prices, of course, went down in sympathy with everything else.

Supplementing the carnations, there is a large supply of Diana, the small white mum which works in so nicely in all kinds of designs, baskets and other retail creations. The supply of this variety is much larger than it ever has been before, and prices are lower, sales being slower. Other varieties of pompon and single chrysanthemums, while in good supply, are not so abundant as Diana.

Violets suffered in the general apathy last week, but there is predicted a sharp rally for them. Valley and lilies are equal to all requirements. Sweet peas are increasing in quantity. A few Paper Whites are seen.

The present week opened with storms and more nearly seasonable temperature. The general impression is that with cool weather and the normal amount of sun, production will be reduced, demand will multiply and business will resume its usual course.

There is nothing out of the ordinary in the green goods department.

Wednesday, November 17.—Three days of dark and comparatively cold weather have begun to affect production. Cuts are reduced, demand is not yet strong, but prices are hardening, especially on Beauties.

To Milwaukee.

There was a delegation of thirty Chicago florists at the Milwaukee flower show Saturday, November 13, practically all the men attending the banquet given in the evening by the Milwaukee Florists' Club. The Chicago visitors were delighted with the show; it was much ahead of anything heretofore seen in Milwaukee and entitled to be classed with the Chicago exhibition. Among the Chicago florists present were: Frank Johnson, Albert Amling, William Amling, P. J. Foley, R. Schiller, August Poehlmann, Adolph Poehlmann, Adam Zender, Eric Johnson, George Asmus and wife, E. F. Winterson and wife, H. E. Philpott, John Bruckner, Fred Lautenschlager, T. E. Waters and wife, Harry Garland, Otto Goerisch, J. C. Vaughan, Harry Lubliner, Joseph Trinz, C. W. McKellar and wife, Leonard Kill and wife, Michael Fink, A. T. Pyfer and Peter Olsem, Joliet; Annie Weiland, Evanston. At the close of the banquet a good many of the Chicago people were called on by Toastmaster C. C. Pollworth for afterdinner remarks.

Mr. Washburn's Plans.

Bassett & Washburn are confident that the record the O. P. Bassett carnation has made with those who bought it last year will result in a demand for cuttings this season fully as great as that of the year it was sent out. They therefore are preparing to propagate extensively and already have about 20,000 cuttings in the sand and are putting them in at the rate of about 1,000 each day. They also are preparing for a large demand for young stock of White Killarney in the spring and have ordered 125,000 Manetti for grafting, although crop conditions may result in their not receiving the full order, for Manetti is scarce in England. Mr. Washburn says next year their winter white roses will be three-fourths White Killarney and one-fourth Bride. They will discard Maid and will plant My Maryland with Kaiserin for summer, relying on Killarney for pink for winter.

Telephone Mixup.

John Kruchten is angered that after having repeatedly called the attention of the telephone company to the fact that his name appears in the list of retail florists, instead of among the whole-salers in the classified section, it still is wrongly classified in the new fall edition. But he has company in that the two new wholesale houses opened since the last telephone directory was issued, Hoerber Bros. and Kyle & Foerster, also are in the retail list, instead of under the proper wholesale heading.

E. C. Amling says that although last week was one of the hardest of his recent experience, he thinks the reason for the market condition should be apparent to all and that from his point of view the prospect for the season is excellent; better than ever.

A. E. Hunt & Co., Evanston, now are selling a portion of their cut in the Flower Growers' Market. Usually their stand is graced by a vase of their new carnation, Mary Tolman.

It is reported that O. J. Friedman is about to open a branch in the La Salle hotel.

The A. L. Randall Co. has received its first shipment of holly from Delaware, sent on by their man there to refute any statements that good holly will not be obtainable this year.

Peter Weis, at Morton Grove, is rebuilding his range of vegetable houses, the entire place, and has the work well along. Meilander is the contractor.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is receiving its usual crop of Bonnaffon from George Baer, of Toledo. Mr. Baer has been shipping these to Kennicott's for many years, ever since Bonnaffon was introduced, and he has yet to find a year in which the variety does not finish perfectly and sell well. He thinks it the best of all chrysanthemums.

When C. M. Dickinson was at Pelican Lake last summer he sent W. E. Lynch a maskalonge weighing fifteen pounds, but the express company lost the fish, and Mr. Lynch never had the pleasure of "seeing is believing" Mr. Dickinson's fish stories. But November 15 the express company offered him $1.87, being the wholesale market price of such a fish. Mr. Dickinson said it cost him at least $25 and all the skin on his arms to catch that muskie.

Mr. and Mrs. Anton, Jr., November 10.

John Sinner states that the owners of the building in which the Flower Growers' Market is located are anxious to begin the alterations referred to in last week's REVIEW; all that remains is to get the market's consent to beginning work at once. The changes contemplate moving the elevators and changing the location of the stairway, giving the market more space in the center of the room, and taking something away from the corners to provide for new stairways. It is understood that the refreshment establishment which occupies a portion of the ground floor is also to take, May 1, that part occupied by the Chicago Rose Co., the latter concern being provided for in the basement, next to Vaughan & Sperry, where there may also be room for one or two others.

It is reported that N. C. Moore & Co. are figuring on rebuilding their place at Morton Grove in the spring.

Wagner Bros., on South Water street, are making preparations to go into the green wreathing and holly business more extensively this year than heretofore, and they have been pushing out for florists' trade rather industriously the last few years.

F. F. Benthey says the Frederick Benthey establishment at New Castle last week cut the largest crop of roses in its history, especially of Bride.

Fred Klingel has been on the sick list the last few days.

Leonard Koehler is the latest addition to the staff of Kyle & Foerster, where increasing receipts are keeping everybody busy.

The Florists' Club will hold an adjourned meeting at the Union restaurant November 18. Candidates for election are George Reid, Elmhurst, Ill., and Ed Assa, of Bowmanville.

O. P. Bassett leaves November 18 for Pasadena, where he will spend the winter. He is taking his automobile and his chauffeur with him.

John Poehlmann, president of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., says there is no truth whatever in the report current in the market this week that the concern is considering the opening of a branch wholesale house in some other city. He says such an idea never had suggested itself to the members of the company.

Peter Reinberg has been at Flora, Ill., for several days, shooting with a couple of neighbors.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society has been called for Friday afternoon, November 19, to settle up flower show matters.

C. W. McKellar has been receiving Paper White narcissi for nearly a week and says they are selling well.

John Enders has been presented with a handsome Masonic ring by the members of the Wholesalers' Employees' Club, in recognition of his good work in behalf of the recent annual ball.

L. Baumann & Co. are doing a large amount of decorating for the big land show which opens at the Coliseum, Saturday, November 20.

Among the week's visitors have been E. D. Lauterbach, Bushnell, Ill., and William Fenger, Toledo.

Arthur Lawson, who is one of the most popular clerks in the retail store of A. Lange, at 44 East Madison street, was married, November 10, to Emma Augusta Carlson. The young couple are at home to their friends at 6011 South Morgan street.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Almost summer weather is not exactly what is wanted at this season. However, it is what we have been having and the trade is not nearly so bad as it might be under the circumstances.

Chrysanthemums have been coming in an avalanche—not many of the extra large ones, but medium and small ones in quantities that sent prices down a-flying. Roses also have been coming in quantities that make one fear for the cut when the dark weather hits us. Carnations are more plentiful and prices correspondingly lower. Violets are good and more plentiful; just about enough for the demand. Beauties are good and there are enough of them, and the quantities of other stock keep the prices down. Lilies are suffering on account of chrysanthemums, but good valley finds a ready sale. The only shortage seems to be in good Sprengeri.

With such quantities of stock to dispose of, the commission houses have plenty to do, and I believe they generally report business good, stating that notwithstanding the drop in prices, the volume of sales is considerably ahead of last year.

The retail shops are really beautiful, the showy flowers helping to make a grand display.

Various Notes.

A. W. Smith, in his new store of many windows, last week used autumn foliage and chrysanthemums with such fine effect as to attract a great deal of attention.

Mrs. E. A. Williams' large show window has been a study for an artist all the week, but the artist would have to be busy to paint a picture of it, as it was entirely different every day.

The Breitenstein Co. had baskets of flowers as the principal feature, using the small single varieties arranged in Mr. Breitenstein's own way, in which there is a charm one cannot just describe.

The downtown store of H. L. Blind & Bros. showed some of the novelties in new china, with vases of chrysanthemums and plants.

In the east end, Randolph & McClements, the Zieger Co. and H. L. Blind &

Bros., with their large plate glass fronts and conservatories attached, which are really a part of their store rooms, made every day exhibitions which might have been justly entitled to the name "flower shows."

The Carnation Society committee met at the Fort Pitt hotel on Thursday evening, with fairly good reports. A good portion of the money is in sight, and the reception committee notified the finance committee to keep busy, as they are making large plans and do not want to be stinted for cash. All in all, President Burki went home feeling that where there was so much enthusiasm and every member of every committee present, there would not be much trouble for him.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The unusually warm weather of last week affected the market in general, although trade conditions have been good. The wholesale houses report a good and steady call for chrysanthemums, with prices averaging a little above last year's; that is, good blooms have sold out readily every day. Of course as this is the height of their season, and warm weather is bringing in double the quantity of flowers, it is readily seen that some poor stock had to be sold cheaply. Bonnaffon, Maud Dean, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Chadwick, Ivory and Golden Age are the leading varieties coming in. Carnations of good quality are now more plentiful and meet with a steady demand. Roses are in full supply, with moderate call. Violets arrived in large quantities. Valley is sufficient to fill orders. All kinds of green goods are equal to the demand.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held November 13 at J. A. Peterson's place in Westwood. The attendance was not so large as was expected, but considerable interest was manifested and much business transacted. The various committees brought in their reports and the auditing committee reported that they found the books of the finance committee from the convention O. K. The money left over will amount to nearly $1,600, which will be set aside as a special reserve fund, to be used for a flower show. The question of a chrysanthemum show in 1910 came up and, judging from indications, nearly all present were in favor of starting a movement in that direction. A committee of three was appointed to map out ways and means of starting a bowling club, only members of the society being eligible.

After the routine business was transacted Mrs. Peterson invited the boys to a lunch and it is needless to say everyone enjoyed it to the full extent. A vote of thanks was given Mr. and Mrs. Peterson for their hospitality.

About fifteen members of the society took a stroll through the greenhouses of Mr. Peterson, the local home of Gloire de Lorraine. This place has been long famed for the excellence of the stock and there is every prospect that this season will be a money-maker. Four houses of Lorraine in various sizes, from 4-inch to 8-inch pans, are a sight worth seeing. Several sports and seedlings, among them Pres. Taft and Gloire de Cincinnati, made a grand showing. Both are of more robust growth and have larger blooms. A house of cyclamens ranging from 6-inch to 8-inch pots, well advanced in bloom, show the hand of good culture. One house of Adiantum Farleyense was well done, as was Dracæna Victoria and Pandanus Veitchii; in fact, everything on the place showed that men of experience have bestowed their best talent in growing this stock.

H. Schwarz.

The owners of the property at 110 to 114 East Fourth street, part of which is occupied by Robert Kelly, are planning to make extensive improvements in the building. The improvements, it is said, will include new store fronts of a modern type, which will make the building one of the most attractive in the square. Mr. Kelly has been offered the opportunity of taking a long lease on the part of the premises he is using.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co. is beginning the fall season with a stock of 20,000 carnations, 4,500 violets and 15,000 chrysanthemums, and has also doubled its capacity in roses. In addition to the flowers, it has about three acres under glass planted to lettuce and an acre to cucumbers. Some space is given to tomatoes, but this is in the nature of an experiment.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

The Daily News, of this city, says the blue rose is a more important discovery than the north pole and adds:

"While the scientists have given us a new rose, the practical florists must give it to the public. Wherever the blue rose was born, its home will be Springfield, O., for here clustered together are the already famous rose growers who, with their vast facilities for growing and distributing, give this point the acknowledged name of being the largest rose-producing center in the world.

"Where does California get the roses which bloom there as nowhere else? Ask anyone from the homes fairly hidden with its flowers. Oh, yes, Springfield, O. Where does the south get its roses? Ask the southern dealers, and their reply, giving the staggering quantity of their purchases at Springfield, would easily stamp the source of supply as the manufacturing center.

"And so it is in the land of the rose, be it California, Florida, Texas, or any other spot; they all depend on Springfield, O., for the practical side of plant producing. So vast has the rose industry grown that it is no longer a growing of plants as in the old days; it is a huge manufacturing of them, in huge establishments where hundreds of thousands of plants are grown side by side, under the careful guidance of the expert rosarian."

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Indian summer is delightful and New York is fast becoming a favorite winter resort, in competition with Florida and Bermuda, but all this is bad for the cut flower business. The nurserymen are much delighted, for they have not had an inch of frost to combat, the bulb and seedsmen continue to ship and are so busy that they have to sit up nights, but the cut flower market is flooded and running over. The biggest godsend that could come to it would be a good freeze.

Chrysanthemums and roses are having a hard road to travel. Perfect though they are, values proportionate with the cost of growing them seem impossible. The volume of arrivals is enormous. Mums worth 25 cents go at 10 cents. Roses by the box do not average $1 per hundred, extras and specials included. Debarred, as in the last years, from large shipments to adjoining cities, New York is largely thrown upon its own resources and must make its market within a restricted radius within the big city itself. Therefore the growth of its retail element is looked upon with abundant favor, and the hope is this may so increase that the metropolis can profitably absorb every good flower daily that knocks at its open door.

Easter lilies do not bring Easter prices. The tendency is down again. Valley holds well and the November weddings are many. Orchids are up and staying there. The demand is wide and the outside call must be in advance to

Armadillo Baskets

THE HIT OF THE SEASON

Something new and unique for florists. They make novel flower and hanging plant baskets. Are well prepared and guaranteed waterproof. These baskets are made in (4) four different styles and sizes. The price ranges from 60c and up for jobbers. The plain basket makes a unique novelty for a gift, very strong and durable. They are made from the horned shell of the Armadillo.

WHAT IS AN ARMADILLO? A most curious and interesting animal, captured in the mountains of West Texas and Old Mexico. In freedom it makes its nest about six feet under ground; sleeping during the day, it ventures out at night. Its shell or armor is fashioned into the oddest and most curious baskets ever known. I have no agents and therefore am able to give you my lowest quotations. Ship goods direct to all parts of North America. Write for catalogue and prices, special terms to jobbers.

CHAS. APELT, Comfort, Texas (The Home of the Armadillo). Dealer in Texas and Mexican Curiosities. My Specialty is the Waterproof Plant Basket.

be heard, for the city takes about all that are arriving. The two big opera houses and the new theater are all crowded nightly with the four hundred and they are wearing orchids and gardenias.

Between football games and the horse show the modest violets sat up some last week and took notice. They are back again this week, however, to a lower standard.

Carnations are not able yet to get above $2 per hundred, and thousands go at half that figure.

The frost must come upon the pumpkin quickly if we are to have a real Thanksgiving. We look for a change for the better during the coming week and a steady and profitable condition in all departments of the cut flower industry thereafter until Christmas.

Various Notes.

The import trade this fall is enormous. As an illustration, last week McHutchison & Co. received 593 cases, 406 cases of valley and twelve cases of plants from Germany, and 165 cases of plants from Holland.

J. H. Small & Sons had a vase of President Taft roses last week in their Broadway window, a brilliant pink.

The prize mums still come in from C. H. Totty's Madison range and maintain their high-water mark. But these are few, when compared with the great river of medium and cheap flowers.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly session November 16, and is planning for another smoker in the near future. The belief seems to be well founded that the prominent retailers will not let another such opportunity for profitable publicity pass as the flower show in the Museum of Natural History, without taking advantage of it.

William Wells, who has been a guest of C. H. Totty for several weeks, sailed for home Wednesday, November 17, on the Lusitania. He is a most genial gentleman and has made a host of friends.

The traveling representatives of Ralph M. Ward & Co. are leaving this week on their fall trips, which will cover the entire country.

The downtown seedsmen vie with each other in attractive window decorations. Stumpp & Walter Co., with blooms, and J. M. Thorburn & Co., with vegetables, manage to hold up pedestrians constantly. Mayor Stumpp has had some of the prize mum blooms of the big shows in his windows.

One of the prettiest windows of Fifth avenue last week was that of Thomas Young, Jr., with decorations appropriate to the horse show, including a panel with three horses' heads.

The auction sales will not go beyond November. Just now the big importations of palms, boxwood and evergreens are being disposed of and the audiences every Tuesday and Friday continue large.

Tuesday evening, November 16, at the Astoria Bowling Club was ladies' night. Supper was served at 6 o'clock and prizes were awarded and a good time

The regular monthly meeting of the Horticultural Society took place at the American Museum of Natural History November 10. In the absence of the president, Patrick O'Mara acted as chairman during the business portion of the meeting. It is desired next fall to give an exhibition larger than the one just closed, and to carry this through successfully it is necessary to increase considerably the membership of the society. At the conclusion of the business meeting a paper by W. H. Waite, one of the most successful growers of the chrysanthemum, was read.

George L. Freeman, Holyoke, Mass., reached New York November 12 in company with John F. Murphy, on his way home from a trip into South America, collecting orchids, of which he brought back more than 4,000 pieces. While in New York Mr. Freeman fell into the hands of a reporter for the Evening Post, who made so readable a story of his adventures that it occupied a full column of the front page and carried over more than a column inside.

WOODBURY, N. J.—The boiler room and packing house on the truck farm of Lewis C. Duncan, near this city, were recently destroyed by fire, and one of the greenhouses was also badly damaged. About $2,000 worth of vegetables was ruined and the total loss was estimated at $5,000. Mr. Duncan was temporarily prostrated by the nervous strain.

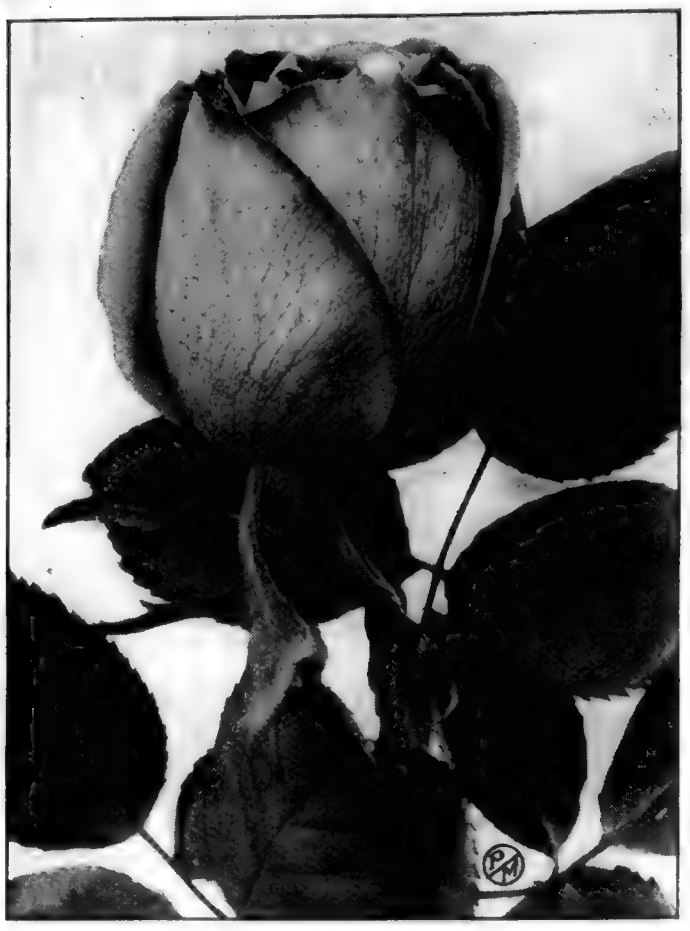
The Rising Eastern Market.

Negare non potest quin that the market is in bad shape. Perhaps the Latin show names have gone to my head, or perhaps it is the conditions; anyway it's so. The extraordinarily warm weather prevailing until nearly the end of the week closing November 17, combined with the height of the chrysanthemum season, has brought into bloom an immense quantity of cut flowers of all descriptions, far in excess of the demand. The market, which had been so good earlier in the fall, fell away badly, prices receding to a point almost beyond the endurance of the wholesalers and growers. The business is largely in chrysanthemums at prices showing a wide range, from $4 a dozen for a few fancies and novelties to 4 cents apiece for ordinary stock. It is a significant fact that the street men have purchased chrysanthemums at $10, $12 and in at least one instance $15 a hundred, using them in quantities; these figures were all the stock was worth, all any retailer would have paid for them, and suggest possibilities that the retailers cannot afford to ignore.

The Beauty market advanced for a single day and then fell back in sympathy with the other roses and the absence of special demand. Killarney and My Maryland were so largely overdone that the prices were the worst of the season, quality considered. This was true of all other varieties, Richmond being less favored than pink and white.

Carnations of quality sold well in limited quantities but, excepting now and then, it is hard to find a market for many of them at satisfactory prices. Violets are exceptionally fine and a good many are sold but, like everything else, the warm weather is bringing forward an immense crop. Cattleyas are so scarce the price is advancing. Valley is selling pretty well when nice. The other flowers in the list are as wall flowers, watching the queen of autumn keep time to the music.

The Cheerful Side.



The wholesale flower market was so full of woe that Phil decided to spend a half hour with one of the retailers to see whether anything was being done to help matters. The choice fell on Fred Ehret, because Phil remembered that in the dull month of July Mr. Ehret had been able to meet expenses, no small achievement for a Quaker City retailer in midsummer.

Fred Ehret was so cheerful that it augured well. Mrs. Ehret was busy making up; another good sign. There was a funeral spray of Golden Gate and valley, and a bunch of Killarney for a more cheerful occasion, I think, in which three shades of this popular Irish rose had been effectively combined.

When asked regarding business Mr. Ehret produced a couple of hundred long-stemmed Killarney, asked his visitor what they were worth, nodded approbation at the price named, and then spoke the buying price, which was not higher—no, by no means—and added the selling price, remarking pleasantly: "That leaves a fair margin of profit." This seemed to show that the retailer, at least, is having some fun now.

Mr. Ehret showed me many pretty things: pot chrysanthemums exceedingly well grown, pretty window-boxes, birch bark fern boxes, some pottery ornamented with raised pictures (Mr. Ehret said they were Bible stories), and when Phil passed on to palms to avoid showing his ignorance Mr. Ehret smilingly remarked: "You care more for flowers." That pair of kentias really were superb, they have formed the background for many a happy couple and will for many more, as they actually improve month by month in their favored home about midway between the Floral Arcadia and Fourteen-seven, or just where Mr. Ehret's two stores join.

As his visitor departed Mr. Ehret said pleasantly: "The grower has the best end of it, because he brings his flowers here and then just comes and collects the money, while we have to sell them." Mrs. Ehret said that was so.

A Popular Flower Show.

When Oglesby Paul became landscape gardener of Fairmount park, he inaugurated some new ideas that he believed would appeal to the people. One of the most important of these changes, was the annual chrysanthemum show. Before Mr. Paul's day, visitors to Horticultural hall could see chrysanthemums during the autumn, fine ones too, but they had to look for them, no especial effort being made at display. Since the shows have been made a yearly feature, the east, or Schuylkill river end of the hall, has been set apart for them, and there all that is worth seeing in chrysanthemums is gathered and displayed to the best advantage. The prevailing idea in the park show is effect. This idea has been improved, year by year, until today it has reached a point never before seen in Philadelphia. An artistic triumph has been achieved, of which Charles Baxter or George Rausch might well be proud.

The south end of the show room is banked in pink chrysanthemums shading to white beyond, with an occasional plant of another color by way of contrast. The effect of this beautifully graded bank of color is superb, thirty feet wide, twelve or fifteen feet high, sloping gradually, not a bloom out of place, one even sheet of medium size well-colored flowers fringed with green. The north end bank is of gold and bronze. The same width, not quite so deep as the south end, a more abrupt slope permissible with the bolder color. The red of Cullingfordi and a few whites complete the artist's daring scheme. Between these banks of color, beds are laid out as of a Japanese garden, the smaller flowers in yellow and white rising daintily from their leafy beds, while the larger stand out boldly, in groups, from pedestals at curves and corners. The practical side is demonstrated by the free use of aspidistras defining the paths, their leathery foliage bidding defiance alike to skirts and trousers.

An immense throng visited the park on the opening day of the show, a throng so great as to require all the efforts of an additional force of gray coated guards to "Keep moving, please," strongly attesting the great popularity of the park show.

I wish to doff my hat, with admiring respect, to every man who contributed with brain or brawn to a show that will do so much to elevate popular taste in plants and flowers.

Will that do, Xavier?

Various Notes.

The attendance at the show was the largest on the second day, November 10.

The Moore-Livingston Co. exhibited its plant stands at the show last week.

Some improvement is now noticeable in cut flower conditions. The number of chrysanthemums arriving is declining a little, growers probably having decided to hold as many as possible for Thanksgiving trade, owing to prevailing low prices. Chrysanthemums are the hardest flowers to move, but the present week should see the end of the congestion. Roses, which have been selling at low prices hitherto, this month are taking on more life. The quality of these is steadily improving. Carnations, while still in oversupply, are cleaning up better, with a slight hardening tendency. Violets are abundant and there is little change in prices. Thanks to the prevailing mild weather, they are selling quite well.

Small lots of Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths are coming from several growers, but the demand for this stock is not brisk as yet. Lilies and callas are both of fine quality. Lily of the valley meets with a fairly steady sale. There is still an abundant supply of seasonable orchid flowers and a fair lot of gardenias. Bouvardia Humboldtii is coming of good quality. Green stock remains about the same. In pot plants there is more activity, Lorraine begonias, palms and ferns being chiefly in demand.

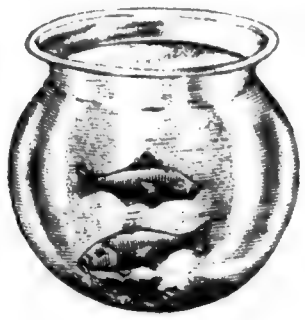
Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held, November 13, at Horticultural hall. The sum of $9,000 was appropriated for prizes and gratuities at the exhibitions to be held during 1910; of this sum, $5,000 is for the big orchid show scheduled for the latter part of May. There was no opposition to the ticket presented by the nominating committee and the following officers were elected: President, Stephen M. Weld; vice-president, Walter Hunnewell; trustees for three years, W. N. Craig, A. F. Estabrook, J. K. M. L. Farquhar and N. T. Kidder; nominating committee for 1910, Charles H. Breck, Duncan Finlayson, H. F. Hall, C. S. Minot and Herbert W. Rawson.

Club Meeting.

The meeting, November 16, was one of the largest the club has yet held. A number of ladies were present, the attendance approximating 200. The amendment to the by-laws, providing for life memberships, was voted down.

Officers for 1910 were nominated as follows: For president, W. Downs, J. W. Duncan; vice-president, D. Finlayson, W. J. Kennedy, Peter Miller; treasurer, Edw. Hatch; secretary, W. N. Craig; executive committee, J. Heurlin, R. W. Curtis, W. E. Fischer, P. Fisher, H. A. Stevens, J. P. A. Guerineau, T. Pegler, Chas. Holbrow, H. E. Fiske, C. J. Harvey, G. W. Butterworth.



The speaker of the evening was Miss L. L. Hetzer, of Groton, Mass., one of the few lady members of the club, who spoke interestingly on a trip to Europe via the Azores and the various horticultural sights seen. At the public gardens in the Azores, the vegetation was quite tropical; lofty palms, roses resembling trees in height and spread, camellias and magnolias were noteworthy. All carried splendid dark green foliage. At Gibraltar, the public gardens, laid out in terraces on the hillside and shaded by the picturesque umbrella pine, Pinus Pinea, were full of interest. Huge cork trees, Quercus Ilex, were used as street trees, while the hillsides were golden with Scotch broom. In southern Italy, gardening and farming methods seem crude, but nature helped where man lacked. In sandy soil rosemary and lavender grow five to six feet high. Sweet alyssum, snapdragons and scabiosa were familiar roadside flowers. The finest hedges were of Laurus nobilis. The street trees were kept low and interlaced to shade the walks fully. Evergreen privets made handsome shade trees. Among fruits, cherries were marvelous in size, resembling crabapples and of superb flavor. Ivy-leaved geraniums hung in perfect cascades over walls and from windows.

The forests of Germany were a revelation, absolutely clear of all underbrush, every trunk straight and free from all dead wood, a model for America to copy from. Switzerland is a veritable paradise of flowers, especially above the timber line, where they simply carpeted the ground everywhere.

England was truly a land of luxuriant vegetation. Owing to a damp summer, everything was a dark green color. Trees carried such a wealth of foliage that New England trees seemed bare by comparison, although here we get glorious autumnal tints unknown there. The various nurseries visited all gave one the impression that they were private estates, so beautifully are they kept. At Veitch's branch nursery, at Slough, hardy roses were fine, the Lyon, of a charming coppery pink color, being one of the best. At the extensive Dickson's Nurseries, in Chester, among other noteworthy roses, the new race of Irish singles were fine, the best being a yellow variety named Modesty.

Eaton Hall, near Chester, the palatial and finely kept estate of the Duke of Westminster, was visited and here endless fine specimen trees, both deciduous and evergreen, were seen. Among rambler roses, Hiawatha and Dorothy Perkins, both as standards and climbers, were seen. A hedge, ten feet high, of the last named had just finished blooming August 27. The extensive greenhouses were beautifully kept. Borders of hardy perennials were fine and well planted as to color, one of yellow and white with occasional touches of lavender being charming, with perfectly grown and clipped yew hedges forming a background for each of them. Clematis paniculata and C. Jackmani, growing and flowering together, made a pretty combination.

At Lovens Hall, in Westmoreland, the splendid old topiary garden planted in 1688, was well worthy of a visit. Here and elsewhere, throughout the beautiful English lake region, were many fine specimen beeches, oaks, araucarias and other trees. Arabis albida flore pleno at a Windermere nursery, hanging over the walls and blooming the last of August, made a pretty picture.

A rising vote of thanks was tendered Miss Hetzer for her excellent paper, and the wish was expressed, that while she was the first lady lecturer the club has had, others, it was hoped, would follow.

It was announced that at the January meeting, E. H. Wilson, the noted plant collector, would deliver a stereopticon lecture on "Plant Collecting and the Flora of Western China." A letter from F. R. Pierson was read, asking the club to send a committee of three, to coöperate with the S. A. F. and other committees, for the national spring show of 1911. The committee named is Welch, T. Roland and D. Finlayson.

There were many exhibits.

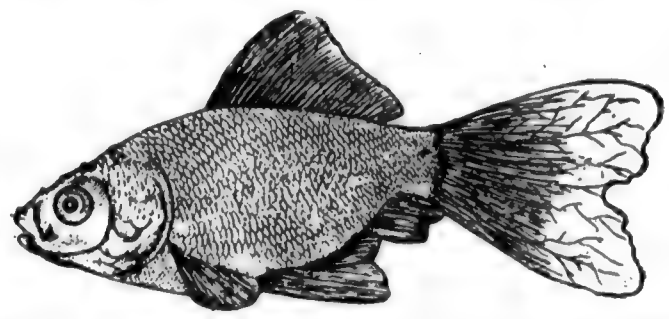
Various Notes.

President F. R. Pierson, of the S. A. F., has called a meeting for November 19 of the committee appointed to carry out the details of the proposed national show in Boston in the spring of 1911. Committees from the wholesale flower markets, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and Gardeners' and Florists' Club have been invited to attend, and it is hoped to start preliminary work at once.

The new icechest at the Park street market is now in service. It covers 500 square feet of space. One part is allotted to roses, the balance to other flowers.



Penn Bros., on Bromfield street, always have their big show window attractively arranged. They make a specialty of violets, which they handle in large quantities. At present they are using a variety of orchids and chrysanthemums for window adornment.

The Bay State Nurseries have had a heavy fall trade for nursery stock, evergreens in particular being disposed of in large quantities.

Peirce Bros. at present are handling large quantities of chrysanthemums of

The Market.

Business last week was nothing to brag about. Several fair-sized decorations, with a little funeral work, helped a little, but not enough to call for any overtime. Flowers are plentiful, especially chrysanthemums, which can be bought at your own price at the flower market. The weather still continues warm and there will be no relief until the cold weather arrives.

Various Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana was held in the Horticultural rooms at the State House Tuesday, November 9. The meeting was well attended, there being a number of out-of-town florists present. A number of vases of seedling mums and carnations were shown, some of which showed considerable "class." Roepke & Rieman staged a vase of about one dozen first-year seedlings, among them being an incurved pink seedling about the color of Chamberlain, that looked good, also a large white exhibition bloom about eight inches in diameter that attracted considerable attention. It is pretty hard to judge these blooms, owing to their being first-year seedlings, but no doubt there are some good ones in the lot. H. W. Rieman had several vases of pink and white mum seedlings, all of which were good. He also had a number of vases of carnations, among them a dark crimson, a Lawson pink and a rose-pink. Baur & Smith had a number of vases of carnations, among them being a white seedling, No. 666, of the third year from White Perfection blood, but a freer bloomer and a larger flower, and a scarlet, No. 507, a cross between Robert Craig and Victory, with a shade intermediate. Mr. Baur says the latter has the faults of neither and the good qualities of both. This should be a winner. They also had a purple, No. 319, which was good for a purple. This firm also had a vase of their new white carnation, Shasta, on exhibition, which they cannot praise enough. Mr. Baur says each plant produced two flowers for October and the buds are getting more numerous every day.

John Elsner has a pink seedling pot mum which he thinks is the best yet.

The Market.

Indian summer has been experienced in this city and vicinity with a vengeance during the last week. November 13 the thermometer broke the record for this season of the year, going up to 78. There is almost a glut of chrysanthemums, and they are soft and do not stand up as well as usual. Prices are low and stock moves with an apathy that is discouraging. With a fall in temperature prices will harden, blooms will be better and by Thanksgiving it is expected that conditions will be normal.

Roses, carnations and violets hold well, but there is a growing demand for novelties, although local growers seem loath to branch out, and few appear to take kindly to going into anything except the standard stock.

Various Notes.

Thomas Curley has had a large force of men at work putting the State House grounds into condition for the winter.

Charles Coon, superintendent of Wilcox park, at Westerly, is making rapid advance in his recovery from a recent severe sickness.

Walter Nichols, of Hampden Meadows, is sending in some fine carnations of good size, long stems and solid colors.

M. Pollock was busy the past week on funeral orders.

The Hogg greenhouses, Theodore R. Peterson manager, had the decoration in hand for ladies' night at the West Side club, Wednesday evening, November 10.

Secretary John C. Dunn, of the State Board of Agriculture, has returned from Raleigh, N. C., where he represented Rhode Island at the National Farmers' Congress.

The death of Elmer Parmenter, which occurred as the result of a collision between an automobile and a trolley car at the junction of Hope and Seventh streets, November 2, when Mr. Parmenter was a passenger in the automobile, is being investigated by the coroner.

At the funeral of Mrs. Peter Collier, at St. Stephen's church, November 13, the display of floral pieces was unusually large. T. O'Connor, Johnston Bros. and the T. J. Johnston Co. furnished numerous pieces each.

Nathan D. Pierce, of Norwood, is driven with orders for nursery stock, as well as ferns of all kinds. A few days ago he employed a neighbor to do some plowing with a pair of horses. The following morning one horse died and later in the day the second. An investigation is being made concerning the incident.

PHILADELPHIA SHOW.

where the botanist lingered over his tiny specialties, in the smallest pots made.

The end of the hall, against the grand stairway, contained some fine stock. The specimen plants included a Dracæna Sanderiana, rarely seen among the big fellows. John W. McIntyre had a pretty table containing a vase each of French white lilacs, yellow daisies, double violets and lavender sweet peas. Farther on, the same exhibitor had pink and white sweet peas, large blooms on long stems. Beside this, the Robert Craig Co. had a specimen pan, of great size, of Lorraine begonia, Lonsdale type, exceedingly well grown.

The varieties of chrysanthemums grown as specimen plants, and placed in the center of the hall, showed little change from previous years. The Cockerhill prizes keep the pompon varieties alive, while such good old-timers as George W. Childs, Merza, Col. Appleton, Mrs. Weeks, etc., still reign. The novelties in this class are two groups of the single flowered varieties of the anemone type. To me these groups recall exquisitely colored Cineraria stellata, in their masses of bloom.

The foyer was filled with specimen ferns and foliage plants from the finest suburban greenhouses, plants that could not be duplicated here in many years. After going carefully over this section I wrote down the names of six wonderful ferns grown by Thomas Long, as most worthy of record, but on reflection the names are omitted, as it is the grower, rather than the varieties, that is responsible for the result, and few if any of us can hope to produce such stock. The same exhibitor brought a new nephrolepis, said to be the only plant of this variety in the country. It is called N. exaltata superba and may be briefly described as a plumed Boston. This fern received the society's silver medal.

The cream of the exhibition staged between the main hall and the foyer was the cut blooms of chrysanthemums. The competition was intense here, and such flowers are worth traveling miles to see—perfect in color, form and foliage, of immense size and held erect on stout stems.

The class for fifty blooms, ten varieties of five each, brought out: Charles Totty, bronze red; Dr. Enguehard, pink; General Hutton, yellow; Mrs. Wm. Duckham, yellow; Lynnwood Hall, white; Miss May Frick, white; Mrs. J. C. Neil, yellow; Morton F. Plant, rose-pink; Wm. Duckham, pink, and Mary Donnellan, orange.

The blue ribbon in the class for six varieties of five each was carried off by Merza, white; Mary Mason, pink; Cheltoni, lemon yellow; Beatrice May, white; Glenview, bronze red, and Mrs. Wm. Duckham, yellow. Among the other varieties of unusual merit were Mrs. F. B. Vallis, yellow; Reginald Vallis, rose red; Mrs. F. Partridge, red, and Merstham, crimson.

Opposite these fancy blooms was a table filled by four or five exhibitors with hardy chrysanthemums. One exhibit, possibly the smallest, was of unwonted interest, recalling, as it did, a one-time large exhibitor who saved his family's name at the price of fortune. Before leaving this section, let me add that Mrs. J. C. Neil was crowned the finest flower in the exhibition, and that William Kleinheinz and William Robertson, with many more, covered themselves with glory.

Downstairs, on the left of the stairway, Henry A. Dreer had lawn grasses prettily arranged. William Robertson captured a certificate of merit with a pure white sport from Cheltoni. The Henry F. Michell Co. displayed its bulbs electrically, enhanced with an art that spoke plainly of Philip Freud. Opposite, the Scientific Sprayer Co. displayed compounds that tree-borers consider of unrivaled nastiness. Henry F. Fitzgerald, from the firm's laboratory, was in charge.

In the lower hall Thomas Meehan & Sons had a table of hardy pompons of the best varieties. Edward Matthews was in charge of this exhibit. In the center of their table was a silver cup which they offered for the best collection of pompons; it was won by Wm. Robertson. Next came the brilliant Israel Rosnosky, in charge of Henry F. Michell Co.'s exhibit of every requisite.

Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., had 100 varieties of pompons, a beautiful collection, probably twenty-five of them their own seedlings, including No. 45, shell pink; No. 7, yellow, fringed apricot, and No. 51, yellow anemone. Charles A. Goudy, of Henry F. Michell Co., was in charge.

A choice collection of hardy chrysanthemums from Henry A. Dreer came next, the table being finished with the cactus exhibit brought over by Mr. Eisele and here shown for the first time. The same exhibitors had a full line of gardeners' necessaries close by, embellished by mammoth pumpkins with the name of each variety cut in the fruit while growing. John S. Hay was in charge.

Hosea Waterer followed with mushroom spawn and bulbs of quality, in variety. Alexander Telloch had charge.

The rose table showed a striking contrast. Four vases of American Beauties from four leading gardeners stood guard over a tiny vase of Harry Kirk roses grown in the open air by the famous Dr. Robert A. Huey. Just think of it! Fine buds in November!

Dorothy Gordon, from the Joseph Heacock Co., was queen of the carnation exhibit, which included some twenty vases of the best standard varieties, of unusual grade, William Stern assured me, for this season of the year.

The vegetable displays for the Burpee, Dreer and Michell prizes were excellent. An improvement is shown in the fuller exhibits, due to the larger number of varieties called for in each class.

MUMS FOR EXHIBITION.

are full of roots, lightly at first, with liquid cow manure for a week or two, and gradually increasing the amount from an 8-inch potful of cow manure in fifty gallons of water to half a bushel in the same amount of water, together with a 4-inch potful of Clay's fertilizer or Ichthemic guano with a little soot added. Those ingredients are all put into a barrel, allowed to stand for a day, the whole stirred up and passed through a fine screen into another barrel, using a Kinney pump for watering, which will regulate the strength of the mixture as desired. Nitrate of soda and sulphate of ammonia is used occasionally at the rate of a 4-inch potful in fifty gallons of water, along with other manures at the same time, changing from liquids to dry chemicals about once in two weeks, giving each plant a heaping teaspoonful of either Clay's fertilizer or Ichthemic guano and watering it in. After the buds are all secured, feeding again is continued in moderation until the buds begin to show color.

In about a month or six weeks after the plants get their final shift the roots will appear on the surface. They are then given a top dressing of loam and Clay's fertilizer at the rate of ten of loam to one of the fertilizer; in from two to three weeks the roots will again appear, when they are treated as before with loam and fertilizer in the same proportions, and toward the middle of August they get a mulch of well rotted horse manure.

Spraying and Fumigating.

The plants are syringed twice daily when the weather is favorable, about ten in the morning and again about three in the afternoon, so that the foliage will get dry before night. In addition to the plants being syringed on very bright days the exterior of the house is frequently sprayed over, to assist in reducing the temperature, and about every two weeks the plants are syringed with soot water.

The house is fumigated with cyanide of potassium about three times a month, for the prevention of insects, such as green fly, black fly, etc., at the rate of two ounces of cyanide, four ounces of commercial sulphuric acid and twelve ounces of water for a house 30x50 feet.

Arrangements for the Best Growth.

When the plants get their final shift into 8-inch pots they are arranged in position on the benches where they are to remain for the rest of the season, and a galvanized wire stake is placed in each pot for supporting the plants, these stakes firmly secured to overhead wires running lengthwise of the house, and the plants given plenty of room in the rows for the free admission of light and air.

When a majority of the plants begin to show color a light shading is put on the glass, using whiting for the purpose, which is easily removed. Should a dull spell of weather set in, the night temperature is maintained at from 45 to 50 degrees, with a free circulation of air to dispel dampness, by leaving a small opening on both top and bottom ventilators and using fire heat when necessary to keep up the required temperature.

Any plants that require to be watered are attended to in the morning, so that the house will be as dry as possible before night.

Recapitulation.

It is evident to me that in order to be successful in the cultivation of the chrysanthemum for exhibition, perfect familiarity with the different varieties is essential.

The grower should know his plants, study their peculiarities, and observe carefully the treatment best suited for each variety.

He should also have a house adapted for their requirements and the necessary requisites at hand to carry on the work at the proper time.

His plants should never be neglected at any stage in their career, from the smallest detail to the most important part affecting their management.

He should not imagine that because one grower has been successful in one part of the country with selecting his buds at a certain time, the results will be equally satisfactory in another part by following his example. Climatic conditions vary so much in the different states throughout the country that it is necessary for the grower who would succeed to study the conditions of his own locality and note carefully the results obtained therefrom; and in time, with a fair amount of patience and perseverance, he will ultimately gain his reward.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

At the Mrs. J. C. Rogers estate, at Peabody, Mass., a special display of chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving is a feature with Superintendent C. Simpkins, who manages each year to make a grand effort for this occasion. He has Charles H. Totty's full collection of singles and regards every one as being worthy of a place. He will grow the new kinds now being introduced. A choice variety of orchids is in bloom, also Gloriosa superba, which is a pretty thing for table decorations.

J. M. Ward & Co., of Peabody, remarked that the mild weather we are now having is giving the "hookworm" to both stock and business. With the thermometer at 70 degrees in the shade, supply is soft and demand dull. They have made extensive additions to their snug place. M.

The Market.

Trade last week was good. The weather changing to cold and the first snowstorm of the season visiting us on Friday of last week, all combined to help business somewhat. Stock of all kinds is none too plentiful, roses, perhaps, being more abundant than anything else. Chrysanthemums are getting scarce, especially in white, prices are good and the outlook for them for Thanksgiving is that there will be no surplus stock.

Various Notes.

The November meeting of the Colorado Florists' Club was held in T. M. A. Hall, 1739 Champa street, Thursday evening, November 11. They will hereafter meet in that hall the second Thursday of every month. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, J. A. Valentine; vice-president, T. D. Long; secretary, A. H. Bush; treasurer, Ben Boldt; trustees, N. A. Benson, C. R. Root and J. A. Sked.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

REPORTS from both France and England indicate that the shortage in beet will be even greater than was indicated by earlier advices.

THIS is a year in which everyone seems determined to get his catalogue out earlier than ever, but in which the arrival of most imported seeds will be later than usual, thereby causing various complications.

B. H. TRACY, Wenham, Mass., says he has just finished harvesting the finest crop of gladiolus bulbs he ever has had, the season having been unusually successful, the weather conditions nearly perfect.

THE Central Seed & Bulb Co., Benton Harbor, Mich., has purchased ten acres of land and has material on the ground for a greenhouse 15x100 for propagating dahlias, etc. E. S. Thompson is the head of the concern.

FROM all the tales of shortages—and one hears little else—it might be supposed that buyers would be clambering over each other to get at the wholesalers, but the fact is the great body of the trade declines to excite itself.

PRACTICALLY all commodities are at about the highest prices ever recorded, the cost of living never was higher and the cost of doing business in the seed trade never was greater, so why shouldn't we ask for our seeds a better price than last year?

OUR British cousins have had as much trouble harvesting their seed crops as they had planting and growing them—and then some. Not in many years has England had weather so unfavorable for seed crops, and the worst of it has come at harvest time.

THE disclaimer adopted at the Rochester convention of the American Seed Trade Association, in 1901, although some American houses think it has fallen a little behind the times, has come to be employed in exact language by most of the large foreign houses.

ALL things considered, it appears that California has had, in 1909, a better season for seed crops than any other important seed producing center in the world. Planting time is again approaching and the California growers feel justified in again enlarging their operations.

ONE of the unfortunate features of these seasons of seed shortages is the temptation to which it exposes those who have sold crops in advance of harvest. Letters from Europe indicate that the strain in this direction is this year greater than ever and that it is proving too great for some of the brethren.

AT a recent meeting of the floral committee of the General Dutch Bulb Growers' Society, at Haarlem, the following awards were granted: First-class certificates to E. H. Krelage & Son, of Haarlem, for the cactus dahlias Flora, Brigadier and Debutante; award of merit to the same firm for the cactus dahlia Snowstorm.

SMALL CHECKS STILL LEGAL.

Several inquiries have reached the REVIEW regarding the "new law" that goes into effect January 1 and that many mail order people think "makes it illegal to write a check for less than $1." The law is as follows:

No person shall make, issue, circulate, or pay out any note, check, memorandum, token, or other obligation for a less sum than one dollar, intended to circulate as money or to be received or used in lieu of lawful money of the United States; and every person so offending shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than six months, or both.

Remittances for small sums should be made otherwise than by check, for in most instances the banks charge a collection fee of 10 cents, but the check for less than $1 does not come under any government ban. The law referred to is not a new one, but a reproduction of one originally enacted July 17, 1862, and which has been included in codifying the criminal code of the United States. It does not make it unlawful to issue a check for a less sum than one dollar except it be "intended to circulate as money or to be received or used in lieu of lawful money of the United States." Personal checks are not intended to "circulate as money;" they merely are orders on which a certain party designated by name on the face of the check can go to the bank where the money is on deposit and get the sum called for by the order.

The purpose of the act, when originally passed in 1862, at a time when the government's subsidiary coin was scarce, was to put a stop to the then common practice of business houses of issuing tokens for use as change and intended "to circulate as money" until presented for redemption in merchandise. The inclusion of the law in the revised statutes undoubtedly was to guard against such an issue of private "currency" sometime when our monetary system breaks down again, as it did in 1907, and clearing house checks and other forms of near-money are in fashion.

HAARLEM'S JUBILEE SHOW.

The Holland bulb growers are enthusiastic in their support of the jubilee flower show to be held at Haarlem next spring. It is well known that the show is to celebrate the half century of the General Bulb Growers' Society, and it is planned that it shall be the greatest exposition the bulb interests ever have held. Some idea of the extent of the display will be gathered from the statement that not less than 1,500 beds and borders of various shapes and dimensions have been planted this autumn, requiring the use of nearly a million bulbs. The stock used was, of course, of the best, and the conditions under which it was planted have been excellent.

A part of the grounds is laid out in the regular French style, in connection with the imposing buildings of the palace, at the north side of the grounds, and formerly belonging to King Louis Napoleon, during his short stay in Holland. The other part of the show is designed in natural landscape style, affording an opportunity for a great number of most picturesque groups and clumps of all kinds of bulbs, naturally growing at the feet of the old trees which are the pride of the Haarlem park.

The nurserymen of Boskoop and Aalsmeer and other well-known centers of the Dutch nursery trade will plant masses of conifers, yews and taxus, flowering shrubs and trees, in early spring.

IMPORTS.

expressed in percentages of a full crop, puts the bean crop at 82.5, as against 79.1 last year and the year before; clover seed at 52.4, as against 90.8 November 1, 1908, and 64.9 in 1907.

AGRICULTURAL CHEMICALS.

There is a firm tone in fertilizers in practically all lines, especially abattoir products, the south being in the market because of the high price of cottonseed meal. Packers are firm in their views as a result on both dried blood and tankage. For dried blood f. o. b. Chicago $2.70 is asked, while concentrated tankage is quoted at $2.40, futures being 5 cents higher for each succeeding month. Fish scrap, owing to the practical conclusion of the catch, is scarcer. Sulphate of ammonia is in fair demand and domestic stocks are fairly well cleaned up. Nitrate of soda is repeated at $2.10, with concessions possible, as stocks are large and the demand light.

Forcing Gladiolus

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladiolus are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose.

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $3.25 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosey crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs. 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

Gladiolus, Colvillei and Nanus (type).

Plant some of these among your carnations; they will come in handy at any time.

Peach Blossom. The most beautiful of all the Colvillei type of Gladiolus; the color is a lovely soft pink, on the order of the Killarney rose. $0.90 per 100; $8.75 per 1000.

Blushing Bride. Flowers are large, pure white, with delicate pink spot. Useful for early forcing. $0.75 per 100; $6.00 per 1000.

The Bride (Colvillei alba). This lovely white miniature Gladiolus makes a useful cut flower for early Spring use; will stand forcing. $0.65 per 100; $5.00 per 1000.

Ackermanii. Salmon-orange, with white blotches, edged scarlet; very pretty. $0.75 per 100; $6.50 per 1000.

STORING SMILAX ROOTS.

Can smilax roots be wintered in the cellar of a residence? W. F. T.

There will be no difficulty in wintering smilax roots in a residence cellar, provided the temperature is kept well above freezing and they are not allowed to get too dry.

VERBENAS FOR SPRING SALES.

Will you tell us the proper time to plant verbena seed to have them in bloom for Decoration day? Can cuttings be wintered over in coldframes if protected from heavy frosts? A. W. F. & S.

If sown from the middle to the end of March, the verbenas will be of good size and starting to flower in an average night temperature of 50 degrees. Cuttings can be successfully wintered in a coldframe if it is properly protected. A little frost will not hurt them. Dampness must, however, be guarded against. Air freely on every favorable opportunity. If shut up for several days in succession the plants will become moldy and soon rot. C. W.

Vegetable Forcing.

PROFITABLE LETTUCE CULTURE.

We are figuring on putting up an addition to our greenhouse, to grow lettuce. Having had no practical experience in growing it, we should be glad to have you give us some information. How much growing space will be required to produce 500 pounds of marketable lettuce per week? At what degree should the temperature be kept? Is there any profit at 15 cents per pound? How long after the plants are set in the bed will they be ready for market, under proper care? P. G. C.

The night temperature for lettuce should be held at about 45 degrees. In the daytime it may be run from 5 to 10 or 15 degrees warmer, depending upon how bright the day is. To get the correct temperature in the daytime it is absolutely necessary to have the thermometers facing north, with a protector around them, so that the sun's rays do not touch even the back of the thermometers. If the sun shines on an instrument it runs up the mercury so that the correct temperature is not recorded. A good protector can be made by taking a piece of a thin board about three inches wide and longer than the thermometer, for a back; then take two strips of lath, the same length, and tack them to the edge of the back piece for side protectors.

Grand Rapids lettuce can be made to pay well at the price mentioned by P. G. C.

It takes ten to twelve weeks from the date of planting the seed until lettuce is ready to market. With good care and fine weather the time covered may be only ten weeks, but if the crop is neglected or is grown in the darkest winter months, it will take twelve weeks.

As soon as the seed is up it should be transplanted into a bed, placing the plants about 1½x2 inches apart. They will be ready to transplant again to the producing house about four weeks from the day of planting the seed. If given more space when transplanting the first time, they can be left in the propagating bed longer, but must not be stunted or checked at any time.

For a continual, steady crop the area should be divided into four batches. Four greenhouses, besides a plant house for propagating, make a nice system for lettuce growing. When the first house is all cut and sold, it will be six weeks before it will have another crop ready, so each of the other three houses or batches must be large enough to furnish the supply for two weeks. No time should be lost in the replanting. During the two weeks when a lot is being marketed, the soil can be got ready to turn over and replant without a day's delay. The nice work comes in the starting of the plants. Every two weeks a new lot of seed must be planted and two batches of transplanted plants are always on hand, besides the seed just planted. When the third batch of seed is planted, the first lot is then about ready to transplant, and, unless you have room in the propagating beds for three transplanted lots, the first one must be put out soon to get out of the way of the third batch of seedlings.

As to the area necessary in order to produce the number wanted, 500 pounds per week or 1,000 pounds in two weeks, I could not say, as I have always sold by count. You can, however, find this out yourself, by weighing a few good, average heads and determining how many heads it would take to make 1,000 pounds. For the distance between plants, 6x8 inches is about right, so you can figure how many plants there will be in one of your benches, and then, again, how many benches must be in each lot in order to grow enough plants to make the 1,000 pounds cut every two weeks. H. G.

Monticello, Ind.—The Monticello Floral Co. held a formal opening of its new establishment, October 28 to 30. The building is 25x192, twenty feet being used as office and boiler-room, and the balance under glass. The plant is modern in every particular.

No Grower of Vegetables under glass can afford to do without the Wittbold system of

Watering

—because with it a boy can do as much as two men can do in a whole day with the hose—and do it better.

The system is equally valuable outdoors, and for many other crops besides vegetables—wherever you need water.

PACIFIC COAST.

Los Angeles, Cal. — The Roth-Reymond-Muller Floral Co. has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $10,000. The directors are Chas. J. Muller, Eugene H. Roth, F. B. Reymond and Regina Muller.

Loomis, Cal.—The Rowell Fruit Co. has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $50,000. The object of the new organization is to take over the business of Rowell, Day & Co., and to deal in fruits, vegetables and nursery stock. The directors are George F. Rowell, of this city, J. F. Johnson and John F. Pullen, of Sacramento.

CALIFORNIA RED BERRIES.

The trade in California red berries, from present appearances, bids fair to be larger this year than ever before. This article, which for many years was handled only in a desultory way, has of late seasons become one of the prominent factors in the florists' business.

With the coming of November and the long, cool nights the berries assume a bright red color. Where the climatic conditions are not favorable, however, the berries do not acquire that peculiar scarlet color that makes them so valuable as an adjunct to the flower trade. Where there is an excess of foggy weather the berries have a black appearance, which makes them quite unfit for selling. If grown in a situation that is too cold or windy, the berries are small and poor and have no value.

The reckless cutting of this beautiful evergreen by careless ranchers has made the supply in the immediate vicinity of towns extremely scarce, and each successive season finds it necessary to go farther and farther off the beaten trail and into the less frequented regions to get a supply.

Sharp touches of frost will interfere greatly with the proper coloring of the fruit and a few cold nights two weeks before Christmas will play great havoc with the season's supply.

Several years ago $25 per ton was considered a good price by those who handled the berries, but within the last few years double and treble these prices have been charged. G.

SEATTLE.

The Market.

Although there is a general depression readily seen in many business places owing to the unsettled condition of the people after the closing of the exposition, the last two weeks have been good ones for the florists and much satisfaction is felt in regard to the prospect for the winter's business. Moreover, stock as a whole is coming in nicely and we anticipate no trouble in this line this season. Chrysanthemums, of course, are the leaders and, although they are not overplentiful, the quality is fine; the choicest bring as high as $9 per dozen retail, with ready sales. Violets are rather good for so early and of course the supply is unlimited, as they come through nicely from California. Home-grown ones are scarce, but of far better quality. Even the poorest would make the eastern stock appear second grade, as violets are one of our strongholds here. Large fancy flowers with extra long stems are plentiful. Owing to a washout on the Northern Pacific, California stock was badly delayed last week. Orchids are arriving in quantity, to the surprise of all, and many fancy blooms are shown in the stores. Beauties are fine, while prices are moderate, ranging from $3 to $6 per dozen for the best grades. Asters and peas have gone and the only outdoor flowers are a few cactus dahlias and a few straggling Brunner roses. The indoor roses, however, are fine and show a tendency to further improve. Carnations, as usual at this period, are plentiful and the quality is fine.

Flowering plants are seen, although only a few. Cyclamen is the best bloomer and seller in evidence, but quite a few primroses are on the market.

The nurserymen are having a profitable autumn and feel encouraged with the work so far accomplished.

In the line of novelties, many pretty ones are shown, all the stores doing a large business with them. In fact, novelties of any kind are new to Seattle and the craft has just begun to realize the profits which lie in them.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Lena McCoy's new store on Third avenue is rapidly rounding into shape. Mrs. McCoy has worked in several original and unique ideas with a pleasing result.

Mrs. Stimson's new store in the Moore Theater block was opened November 9 with the customary display. This is a new venture for Mrs. Stimson and the trade all wish her well.

Sam Graff is sparing no expense to make his windows attractive.

Mr. Johnson, one of the Seattle craft, has purchased the Fremont Floral Co. of Gus Bjorkman, who is going to California to spend the winter.

Mr. Lomley, of the McCoy Co., has been in the east for some time on the lookout for pointers and novelties. Wm. Billingsley, the Indianapolis florist with this firm, has purchased twenty acres of orchard land near Wenatchee.

Walter Scott has installed a new boiler in his place this fall.

W. E. Hopkins has purchased the Auburn Nurseries and will run them in connection with his other place, the Seattle Carnation Co. Mr. Hopkins also did the "proud papa act" this week; it was another girl. J. G. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has suddenly turned colder. The excess of rain is apparently over and we are being treated to warm, bright days and clear, frosty nights. Its effect has been to make indoor stock a shade scarcer, but there has not yet been sufficient cold weather to interfere with the violets or chrysanthemums. The prices on all kinds of roses and carnations have advanced slightly, and we can look for still greater advancements in the near future. The best fancy carnations cost the retailers on an average of $3 per hundred and from that price down to $2 is the ruling rate at this time. Bride and Bridesmaid cost the stores from $2 to $4 per hundred and Beauties up to $2 per dozen. Violets are the most popular flower at this time, with the possible exception of chrysanthemums; 75 cents per dozen bunches is the ruling price for the former, and for the latter from 25 cents to 50 cents per dozen for outside stock and twice that price for hothouse-grown stock, which gives a good idea of what they are worth.

Paper White narcissi have made their appearance and sell at $1 per hundred wholesale. Orchids, principally cattleyas, are much in evidence. They are sent into town by half a dozen growers and cost the florists 60 cents each. Gladioli, dahlias, coreopsis, gaillardias and stocks have entirely disappeared for the season. Stevia has made its appearance, but will not be plentiful for a couple of weeks. Smilax is more plentiful than it has been, but maidenhair fern and asparagus are slightly scarcer.

Business in all the bay cities is not overbrisk, but shows a slight improvement over that of a year ago. Funeral trade continues to be the best source of income for the florists at present.

Various Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of the California State Floral Society was held at the home of B. E. Henriksen November 8. Several interesting papers were read and there was quite a display of hardy outside flowers.

Thomas Chisholm, a well-known nurseryman of southern California, is in town for a few days' visit.

Robert Turnbull, of Fruitvale, Cal., has been elected a member of the Alameda Forestry Commissioners.

J. P. Parker, of Santa Cruz, is shipping some fine cattleyas to the local dealers.

The Holland Nursery Co., of Elmhurst, has planted one of its large carnation houses to sweet peas for winter blooming.

P. J. Thorsted & Co. report a heavy month's trade at their new store on Market street.

A. Nauvraumont, recently connected with the May Seed Co., has opened up a business in the general seed and plant line under the name of the California Seed Co. His store is four doors west of the May Seed Co.

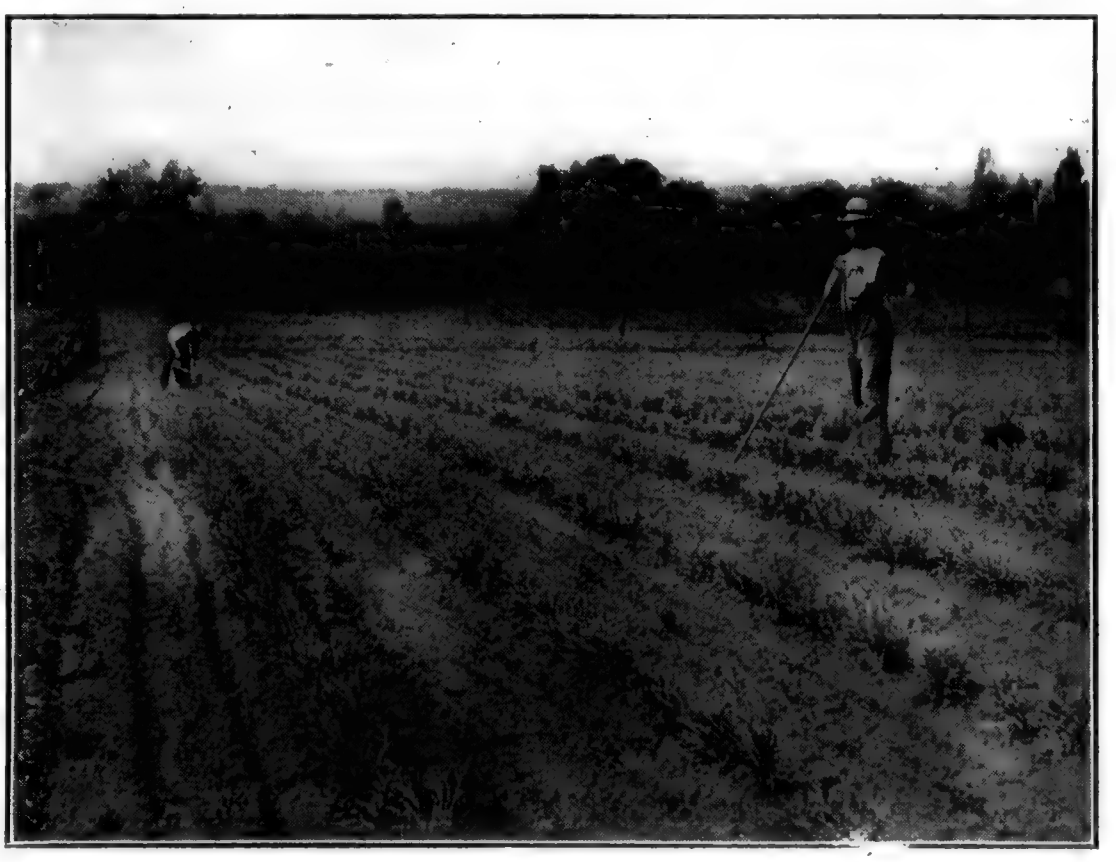
E. Gill, of West Berkeley, has purchased 100 acres at San Jose, which will be entirely devoted to the growing of roses. G.

POTTING LOQUATS.

Please tell me when to pot loquats. I planted them in flats in May. They are about four inches in height now. Shall I pot them now or wait until spring?

C. W. K.

The loquat is a tree that grows practically all the year in southern California and it is better to pot them at this time than it will be later in the season.



In a general way it is safe to say that almost all small evergreen trees and shrubs can be transplanted to better advantage when they are in a growing condition than when they are partially dormant in the late winter or early spring. If the weather is warm keep them shaded and well watered for a couple of weeks and after that there will be no trouble with them. G.

BERKELEY, CAL.

The new store which has been opened by H. M. Sanborn, at the corner of University and Shattuck avenues, is one of the most attractive florists' establishments about the bay. The building is not only new, but was fitted up expressly for Mr. Sanborn's use and is said to be one of the ornaments of the city.

On the main floor is a fountain with a colored glass canopy, and arranged around this central figure are numerous vases and receptacles of cut flowers. In the basement is an art department, where is displayed a large assortment of cut glass, hammered brass and pottery. In this department all funeral and other floral pieces are made. In the mezzanine floor are ferns, potted plants and other greens. A new feature is the addition of a landscape gardening department.

PROSPECTS IN CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco and vicinity have within the last few days been treated to several good showers of rain. Up to the first of October more than one inch of rain had fallen, which is rather unusual at this time. The effect on the grape and dried fruit industry is to be deplored, while on the nursery and flower business it is a distinct benefit. From a strictly business standpoint, it must be said to interest the prospective planter intensely, that never in the history of the local nurseries or seed stores were inquiries more general or signs of approaching trade more favorable than they have been thus far in the month of October.

In California, where we have distinctively a dry and a wet season, the public rarely gives the renewing of their gardens any consideration until after the first rains; whether they appear in September or not until late in November makes but little difference. The plant growers, consequently, have a great advantage when the season opens so early in the fall, for unless some unforeseen conditions arise there should be an unbroken line of planting from this time until late in the spring of next year.

The weather clerk has not been particularly considerate in the matter of regulating the climatic conditions for the last two seasons. Excessively dry autumns, excessively wet winter months and exeessively dry spring months have all made a combination hard to beat and trying both on the planter and the grower. With a long season, such as the one promises to be on which we are just opening, and an interested flower-loving public, the dealers, both of large and small degree, should have a banner year. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THE Stark Bros. Nurseries and Orchard Co., Louisiana, Mo., made an exhibit of apples at the St. Louis flower show November 9 to 12.

REPORTS from England are to the effect that the crop of Manetti stocks is short of anticipations and that the exporters will be compelled to cut orders.

THE Yakima Independent Nursery has been incorporated at Wapato, Yakima county, Wash., with a capital of $10,000. The incorporators are W. A. and Ethel Berg.

ACCORDING to the government statisticians the average production of apples this year is 42.5 per cent of a full crop, against 43.4 per cent in 1908, and a ten-year average of 50.9 per cent.

THE Caldwell Nursery Co. has been incorporated at Caldwell, Idaho, with a capital stock of $25,000. The incorporators are W. S. Hawkes, C. T. Hawkes, H. H. Cummins and W. R. Wilkerson.

PICEA ORIENTALIS NANA.

The specimen of Picea orientalis nana that is here illustrated is thirty-one feet in circumference and thirty-eight inches high. It was grown on the estate of Arthur Whitin, Whitinsville, Mass., where Thomas Howden is manager. It was transplanted six years ago and is now a handsome specimen. A practice Mr. Howden follows with his evergreens is to give all a thorough soaking of water before the ground freezes and later put on a mulch of old leaves. It is well known that dryness at the root causes the death of thousands of evergreens every year; far more die from this cause than from the severity of the frost. For fertilizer, bone and wood ashes are used. This tends to make the growths firm and they are thereby the better able to withstand the severe New England winters.

MEXICANS INVADE TEXAS.

Mexican nurseries are now making an effort to invade Texas. From the Department of Agriculture it is learned that there are quite a number of Mexican nurseries, or gardens as they are termed in Mexico, that want to do business in Texas. Mexico has no nursery inspection law, consequently it has become necessary for the Texas department to send over a representative to make an investigation of the nursery that wants to come into Texas, before a permit is issued. Recently the Department has received a number of inquiries from Mexican nurserymen that want to sell their product in Texas. In order that they may come in, the Department has appointed Harvey C. Stiles, of Raymondville, to proceed to Mexico and make the necessary inspection.

INSPECTOR ASKS HELP.

Commissioner of Agriculture Kone has addressed to the nurserymen, florists and dealers of Texas a letter asking them to coöperate with the department in trying to get efficient nursery inspection and to report promptly any diseases found by them among the nursery stock which are harmful. The letter follows:

To the Nurserymen, Florists and Dealers of Texas: Greetings—This department solicits the coöperation of our Texas nurserymen, florists and dealers in the control and elimination of insect pests and fungous diseases of nursery stock, and especially of propagation of stocks.

It is the purpose of this Department to make our nursery inspection law mean something. For that reason I am making this appeal, personally, to each one receiving this letter, that they carefully inspect all nursery stock received and make reports promptly to this office of any nursery stock which is not what it should be.

It is especially urged that nurserymen who buy large quantities of seedlings of apples, pears, plums, cherries, etc., should have special contracts with those from whom they buy with reference to the healthfulness of the stock shipped them, and explain to them that the stock is subject to being carefully inspected at this end.

I desire specially to ask the coöperation of all nurserymen to report on apple seedlings, first, whether infested with woolly aphis; second, bitter rot (Glomerella rufomaculens); third, black rot (Sphaeropsis malorum). These three constitute the most serious menace to the propagation of apple stock. I am determined to eliminate them as much as possible and also to ascertain what nurserymen are shipping apple seedlings that are not free from the pest and diseases named. If our nurserymen do not comply with my request and report fully on these shipments when received, I shall be compelled to consider them in default of good faith in this matter with the Department.

Please advise promptly what your disposition is in this premises. Also kindly offer such suggestions as will be for the good of the cause, to the end that the best results, the highest interest of all may be served.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The Crabb & Hunter Floral Co. and Henry J. Vinkemulder have purchased the David Robertson farm, on the Clinton road in East Grand Rapids. The farm comprises eighty-four acres, with a large frontage on Clinton avenue. Crabb & Hunter have been occupying part of the farm under lease, for greenhouse purposes, and will continue so to use it. Mr. Vinkemulder will make a suburban home of his share of the property. The purchase price was about $300 an acre.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The market is well supplied at present. Roses are plentiful and good carnations are rather scarce, but the quality is improving. Chrysanthemums are satisfactory in both quantity and quality. The demand is brisk, as great quantities are being used for weddings and other decorations. There have been numbers of large weddings in the last few weeks. Sweet peas are making their appearance now and meet with brisk sales. Violets are not so plentiful yet, as the weather has been remarkably warm and fine for this time of the year.

Nurserymen are quite busy this fall planting shrubbery and trees, as the weather is ideal for this sort of work.

Since stock is plentiful, the fakers are busy disposing of the surplus at a low price.

Various Notes.

D. Freudenthal reports business as good. He has been quite busy with funeral work.

The cooler of the Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. is well filled with some of the best roses I have seen for the last six months. The Killarneys are especially good. The Minnehahas are showing up in fine shape. At present they are also cutting some extra fine mums. Their store is filled with palms and ferns.

W. H. Humfeld returned Saturday from Excelsior Springs, where he had spent a week in planting shrubbery and bulbs for the new Elms hotel and other private yards. Mr. Humfeld has great faith in that town and the wonderful springs, which are attracting people from all parts of the United States.

Heite & Son, who are located at Merriam, Kan., ten miles from Kansas City, are cutting chrysanthemums by the wagon load. Their mums are indeed fine this year. They find a ready sale for all that they can grow. They grow one crop of mums, then two crops of lettuce and then one crop of cucumbers in one year in the same houses, all in solid benches.

J. Austin's show window was handsomely decorated with pompon chrysanthemums last week. W. H. H. growing and judge for yourselves of its good qualities. Orders for 60,000 rooted cuttings have been booked without spending anything for printers' ink.

Received Certificate of Merit (scoring 86 points), and Cook Premium in Gold for Best Seedling, at Convention of American Carnation Society, at Washington, D. C , January, 1908. Silver Cup for Best Seedling at National Gardeners' Association, at New York, Spring of 1909.

Dorothy Gordon is beyond question the best commercial pink Carnation in sight today. Its pedigree, Lawson on Enchantress, alone should recommend it to every Carnation grower; but pedigree is by no means its chief merit. It possesses many of its own, such as

1st. VIGOROUS CONSTITUTION and FREEDOM FROM DISEASE.
2d. Size. Blooms average OVER 3 INCHES, OF EXCELLENT FORM.
3d. Color. Resembles Rose-pink Enchantress, but is superior to that variety, in being more uniform.
4th. Long, stiff stem.
5th. Fragrant.
6th. Keeping qualities of the best.
7th. Blooming qualities, 30 PER CENT greater than Enchantress.

We had a stock of 6000 plants last winter. The flowers were all sold at the holidays to the trade in Philadelphia at $12.00 per 100, and uniformly sold for 50% more than we got for Enchantress during the rest of the season.

Dorothy Gordon will be disseminated during the winter of 1909 and 1910 at the popular price of $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000. Strictly on its merits. No Carnation grower can afford to be without it. Come and see it growing, examine our books and decide for yourself. It must be sold on its merits or not at all. NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Everyone reports business as fine. Flowers are quite plentiful and prices are fair. Mums are the whole thing just now. Carnations are plentiful at present; they retail at 50 cents per dozen and the quality is good. Roses retail at $1.50 per dozen, Bride and Maid being the varieties most used here. Mums sell at $1.50 to $3 per dozen. Violets bring $1 per hundred blooms.

Funeral work is good and uses up lots of flowers.

The weather is still mild, and light firing is the rule. Hardy mums are still blooming outdoors. Carnation plants are looking fine. Thanksgiving will see almost the last of the mums. Some nice Beacon carnations are being shown in the windows; this carnation has a good color and is a good all-round variety. The very warm weather here the last few days has opened up things quickly, and stock is quite plentiful.

Various Notes.

At the funeral of a prominent mill man here last week, E. H. Chamberlain and R. H. Woodhouse had some big orders, both using large quantities of Beauties, carnations, violets and orchids, as well as a great many mums.

At Wm. P. Peirce's, business was reported as great last week.

E. H. Chamberlain had some grand Enguehard mums last week, and also some nice single ones. His window decorations are fine at all times. W. L.

MONTREAL, CAN.—Following a custom of thirteen years' standing, N. S. Starting on his own initiative in quite a small way, Mr. Dunlop has succeeded in securing the interest and coöperation of both the company and the employées.

SANGAMO

BRILLIANT GLISTENING PINK

Winner wherever shown: Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee

The greatest bloomer and fastest grower of any. Flowers perfect, Stems long and stiff

Why you should grow SANGAMO

1st. It will give you more blooms in a season than any other variety. The fastest grower we have ever seen.

2nd. It is the best color of anything in this class, Winsor, Rose-pink Enchantress or any other.

3rd. The blooms are well formed, nicely rounded out in the center and do not fade.

4th. The flower stands well above the calyx, making it impossible to split.

5th. It comes early with long stems that are always stiff, holding the flower gracefully.

6th. The entire stock is clean and healthy. The cuttings root easily and the plants lift from the field and establish themselves without a set-back.

7th. Not only an exhibition variety, but the best bread and butter Carnation for any florist to grow. Let us pay your coal bill for you.

Rooted cuttings guaranteed. January delivery. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Indian summer continues and has disturbed business considerably. The warm weather has caused considerable stock of the poorer quality to come in, quite in excess of the demand. The firsts, what few there were, have been picked up by individuals for display purposes at the show. Chrysanthemums are in oversupply, which gives the store man an opportunity to make a big showing. Roses show the effects of the warm weather, especially the Killarney. Beauties are coming in heavy crop and are promising for Thanksgiving. Some fine single violets are to be seen in the market. W. F.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The warm weather of last week put a damper on the cut flower market. There was no demand for any kind of flowers, which caused stock to pile up in the market early in the week. The retailers were unanimous in stating that there was no business. Only the cream of what was sent in sold at anywhere near market prices. What was left was sold in lots at any price.

The violet market was also quiet all the week.

Various Notes.

A visit to A. Schmitt's place, at Glenville, found everything in fine shape. The mums and carnations are looking well. Large quantities of Lorraine begonias give promise of being ready for the Christmas trade. There is also a large quantity of Jerusalem cherries and azaleas coming along for the holidays.

The F. R. Williams Co. is sending in some extra fine Golden Wedding and Chadwick mums; also some good White Enchantress, rose-pink and Beacon carnations.

N. E. Beck, of Massillon, O., has been shipping a fine lot of mums to this market.

Carl Hagenburger, of West Mentor, O., is cutting some of the best Prince of Wales violets seen in the Cleveland market.

Henry Heepe, of Heepe's Sons, Akron, O., was a visitor last week. He reports trade as good.

Shasta

During October Shasta gave us 2 blooms per plant. During the first 15 days of November we cut 2369 good blooms from the same bed of 1800 plants. The cut is getting better every day.

Growers who come to see it growing, marvel at its productiveness and fine quality of bloom. We would like to have you come and see it too. Once you see it, you will want to grow it.

Booking orders for it now at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

CALL AND SEE IT GROWING

Miami Queen

In dissemination of this new carnation, the introducer feels confident it excels all similar varieties in the following respects:

It has a strong constitution and will thrive with ordinary culture.

The color is a grand cerise pink and very double, shows up fine under artificial light.

The blooming qualities are of the best, commencing in early Fall and continuing throughout the season.

During the dark days of Winter, this carnation, having a strong calyx, does not split to any extent, like other pinks.

The form is ideal, the flower being from 3 inches to 4 inches; the plant compact, with no surplus grass; the stem is long and graceful; keeping qualities are excellent; a good shipper; and we feel confident that this is one of the best commercial carnations sent out in years; we have given it five years' trial, and it is better this year than ever.

We are booking orders for January, 1910, delivery, at $10.00 per 100, $85.00 per 1000. Orders filled in strict rotation. For sale by

TO CLEAN OUT EARTHWORMS.

Can I use lime on my beds to exterminate earthworms, in a sparing way, and would air-slaked lime be all right to use? Will it have any effect on the blooms?

F. M. B.

There are quite a number of special worm eradicators on the market. The simplest and least expensive one is lime water. Slake one or two pieces of stone lime in a barrel. After it has settled use the clear liquid to water with. It will not hurt the plants at all, nor will it wither the foliage if you are careful not to stir up the bottom when using it.

NORTH AUGUSTA, S. C.—The Boatwright Floral Co. had charge of the decorations for the Hull-Phinizy wedding, in St. Paul's Episcopal church, Augusta, November 10.

ADMIRATION

This carnation we offer to the trade as being one of the finest Carnations of any color that we know of up to date. Being a beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Winona, having that beautiful satin finish, always showing up well either in natural or artificial light. Plants benched in August are now coming into full crop, carrying from 10 to 20 buds. We have been cutting since September 10th. As a money maker you will find no equal.

The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, excellent form, well built up in the center, with the petals so arranged as to make it stand the general requirements of a good fancy commercial variety. A grand keeper and shipper.

The habit is ideal, upright with no surplus grass and every shoot going into flower. Its freedom and earliness make it nearly the ideal carnation. The calyx is very tough and seldom bursts. Can be handled with great success either from the field or grown inside all summer. No one has to be an expert to handle this variety. It scored 86 points at the American Carnation Society meeting at Indianapolis, January 27 to 28, 1909.

Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

250 at 1000 rate.

Send for catalogue of all other new and standard varieties of carnations. We are always pleased to have visitors come and inspect our stock and varieties.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The Market.

The weather clerk has been especially kind the last two weeks and gave us as nice fall weather as one could desire, excepting several slight frosts, and business has picked up considerably.

Chrysanthemums are the leading flower and are in heavy supply; in fact, they are in oversupply and locally can be had quite cheap. First-class blooms, that usually bring $3 per dozen, were sold as low as $1.50.

Roses are plentiful, and considering it is the height of the mum season are selling well, while carnations are the one scarce article. At no time this fall have there been enough to properly go around, but the plants show promise of a generous Thanksgiving and Christmas crop. Violets are doing nicely, and selling well, although at a somewhat reduced price as compared to former years. One thing on which the market is a bit shy is lilies, but another crop will soon be in.

Various Notes.

The following Grand Rapids florists took in the Chicago mum show: Henry Smith, Geo. F. Crabb, Alfred Hannah, Eli Cross, J. Schols, Freyling, C. Bowditch and Ella O'Neil. All pronounced it fine and were specially interested in the retail exhibits, which were decidedly educating, giving many ideas for local application.

Crabb & Hunter have sold part of their Reed Lake farm, and next summer will move their city plant out there and grow for the wholesale trade.

S. J. Perry and his wife had the good fortune to be born on the same date, November 6, one year apart, and so gave a birthday party at which all employees and their families attended, about eighty people being present. Mr. and Mrs. Perry were presented with a handsome library table.

Greenfly has made its appearance in several establishments, and is being vigorously fought. It is starting out on tomatoes, some even trying what they can do on poinsettias. They are also very partial to salvia and fuchsias.

G. F. C.

LEOMINSTER, MASS.—George M. Kendall sterilized all of the soil in his greenhouses with steam this fall, in order to exterminate all underground pests and put the soil in good condition for his next crop of cucumbers.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOVELTIES

Best in the World as Usual

The splendid showing of my last year's varieties at all the Eastern shows proves how the standard is maintained.

As the American agent of W. Wells & Co., of Merstham, England, I have arranged for simultaneous distribution of their novelty list of 1910, so that the American cultivators for the first time in history can obtain the Wells-Pockett novelties at the same time as the British grower. That list will include Mrs. David Syme, the gold medal winner, and other splendid kinds not yet named. The 1909 list comprises some grand varieties for the exhibition grower: R. F. Felton, the deepest shade of yellow. Wells' late pink, a grand thing on the style of Brighthurst. Mrs. H Stevens, Gladys Blackburn, W. Mease, W. Hotston, and other splendid varieties.

In American raised seedlings I will offer Mrs. A. R. Peacock, Mrs. W. Arnold (white), Mrs. W. Wincott (pink), all certificated by the C. S. A., and a yellow sport of the well known Ivory.

If your name is not on my mailing list, write me.

The Market.

Trade is still on the increase here, with plenty of stock coming in. The weather has been extremely warm for this season of the year and is bringing on stock entirely too fast, especially in mums, which are opening up fast and soft. Even the late varieties are coming right in, and some growers claim they will be entirely cut out before Thanksgiving. Chadwicks in white and yellow, Maud Dean, Enguehard and several of the later varieties are in full blast now, and the mum season here will be about two weeks shorter than usual, judging from the present outlook.

Roses are fine and are coming in large quantities, but the demand for them is rather light and some days it is hard to clean them up. Brides and Maids are fine and holding their own. Killarneys are doing well and the demand for them is fair. Some extra good Richmonds are coming in, but the warm weather opened them up in a hurry and they do not move as they should. The demand for Beauties is rather light during the big output of mums.

Violets are fine and are generally cleaned up nicely. The demand for valley is fair and it is used mostly for bridal bunches.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held a regular meeting Tuesday night, November 9, in the Brent building, at Town and High streets.

The committee reported everything moving finely for the dance, to be held November 18, and an unusually large crowd was expected.

The following officers were elected: President, R. A. Currie; vice-president, C. P. Torrey; secretary, James McKellar; treasurer, O. A. Munk; sergeant at arms, J. H. Williams; trustees, Sherman Stephens, George Bauman, I. D. Seibert, C. D. Battelle and Wm. Metzmaier.

Various Notes.

The Riverside Floral Co. reports business as excellent in the new location and the firm is well pleased with the outlook for the future.

Sherman Stephens reports things moving nicely, but mums are coming in too fast.

The Munk Floral Co. has fine looking stock and finds trade good.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. reports business first-class, with plenty of stock.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting some fine roses and carnations.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

We had sunshine and warm weather last week. Conditions were splendid for growing good stock. California violets are large and long-stemmed at present and are a general favorite with the flower-buying public. Trade has been good, as flowers were used for many occasions.

Various Notes.

G. H. Bahret, the violet grower of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was in Erie November 10.

Mrs. A. J. Baur is spending a few days at Youngsville, Pa., the guest of her mother, Mrs. Kane.

Among the visitors in this city last week were: Allen Langhans, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.; William Jones, the holly wreath man of Milton, Del.; Mr. Beatty, of the Dayton Paper Novelty Co., and H. M. Smith, of the Roseville Pottery Co., Zanesville, O.

The Erie Florists' Employees had an enjoyable chrysanthemum dance at Assembly hall, November 10. There was a large attendance. Over 500 mums were given away at the door. The hall presented a beautiful appearance, in its elaborate decorations. The music was of the best and was rendered by Rea's orchestra.

The Baur Floral Co. had its annual chrysanthemum display at the store November 8. Many new varieties were shown. Some were extraordinary in size, while others were peculiar in shading.

B. P.

MARION, IA.—A hail storm, November 11, broke about 300 lights of glass in the greenhouses of I. N. Kramer & Son, and about the same number of lights at George Hutton's place.

RICHMOND, IND.—Norman A. Hoffman, a florist employed in Glen Miller park, recently made a vigorous but unsuccessful attempt to capture a fleeing burglar. When discovered, the suspicious looking stranger was sliding out of a hay mow in one of the park buildings. Mr. Hoffman pursued him and fired several shots. A quantity of clothing, which had been stolen in another city, was afterward found concealed in the hay mow.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business has been quite satisfactory during the last few weeks. October was a little dull at first, but a steady rush toward the latter part of the month brought the month's business far ahead of last year.

Stock of all kinds is plentiful, but little, if any, is going to waste. Some of the finest La Detroit roses ever seen are at present arriving from Klagge's greenhouses, with stems as long as Beauties, fine large flowers of good color and nice, clean foliage.

The weather has been more like spring than fall. Some days the temperature was as high as 60 degrees outdoors, and the sun has not been backward about shining either. This has brought the chrysanthemums out in large numbers, causing them to become a little too plentiful for a few days.

The demand for greens has been good, as we are now in the midst of our debutante season.

Various Notes.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has added a line of chiffons to its list of supplies. If these move well, a line of staple ribbons will also be added.

Mr. and Mrs. William Dilger left for southern Kentucky Monday evening, November 15. Mr. Dilger will return in about one week, but Mrs. Dilger will perhaps be gone a month. Their destination is the extreme southern part of the state, on the Tennessee border. Mr. Dilger will leave, immediately upon arrival, for the mountains to investigate Kentucky rock. He has been experimenting with this rock as a paving material for the last four years and has finally found a way of laying it which makes a roadway equal to any other material, including foreign or domestic asphalt. The rock is pulverized and then laid in the cold state.

In my last letter I spoke, of the party and fish supper at J. E. Smith's, in Wyandotte. Since then so many of the party of about forty who were there have been singing praises for Mr. Smith that I feel a few more words are necessary. The supper of whitefish was not a supper at all, but an elaborate dinner, served in finest hotel style. After supper a most enjoyable evening was spent, dancing to music furnished by a string orchestra. H. S.

CARLISLE, PA.—Roy Erb, the Louther street florist, will build greenhouses on the tract of ground, containing sixteen lots, which he recently purchased.

TESTIMONY FROM MICHELL.

I personally visited Mr. Aschmann's greenhouses September 21, 1909, and found that the Araucarias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Boston, Whitmani, Scottii, Amerpohlii, Todeaoides ferns, Rubber Plants, Kentias and Arecas are indeed A No. 1. Have never seen any better plants. The Gloire de Lorraine begonias in 6 in. pots are a perfect wonder, bushy and clean. Have never seen his greenhouses filled with plants as good as they are now.

F. J. MICHELL, of the firm of Henry F. Michell Co., 1018 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Four Houses Filled with the Best. With What? Sure, with ARAUCARIAS, Our Specialty

Araucarias our specialty. More in favor than ever before.

We are one of the largest importers of these well-known and beautiful evergreen decorative plants, the Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Excelsa Glauca and Excelsa.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, real beauties, hard to beat, 4-yr.-old, 6-in. pots, 15 to 25 in. high, $1.25, $1.50 to $1.75 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, the most attractive of the Araucaria family. This is the blue-green variety, combining grace and beauty, and is much admired; 4-yr.-old, 6 in. pots, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 18, 20 to 25 in. high, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Areca Lutescens, 5-in., made up of 3 plants, 35c.

Araucaria Excelsa, 1909 importation, in sizes as herewith stated: 5½ to 6 in. pots, 3-yr. old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26 to 30 in. high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Kentia Belmoreana, 4-in., 15 to 20 in. high, 25c to 35c; 6 to 7-in., stocky, 30 to 35 in. high, 6 to 7 good leaves, very bushy, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

FORMOSA LILIES.

I have planted my Easter lilies and have put them down in a cellar and covered them over with some moss. Is that as good as straw? Before I covered them over I gave them a good watering. When I find that they are becoming dry, do I have to remove the moss, or can I just water over the moss? The variety is Formosa. H. B.

Better remove the moss in order to see just which pots require watering. Lilies should be kept on the dry side until roots are active around the sides of the pots. An excess of moisture in the early stages of growth is often the cause of roots decaying and consequent sickly plants. Let them get quite dry before you water. As growths appear remove them to a lighter place. If you water the moss the lilies are likely to root up into it, which you do not want. W. C.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business has been quite satisfactory during the last few weeks. October was a little dull at first, but a steady rush toward the latter part of the month brought the month's business far ahead of last year.

Stock of all kinds is plentiful, but little, if any, is going to waste. Some of the finest La Detroit roses ever seen are at present arriving from Klagge's greenhouses, with stems as long as Beauties, fine large flowers of good color and nice, clean foliage.

The weather has been more like spring than fall. Some days the temperature was as high as 60 degrees outdoors, and the sun has not been backward about shining either. This has brought the chrysanthemums out in large numbers, causing them to become a little too plentiful for a few days.

The demand for greens has been good, as we are now in the midst of our debutante season.

Various Notes.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has added a line of chiffons to its list of supplies. If these move well, a line of staple ribbons will also be added.

Mr. and Mrs. William Dilger left for southern Kentucky Monday evening, November 15. Mr. Dilger will return in about one week, but Mrs. Dilger will perhaps be gone a month. Their destination is the extreme southern part of the state, on the Tennessee border. Mr. Dilger will leave, immediately upon arrival, for the mountains to investigate Kentucky rock. He has been experimenting with this rock as a paving material for the last four years and has finally found a way of laying it which makes a roadway equal to any other material, including foreign or domestic asphalt. The rock is pulverized and then laid in the cold state.

In my last letter I spoke of the party and fish supper at J. E. Smith's, in Wyandotte. Since then so many of the party of about forty who were there have been singing praises for Mr. Smith that I feel a few more words are necessary. The supper of whitefish was not a supper at all, but an elaborate dinner, served in finest hotel style. After supper a most enjoyable evening was spent, dancing to music furnished by a string orchestra. H. S.

Carlisle, Pa. Roy Erb, the Louther street florist, will build greenhouses on the tract of ground, containing sixteen lots, which he recently purchased.

TESTIMONY FROM MICHELL.

I personally visited Mr. Aschmann's greenhouses September 21, 1909, and found that the Araucarias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Boston, Whitmani, Scottii, Amerpohlii, Todeaoides ferns, Rubber Plants, Kentias and Arecas are indeed A No. 1. Have never seen any better plants. The Gloire de Lorraine begonias in 6 in. pots are a perfect wonder, bushy and clean. Have never seen his greenhouses filled with plants as good as they are now.

F. J. MICHELL, of the firm of Henry F. Michell Co., 1018 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Four Houses Filled with the Best. With What? Sure, with ARAUCARIAS, Our Specialty

Araucarias our specialty. More in favor than ever before.

We are one of the largest importers of these well-known and beautiful evergreen decorative plants, the Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Excelsa Glauca and Excelsa.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, real beauties, hard to beat, 4-yr.-old, 6-in. pots, 15 to 25 in. high, $1.25, $1.50 to $1.75 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, the most attractive of the Araucaria family. This is the blue-green variety, combining grace and beauty, and is much admired; 4-yr.-old, 6 in. pots, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 18, 20 to 25 in. high, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Areca Lutescens, 5-in., made up of 3 plants. 35c.

Araucaria Excelsa, 1909 importation, in sizes as herewith stated: 5½ to 6 in. pots, 3-yr. old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26 to 30 in. high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Kentia Belmoreana, 4-in., 15 to 20 in. high. 25c to 35c; 6 to 7-in., stocky, 30 to 35 in. high, 6 to 7 good leaves, very bushy, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

Kentia Belmoreana, 3-in., suitable for fern dishes. 10c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 8-in. pots, made up, 1 large, 4 ft. high in center, with 3 small around, price $3.00 to $4.00; single plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25, 30, 35, 40 to 48 in. high, 75c to $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50 each.

Cocos Weddelliana, 3½-in., 18 to 20 in. high. 20c to 25c; 3-in., 15 in. high, 18c.

Azalea Indica, new crop, raised for us under contract by our Azalea specialist in Ghent, Belgium, just arrived and stood the sea voyage well. We never received a finer lot than this year, well budded for Christmas forcing. Remember, only the healthiest, strongest plants, with buds well advanced, are selected. Deutsche Perle (double white), Simon Mardner (double pink), Vervaeneana (double rose variegated), Apollo (red), 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Mme. Petrick, best earliest pink. New varieties will flower in medium temperature. A child can force them into bloom for Xmas, full of buds, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Easter forcing varieties, Bernard Andre alba (white), Niobe (white), last year's plants, big sizes, 16, 18, 20 to 22-in., full of buds, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50 each. Remember, only last year's importation bloom successfully for Easter. Empress of India, Mme. Van der Cruyssen, De Schryveriana, Dr. Moore, Simon Mardner, Vervaeneana, Deutsche Perle and five or six more American favorite varieties, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50 each.

Azalea Mme. Petrick (double pink), for Thanksgiving, in bloom $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Ferns, Scottii, 4-in., 25c; 5, 5½ to 6-in., 35c, 40c to 50c.

PANSIES.

This is the way we select our seed plants. If a plant, in the field, produces a bloom three inches or more in diameter and of fine texture, form and color, we stake it and, if the second bloom equals or exceeds it, we transfer to the seed beds. We want you to try these thoroughbreds, grown from our own seed. 100 plants, 50c; 1000 plants, $4.00. Cash.

Greenhouse Heating.

BETTER INCREASE THE PIPING.

I have a small house, 14x36, heated by hot water, but have not piping enough to produce the temperature required in cold weather. A local plumber suggests changing my hot water boiler to a steam boiler, to remedy the defect. Is it practical to do this, or would it be better to add more piping to my heating system as it is?

My house has sixteen inches of glass in the sides. I have thought of making the sides double glass, with a 1-inch air space between, thinking by doing so to keep out cold. Is that advisable and has the plan any defect? Will double glass burn foliage? W. F. T.

For a house as small as the one described, it will be much easier to put in extra radiation to give the required heat, rather than to change to a steam boiler.

The use of double glass in the side walls would, of course, result in the saving of some heat, but, on the other hand, soot and dirt soon collect on the inside of the glass and, as a result, nearly as much sun heat is lost as is saved by the use of double glass.

CONVEYING HEAT TO RESIDENCE

Please give me your advice in regard to heating my residence with hot water radiation from my greenhouse boiler, which is a new Burnham and large enough. I have been considering two plans, one with the feed pipe underground and the other with the feed pipe overhead, passing through the open air for sixty-five feet. I should prefer the underground idea if it will work. If you are positive that the underground method will not work, then please suggest the best way that is possible. E. A. M.

It would be possible to carry the flow pipe underground, provided the radiators in the dwelling are not less than six feet above the top of the boiler. The main should be carried just beneath the surface, covering it with asbestos packing and then enclosing it in a large sewer pipe. The amount of radiation required in the dwelling is not stated, but a flow and a return larger than 1½-inch will surely be required. Even a 2-inch flow would not handle much more than 100 square feet of radiation, aside from that in the main and flow pipe. By using a 2½-inch flow pipe, it would be possible to supply 200 to 250 square feet of radiation.

THE CHEAPEST FUEL.

Please inform me which of the following fuels, at the prices quoted, would be most economical to use: Hard coal, anthracite, at $6.75 per ton; smokeless coal, Pocahontas or Missouri River, at $4.25 per ton; soft coal, Pittsburg, at $3.75 per ton; splint coal, white ash, at $4 per ton; gas coke, crushed, at $6 per ton. W. E. F. W.

A definite answer to this question cannot be given, as not only is there a great difference in the coal from different mines, but it varies in different parts of the same mine. Moreover, a coal which gives good results in one boiler might be found far from economical in another.

In a general way it can be said that Pocahontas coal contains about ten per cent more heat units than a good quality of Pittsburg coal, and this, in turn, will be found to be worth about ten per cent more than a good grade of Ohio coal. As a rule, the Pocahontas coal requires a considerably larger grate than a quick burning Pittsburg coal, and both will require more frequent attention than the furnace size of hard coal. For a small plant, under ordinary circumstances, it is generally found advisable to use hard coal, even though it may not contain more heat units. Even at the prices mentioned, the hard coal should probably be chosen where one does not have more than 3,000 to 5,000 feet of glass and the houses are heated by hot water. Gas coke would be found even more expensive than the coals mentioned.

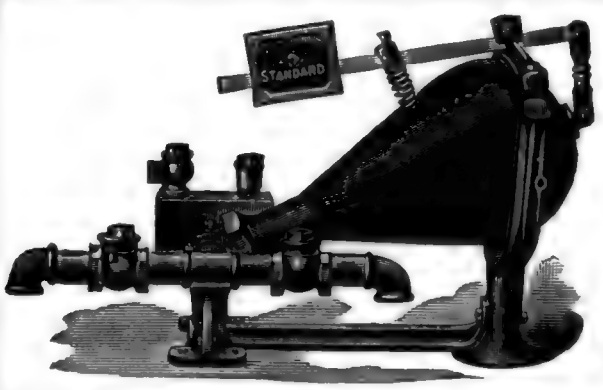
The Market.

The cut flower business showed little improvement last week, some saying that it was quite dull the greater part of the week. There was a great improvement in the wholesale market as far as stock was concerned. Everything was plentiful and a great deal of stock in roses, carnations, small mums and violets was dumped, as the demand, both local and shipping, was small.



The uptown florists bought considerable of the first-class stock for show work in mums, Beauties and carnations. The downtown florists bought a lot of the second and short stem stock, which sold at low prices, such as, roses 25 cents per dozen, carnations 15 cents, and violets at 5 cents per bunch.

There is now some fine stock on sale, of all the seasonable flowers and plants, and at prices within reach of anyone; still few buyers were seen. There are some nice chrysanthemum blooms of Bonnaffon, both white and yellow; plenty of all kinds of roses, with extra long stems in Beauties, more than enough carnations, and a glut of violets, some selling as low as $2 per thousand. The same may be said of greens, there being as much of it as anyone wants.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, November 11. The attendance at this meeting was the largest in the history of the club, and when President Windler called the meeting to order there were sixty-five florists present.

Gustave M. Grossart, of Belleville, Ill., made application for membership.

As there were a large number of visiting florists present, the chair declared a recess, for a few minutes, to become acquainted with the visitors. After recess, the chair called upon F. J. Ammann to read his paper on "What the Wholesaler, Retailer and Grower Derive from Flower Shows," which was declared by those present to be one of the best papers ever read at a club meeting.

The chair then requested C. DeWever to present a paper to his own liking, at the next meeting, which Mr. DeWever agreed to do.

The report of the treasurer showed that the club is well supplied with funds to carry out the plans for the fall and winter meetings, each meeting to have a social feature of some kind.

The trustees reported that they had arranged for a smoker and lunch at the new Knickerbocker cafe at the close of the meeting. On entering the banquet hall the entire body of sixty-five were seated at a T-shaped table, which was handsomely decorated with roses and carnations. After the innerman had been satisfied, President Windler announced that J. F. Ammann would be toastmaster for the evening. Mr. Ammann then called upon all the visitors at the head table. Those who spoke were W. W. Coles, S. S. Skidelsky, J. A. Peterson, J. J. Karins, I. C. Bertermann and Joe Hill. Ex-presidents Young, Halstead and Fillmore also gave good talks. Two large automobiles, that were in waiting, then took the entire party to the Coliseum, where the flower show was being held, and the rest of the evening was spent among the plants and flowers. The next meeting of the club comes December 9, and the officers are looking for another large attendance.

Various Notes.

C. H. Perkins II, of Jackson & Perkins, Newark, N. Y., was a recent visitor. Mr. Perkins says that he had a pleasant stay and a good trade in his line.

There were a great many trade visitors in the city last week.

The thirty-sixth annual convention of the Horticultural Society of Southern Illinois will be held November 23 and 24 at Vienna, Ill. A. S. Halstead, president of the St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, Ill., is booked for a discussion on "Cross Pollenization," and Mr. Dintelmann, also of Belleville, is down for a discussion on "Beautifying the Home."

William C. Young and his nephew, Charlie, say they are much pleased with the result of their entries at the flower show. Their table and mantel decorations, and their bridal bouquet, were tastefully arranged and showed good workmanship, and their floral display of four pieces, the last day, was beautifully worked up.

Fred Lautenschlager was with us last week in the interest of Kroeschell Bros., Chicago. He is quite popular with the

The Market.

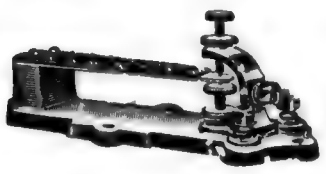
We have been having charming autumn weather, with the customary stimulating effect on the trade. Material has been fairly abundant and of fair quality, and was easily moved. Saturday night, November 13, found all stock pretty well cleaned up without much pressure. There was a large amount sold on the streets that was of the poorest quality seen in years.

This week has seen some of the best roses so far this season. Bride, Bridesmaid and Chatenay are good. Killarney is gaining in popularity every day on account of its splendid keeping qualities. Carnations are improving wonderfully. Enchantress bids fair to again attain the popularity of last season. Violets are showing up fairly well, but the weather is almost too warm to expect anything extra just at present. Any number of cyclamen can be seen just now in the windows, and find a ready sale. Ferns are selling well, especially the ones in 6-inch pans.

Various Notes.

Henry Eichholz, of Waynesboro, Pa., was a visitor Saturday, November 13, after paying a visit to the Washington flower show.

Philip B. Welsh, of Glen Morris, Md., had some extra fine Alvina carnations on display at the Gardeners' Club November 8. G. A. Lotze, of Glenburnie, also had some fine Golden King mums on display at the club meeting.



A large number of the florists went over to Washington Tuesday, November 9, to see the mum show, which was considered the best ever shown there. Q.

Current Comment.

Reporting about the business done during the last All Saints' day is a hard matter, so many different opinions being heard. It is a fact, however, that the flowers were quite plentiful, coming from all directions. The quality was also better than in any previous year. The growers of the Mrs. H. Robinson, white, protecting it either by glass sashes or by cotton cloth, have improved its culture so that it is really the best chrysanthemum of all offered at this time. This flower is in the best of condition to be handled and superior to any soft stock grown in the greenhouse. Plenty of our home-grown flowers were sold for $5 per dozen.

What should be remembered, and not lost sight of by old growers or future ones, is that the demand for chrysanthemums is almost limited down here to that one occasion. We want still better quality, but not a quantity which cannot be disposed of at a paying price. If everyone would take that into consideration, there would not be a large surplus on the market, to be offered at the last hour at a very low figure.

Business is improving. There is a good demand for roses to plant. Our gardens have been at no time of the year so much loaded with flowers of all kinds.

Jules Fonta, for many years superintendent of Audubon park, has tendered his resignation. Mr. Marshall has been appointed as his temporary successor.

The damage done to Horticultural hall during the last storm has not yet been repaired.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall November 10. President Everett occupied the chair. There was a good attendance, though some of the most prominent members had gone to the C. S. A. show in New York. It is pleasing to note that J. F. Johnston, one of the members, was awarded a first prize at that show.

The treasurer, E. J. Brown, read a satisfactory report in connection with the fall show. He said the drawings were better this year than ever before, which goes to show that the Glen Cove public is yearly taking more interest in the doings of the society.

Vice-president J. Elmslie presented President Everett with two cups, won at the fall exhibition. One, presented by Mrs. Smithers for a collection of outdoor mums, has to be won three times. The other, presented by Mrs. H. L. Pratt for a collection of fruit, was won outright. Mr. Everett, before resuming his chair, showed his appreciation in a neat little speech.

Recording Secretary Gaut was presented with the Troy cup. This cup has to be won three times before competition for it closes.

As usual, there was a miniature show at this meeting. Messrs. Pettrocia, Fleishhaur, Reidenbach, Ador, Highton, Cleres, Reul, Macdonald and Wilson each received honorable mention for meritorious exhibits.

In the points competition Mr. Wilson staged three plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, which were awarded 95 points; V. Cleres, vase of mums, 84⅓; P. Reul, vase of mums, 83⅓; H. Gaut, lettuce, 77⅓.

G. Gilder, of Glen Cove, and Wm. Kissner were elected to active membership.

The judges for the monthly competition were Messrs. Wettlin, Holloway and Elmslie. W. M.

LEBANON, PA.—The residence of Christian Yost was totally destroyed by fire on the night of November 6. One of the greenhouses was also wrecked and hundreds of plants were ruined. The fire was supposed to have originated in the heating plant, which was located in the basement of the dwelling house. There was no insurance.

SOUTH BEND, IND.

A finding in the suit of the Indiana Lumber & Manufacturing Co. against the South Bend Floral Co., the Citizens' Loan, Trust & Savings Co., Perkins Windmill Co., Charles E. Campbell and Charles M. Treanor was made in the circuit court November 10 by Judge Walter A. Funk. The Citizens' Trust Co. was given judgment of $7,035.77 on the first lien and the Indiana Lumber & Mfg. Co. the sum of $346.78 on the original complaint. The Perkins Windmill Co. was given $55, second lien, and Mr. Treanor on the complaint $667.75 with interest at six per cent from September 15, 1908, third lien. August Nugt, who was made co-defendant, at his request was given $30.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

All the florists are well pleased with the demand for flowers the last few weeks. The demand for carnations is greater than the supply.

W. J. Vesey and his wife spent several days in Chicago, attending the flower show. Mr. and Mrs. Vesey and their daughter, Margaret, the vice-president-elect of the L. S. A. F., have left for St. Louis, to attend the St. Louis flower show, intending to spend the entire week there. Mr. and Mrs. Maynard, of Detroit, met them at Fort Wayne, and rode through to St. Louis with them.

WHITE KILLARNEY
MY MARYLAND
O. P. BASSETT

Ask the man who grows them

WHITE KILLARNEY

Grafted plants, 2½-inch pots, $12.00 per 100, ready for delivery March 15th, 1910. The White Killarney is far superior to the Bride, paying at least 50 per cent greater return per square foot of bench than the Brides. We graft only on selected Manetti and our young plants have a national reputation for superior quality.

MY MARYLAND

Grafted plants, 2½-inch pots, $12.00 per 100, ready for delivery March 15th, 1910. My Maryland is a splendid rose and must be grown to appreciate its heavy blooming qualities.

O. P. BASSETT

The best Red Carnation. Rooted cuttings ready by December 15th, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. The Bassett has made good wherever grown. 200,000 plants were sold last year, which is the greatest test. As a money maker it is far ahead of all other varieties; it is in carnations what Killarney is in roses.

The above three varieties have been thoroughly tested and are the leaders for this season.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT TO CARNATION GROWERS

At the earnest solicitation of a large number of commercial and private growers, the Cottage Gardens Company has decided to disseminate this year the two famous Carnations

two varieties which are well known to all the leading growers of the country. 4 years' test in the New York market has demonstrated their popularity and good staying qualities. For the past 3 years we have been growing from 15,000 to 25,000 of each, during which time they have always commanded the highest market prices, and at no time has the supply been equal to the demand.

On the exhibition table they have taken the highest honors, and we believe it is safe to say these two carnations stand without an equal.

INVITATION

We extend a cordial invitation to all those interested to visit our establishment, where they will have an opportunity to see them growing and compare their good points with other standard varieties grown under the same conditions.

MRS. C. W. WARD

MRS. C. W. WARD is a perfectly formed flower with full center; color, deep pink, several shades lighter than Lawson, deeper than Winsor; having strong, erect stems 24 to 36 inches in length. A vigorous, healthy grower and has never shown disease of any kind.

A very early and free bloomer, producing fine flowers as early as September 1st, which bring from 25 to 50 per cent more than any other variety on the market.

The keeping qualities of this variety are remarkable. Several shipments of blooms sent to Europe reached their destinations in perfect condition, and wherever exhibited it has always been the last to show signs of wilting.

ALMA WARD

This beautiful Carnation is pure white except during dark weather, when it shows delicate splashings of pink similar to the Cattleya Orchid, increasing its popularity.

ALMA WARD is the largest and most fragrant Carnation ever grown, producing perfect flowers, 3½ to 4½ inches in diameter, on strong, erect stems 36 to 42 inches in length.

This most remarkable variety takes the same place among Carnations as the American Beauty Rose among Roses, and has, during the past 4 years, been awarded numerous prizes, including the following:

The Lawson Silver Medal, ... Toronto, 1907
(No Gold Medal having been awarded.)
The Lawson Gold Medal, ... Washington, 1908

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

THE BEST FORTY.

Every year it has been my pleasure to make up a list of forty varieties, for the benefit of my readers, of the kinds that have shown up most prominently at the shows. The list for this year is appended herewith, and the varieties are placed in the order of their merit. I have kept all novelties out of the list, because they have yet to stand the test of being generally grown.

Yellow—F. S. Vallis, Mary Donnellan, S. A. Naceur-Bey, Mrs. W. Duckham, Yellow Miller, Mrs. J. C. Neill, Cheltoni, C. Montigny, Mrs. Geo. Hunt, Col. Appleton.

White—Merza, Beatrice May, W. M. Moir, Nellie Pockett, Mrs. N. Davis, May Seddon, Mrs. D. V. West, Lynnwood Hall.

Pink—M. Hankey, Lady Hopetoun, W. Duckham, M. F. Plant, Frank Payne, L. Rosseau, O. H. Broomhead, Pres. Viger.

Crimson—Mrs. H. Partridge, Pockett's Crimson, Leslie Morrison, Pockett's Surprise, C. H. Totty.

Bronze and Any Other Colors—Mrs. O. H. Kahn, Glenview, Mary Mason, Rose Pockett, Mrs. J. Dunne, Mrs. J. A. Miller, Ethel Fitzroy, G. J. Brooks.

This list shows some interesting changes. For instance, the Eatons have practically disappeared from the shows in the east, and Appleton has dropped in yellows to last place. The latter variety has been quite disappointing to its admirers this year and will not be nearly so largely grown again. I am under the impression that many growers start this variety too early and that it does better when planted on the benches in June. It will be interesting to see if Appleton comes back again. Past history says that once a mum goes back it stays back. We shall see. The yellow section will be enriched by R. F. Felton and J. Locke this year, both splendid kinds.

The whites do not show much change. Merza is still queen, and deservedly so. Mrs. David Syme is a white that is booked to displace it, and certainly it looks good this year, but time alone can tell, since so many whites have come and gone and Merza still remains.

The bronze section is the most interesting to me. Some of the most beautiful things are set down because they do not conform to the florists' color chart, and here we find them. Some growers say that you cannot sell bronze kinds in the market, but this is a fallacy so far as New York market is concerned. Any bronze that has enough life and color, like Mrs. Kahn, will sell readily and at good prices. This variety has certainly made good everywhere. Mrs. H. Stevens and W. Hotston are two great additions to the "any other color" section this year.

In the reds, Mrs. H. Partridge has shown up better this year than ever before. I do not think that it will beat Pockett's Crimson another year, when everyone has good stock to work on, but its showing this year stamps it as a grand variety. Leslie Morrison and Pockett's Surprise have both shown up splendidly and have lived up to all that was said about them last year.

The pinks do not show much change from last year. Hankey has retained the hold it secured last year, and Duckham is holding its own better than I had expected. M. F. Plant has thrown much better flowers this year than last, as has also O. H. Broomhead. The pinks will have a welcome addition in Wells' Late Pink.

Summing up the season of 1909, it was in many respects the best we ever had. The weather was ideal and the flowers finished perfectly. The shows were well attended and the interest is up to fever heat again. The knocker may knock, as usual, and say we are scoring no advance, but he has said that for ten years, and actual measurements of the flowers easily disprove his remarks so far as size is concerned, while the range of colors and the number of varieties are far ahead of the past.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

FOR SUCCESSION OF BLOOMS.

Will you please give the names of some good varieties of mums, so that I can grow a succession from early until late? I am now growing Major Bonnaffon, White Bonnaffon, Ivory and Pink Ivory. J. A. F.

The following list, while it may not include every good commercial variety, will give J. A. F. flowers to cut from the beginning to the end of the season. I have placed them in the order in which they will flower.

Yellow: Golden Glow, Monrovia, Yellow Miller, Chadwick, Col. Appleton and Yellow Chadwick.

White: Polly Rose, October Frost, Beatrice May, Nellie Pockett, Mlle. Desjouis and W. H. Chadwick.

Pink: Pacific, Mrs. Coombes, Wm. Duckham, Dr. Enguehard and W. R. Brock.

Chrysanthemum Mrs. David Syme.

Chrysanthemum Howard Gould.

Red and bronze varieties: W. Meredith, Mrs. Partridge, Matchless, Amateur Conseul, Mrs. O. H. Kahn, Ethel Fitzroy and Glenview.

These cover the season and also cover practically all the range of colors.

Chas. H. Totty.

SOME OF THE NEW MUMS.

Mrs. W. Arnold is a fine commercial white, an American seedling certificated by the C. S. A. on commercial scale; stem quite stiff; foliage well up and of deep, glossy green; hardly big enough for a show flower, but should make its mark as a commercial variety, as petal is hard and stiff and will stand handling.

Miss M. Smith is a terra cotta pink. Petals are hooked at the end, which makes it seem like a hairy variety. A handsome looking flower, with fine stem and foliage.

Mrs. David Syme is a grand white that is booked to displace all of our other whites on the exhibition table. It is as large as Moir, when the latter is well done. It carries the foliage right up to the flower; stem is absolutely perfect, and when taken on the bud about August 15 produces a flower that is as near perfection in its color as it is possible to get. Mrs. David Syme has been certificated in England, has won the gold medal in Australia and would have scored very high in this country had there been sufficient stock to place it before any committee.

Mrs. W. A. Read is an intense, fiery, scarlet crimson, petals standing out stiff to show the color to the best advantage. This variety is perfect in foliage, which is right up to the flower, stem stiff, grows rather above the average height, and will undoubtedly make its mark as a striking exhibition variety. Any bud after August 15 produces a perfect flower.

Onunda is the gigantic white that was staged by Wm. Duckham at the American Institute. The flower was forty-five inches in circumference, by actual measurement, and it was claimed, and I believe rightly, that it was easily the largest flower ever put on exhibition in America. The stem was fully equal to carrying the flower erect, which was remarkable when one considers the immense weight of the bloom. This variety scored ninety-four points on the exhibition scale. The color is the weakest point, being a lemon yellow, but it is a gigantic thing and its size makes it a feature to be reckoned with in exhibition varieties.

Howard Gould is a crimson scarlet, one of the Wells varieties for 1910; a reflexed, stiff petal that shows all the color to the best advantage; heavy, well-formed flower, foliage right up to flower, and stem first-class. This will be a welcome addition to the crimson section.

C. H. Totty.

RUST ON MUMS.

Kindly tell us the cause of the brown spots on the enclosed chrysanthemum leaves, and also the remedy.

H. W. W.

The brown spots on the leaves are rust, and the remedy to apply is sulphide of potassium, in the proportion of one ounce to two gallons of water. This will kill the germs of the disease and prevent it from spreading, and with reasonable care H. W. W. will have perfectly clean stock another year. C. H. Totty.

BLOOMS DROOP, STEMS BREAK.

What is the matter with my Col. Appleton chrysanthemums? The blooms droop over when partly open and the stems break. They are grown to single stems in bench. T. C. B.

It is pretty hard to tell what is the matter with these chrysanthemums, without knowing more of the way in which they were grown, when planted, the distance apart, etc.

I can hardly understand such a strong growing plant as Col. Appleton throwing over its flowers and having broken stems, as T. C. B. states. If the plants have been planted very close together, so that they are weak and spindly, it might be accounted for in that way. I have never in my experience seen Appleton, when given a reasonable amount of room and reasonable amount of feed, produce anything but satisfactory flowers.

If T. C. B. cares to give me a little more detailed information, I shall endeavor to wrestle further with the question. CHAS. H. TOTTY.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS IN ENGLAND.

National Society's Show.

After the extremely wet and sunless season which we have experienced—probably the worst for thirty years—it could not be expected that exhibition blooms would show up well at the chrysanthemum shows. Nevertheless, at the first important show of the season, that of the National Chrysanthemum Society, which opened in the Crystal Palace, London, November 3, there was a creditable display, surpassing the expectations of many. True, the show was not equal to those of former years, as the leading growers were unable to put up such imposing groups, on account of the weather conditions, but the competitive classes were well filled.

Some Prize-winning Varieties.

The great vase class for twelve vases of specimen blooms of Japanese chrysanthemums, with a first prize of £12, was spiritedly contested and the winner was found in W. Iggulden, Lock's Hill Nurseries, Frome, who put up the following varieties: Mme. G. Rivol, C. H. Totty, Lady Talbot, Mrs. Norman Davis, Gladys Blackburn, William Gee, F. S. Vallis, Mrs. A. T. Miller, Frank Payne, Reginald Vallis and Mrs. W. Iggulden. The best display of chrysanthemums on a circular floor space of 200 superficial feet (first prize, £8 8s), was won by W. Howe, gardener to Lady Tate, Streatham Hill. For forty-eight Japanese blooms, distinct (first prize, challenge cup and £9), many of the best growers entered and the place of honor was awarded to T. Walker, gardener to A. G. Hammersley, Esq., Bourne End. His best blooms were F. S. Vallis, Lady Talbot, Edith Smith, Mrs. A. T. Miller, Mrs. Norman Davis, J. H. Silsbury, Mrs. G. Mileham and President Viger.

A large gold medal was awarded to Norman Davis, Framfield, for a fine decorative display, the leading features of which were bold pyramidal stands of Mrs. Norman Davis, Mrs. A. T. Miller, Miss Lilian Hall, Pockett's Crimson, Clara Wells, etc.

Exhibit of W. Wells & Co.

W. Wells & Co., Merstham, put up a most interesting and pretty group and were awarded a gold medal. By the way, W. Wells, the senior partner, is at present in the United States, picking up all the points he can gather in connection with his favorite flower. No doubt he is in evidence at the leading shows. The group included Alice Lemon, a new pink Japanese; Robert Thorpe, a new single white, and Phosphorescence, a most promising market variety in the way of Source d'Or, but a vast improvement upon it. The coloring is intense.

W. J. Godfrey, Exmouth, also secured a gold medal. His exhibit contained promising novelties in Laura Hill, a terra cotta Japanese with straight, broad petals, and Acquisition, a fine yellow Japanese variety with broad, curling petals.

Dwarf Pot Plants.

Butler Bros., who are among the leading growers of chrysanthemums as pot plants for Covent Garden, demonstrated remarkable culture in dwarf, bushy plants, about eighteen inches long and the same in width, carrying on an average nine blooms, disbudded, grown in 5-inch pots. As decorative plants these are now much in demand, the small size of the pots enhancing their value for the variety of purposes they may be put to.

Another important exhibit to which a gold medal was awarded was that from Philip Ladds, Swanley Junction, one of the leaders in the chrysanthemum cut flower trade for Covent Garden. He made an extensive and imposing display of varieties as grown for market, arranged in fine decorative style.

H. J. Jones, Lewisham; H. Cannell & Sons, Swansley, and many other growers were well represented, and quite a break from the general run of the exhibits was found in a collection of roses grown in the open and exhibited by Hobbies, Ltd., Dereham. It was remarkable to see in November such fine blooms of Hugh Dickson, Mme. Abel Chatenay, Betty, Mme. Melanie Soupert and many others, and yet everyone was grumbling about the weather. John Green, the genial treasurer of the National Chrysanthemum Society and president of Hobbies, Ltd., evidently knows how to circumvent the weather conditions, for he practically shows roses all the year around. BEE.

BENEFIT FROM FLOWER SHOWS.

[A paper by J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., read at a meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club, November 11, 1909.]

The question, "What do the retailer, the wholesaler and the grower derive from the flower shows?" could be answered in many ways and a lengthy paper written, on account of the many benefits each branch of the profession derives from flower shows. I shall, however, just try to point out a few of the most important facts pertaining to each branch of the trade.

The retailer derives much from the flower shows, especially if he is alive to the situation and takes an active part in the exhibitions. While most retailers who do not exhibit give as a reason too much trouble and expense, yet it is a fact, nevertheless, that a well managed flower show is the best educator and cheapest advertiser known to the profession today. When you find as many private individuals ready to donate time and money to prizes for an exhibition which they consider educational and elevating to mankind, as is the case in flower shows, it is only the drones of the profession who will not grasp at the opportunity to advertise themselves, as well as help the good movement along by taking active part in the exhibitions.

The retailer belongs to the only branch of our profession which comes in direct touch with the consumer. The more ways and means he can provide to create a demand for the product, the more he is benefited. Where is that means more at hand than at a flower show?

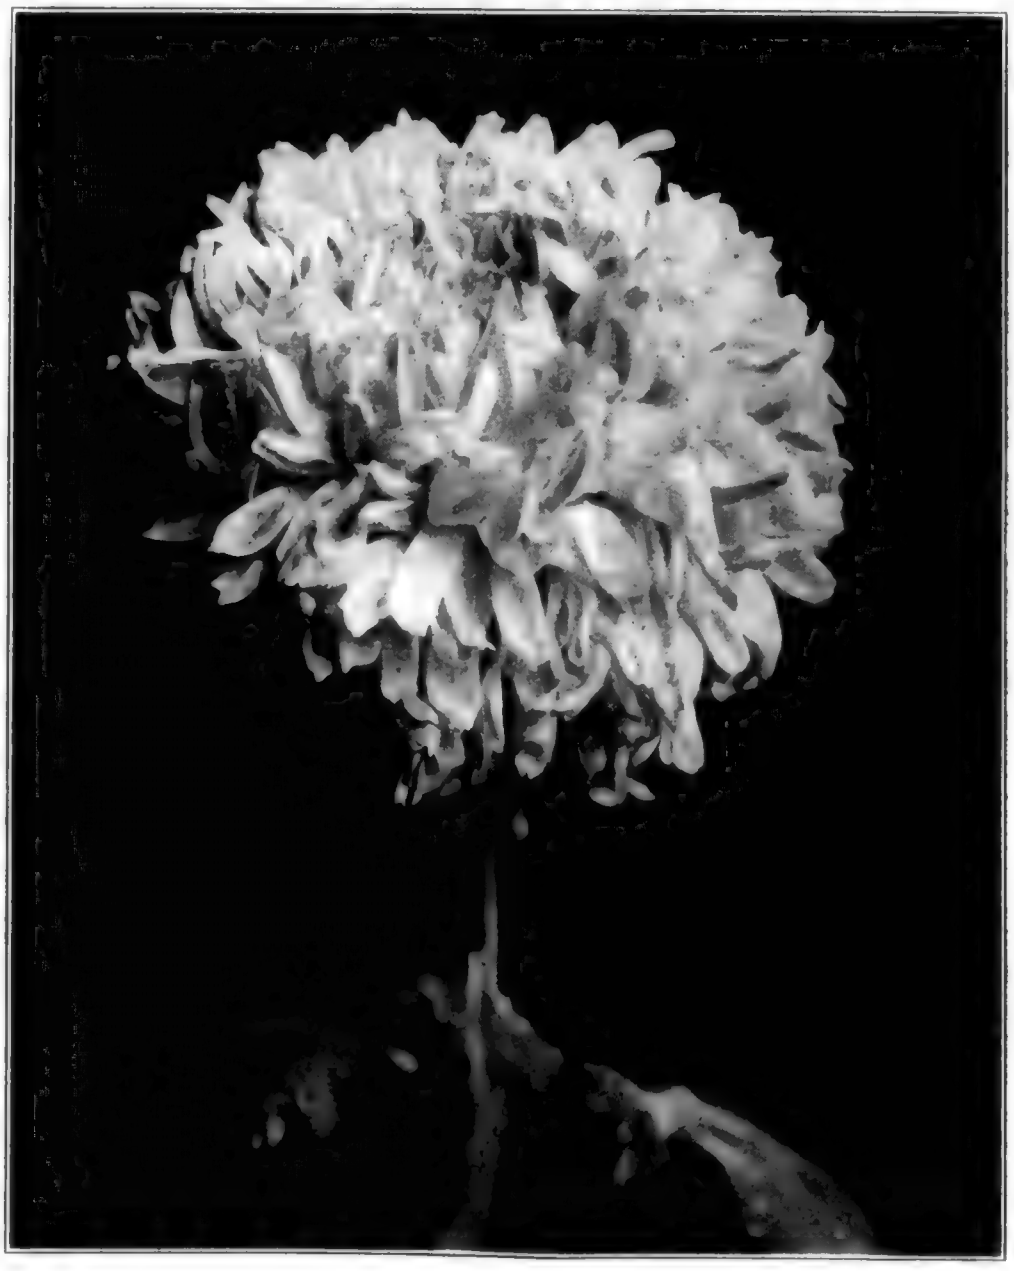
The Products of Old Kentucky.

Where can it be procured for less money than at a flower show, where he is paid for filling his space and where newspaper items are published for him (advertising which he could not purchase at all), for absolutely nothing? I think, gentlemen, this is sufficient reason why a retailer derives much from a flower show.

Between Two Fires.

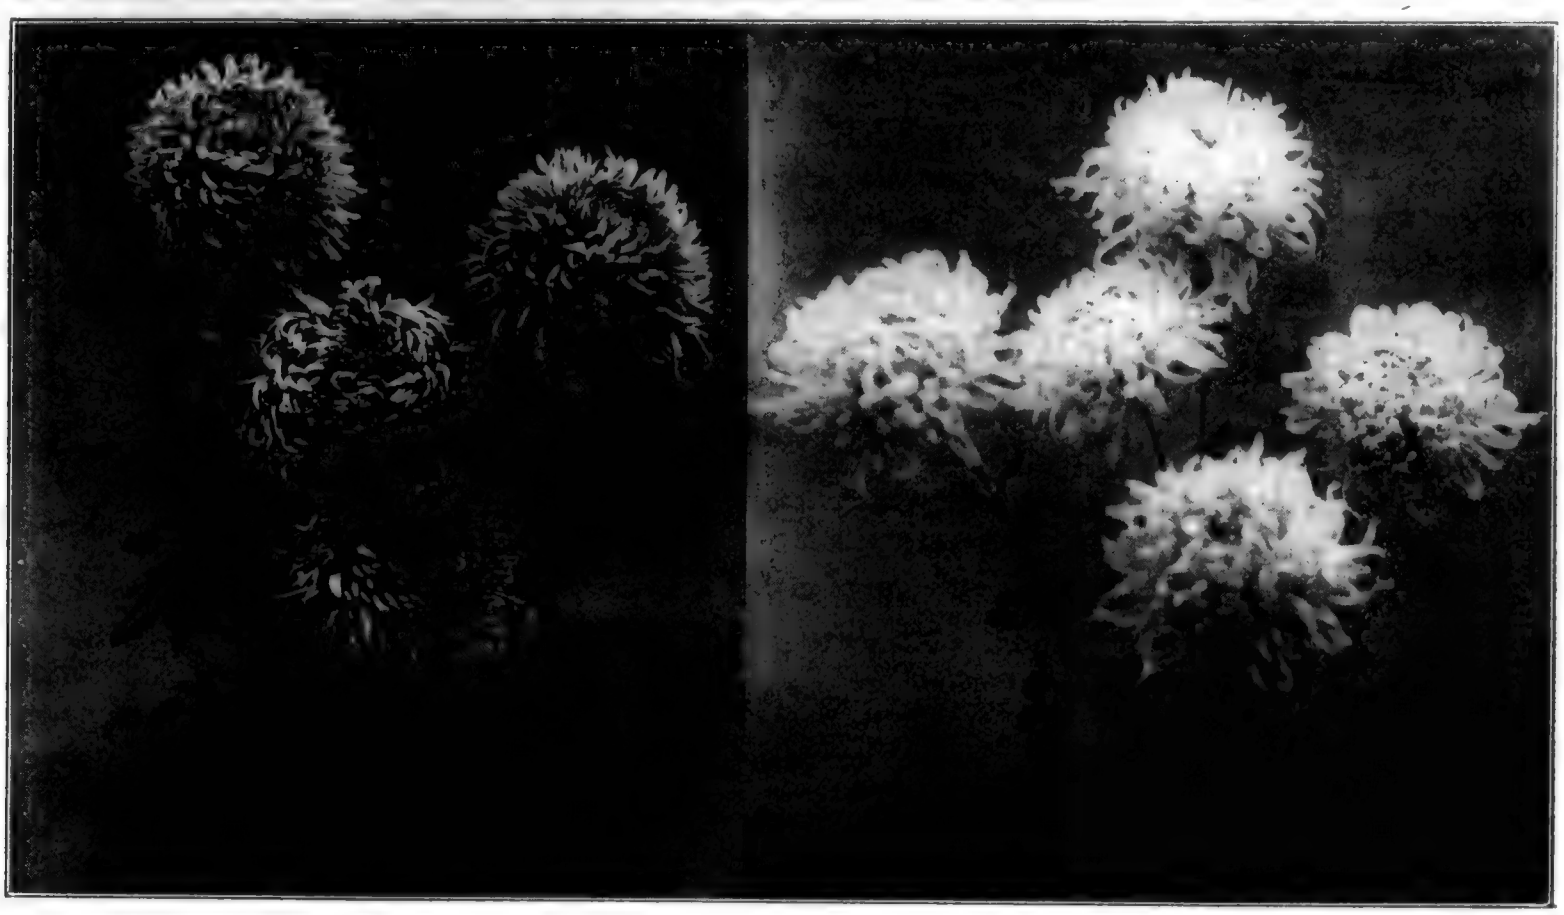
Next, the wholesaler. Poor fellow! I always have had a soft spot in my heart for this unhappy medium, who stands between two fires all the time. The grower expects high prices and the retailer wants to buy cheap; so in steps the wholesaler and says, "We will split the difference," and it goes. I really believe that if it were not for the wholesaler, the retailer and grower would not be on nearly as good terms as they are. On one thing we can all agree, I am sure, and that is: If the retailer can devise a scheme by which he can create a stronger demand for his goods, the wholesaler is also benefited by it. So the foregoing reasons will suffice, also, to show that the wholesaler is benefited by flower shows as well.

Now for the grower. When we talk about the grower I begin to feel a little more familiar with my subject, for I have been a victim to this branch for nearly a quarter of a century—and I only hope I may continue so for another quarter. If flower shows are a benefit to the retailer and the wholesaler, they are doubly so to the grower. On the success of either of the other two branches of the trade depends entirely (and well it should) the prosperity of the grower.



Slighted Opportunities.

I am sorry to say it, but I think I can say it without fear of contradiction, that no producer of any article, be it manufactured or grown, is so slow in taking advantage of exhibiting his wares as the average grower of flowers and plants. We can readily recall where farmers and stock raisers, as well as manufacturers, pay exorbitant prices for space at various exhibitions and fairs to show their product. Does the grower have to do that? No. On the contrary, he is paid, and in most cases paid well, for his exhibition, and in addition he gets just as much, if not more, advertisement for his goods as any other profession. I hope the day is not far distant when all the growers will see the flower shows in the light in which they are already seen by so many of our leaders, who are helping to make the shows a grand success everywhere.



I hope that the contents of this paper will be received by all who hear it in the spirit it is given, and that every retailer, wholesaler and grower in St. Louis, in fact everywhere, will join me in giving three cheers for the flower shows, and all hail to the men who work so hard in making them a success.

MUMS IN KENTUCKY.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph made at the establishment of the Burdell Floral Co., Bowling Green, Ky. This concern grows all its chrysanthemums in solid beds, with eight inches of soil on four inches of cinders. Some idea of the size of the blooms can be gained by comparing them with the other features of the picture. The little girl is 8 years old and stands four feet six inches high. The Whitmani fern is in a 12-inch pan and has a spread of over five feet. The varieties of mum are White Chadwick, Timothy Eaton and Roosevelt. The blooms facing the front, with the dark center, are Roosevelt. Those just in front of the little girl are Chadwick and the highest are Eaton. This picture was taken the latter part of October, which gives an idea of the season of these varieties in that section.

Chrysanthemum Mrs. W. Arnold.

Seedling Chrysanthemums Raised by M. D. Schmidt & Son, Dayton, Ohio.

SCHMIDT'S SEEDLINGS.

M. D. Schmidt & Son, Dayton, O., like so many other growers, have for a number of years been experimenting with the raising of seedlings and have produced several new chrysanthemums of merit, two of which are illustrated in this issue. The white seedling is probably the best of their lot, the flowers being extremely large, firm in texture and of excellent lasting qualities. The only possible criticism of the flower is that it is flat, which brings it in the exhibition class, rather than the commercial section. The color is a glistening white and the stem is wiry and stiff, carrying the flower perfectly erect.

The pink seedling is also a robust grower, of unusually clear color. When finished the blooms are almost round and Schmidt & Son have cut flowers ten inches in diameter grown on plants that were carried up to two stems, as was the case with the plants on which the blooms photographed were grown.

Schmidt & Son also have an excellent seedling of an unusual shade of tan, quite distinct from any other variety. They have made no plans for the disposition of these sorts, but doubtless they will find their way into the hands of other growers in due season.

ELDORADO, PA.—A. S. Myers is interesting himself in the organization of a fire company here. S. Morris, secretary-treasurer of the Rosedale Land & Improvement Co., will donate a lot for the company's use.

PLUMOSUS TURNS YELLOW.

I am having trouble with my Asparagus plumosus on account of its turning yellow. I cannot blame the watering for this. I have noticed that when an angleworm got into the soil he soon put it in such condition that it quickly turned yellow. My plumosus is now mostly in 4-inch pots, having been put there from 2-inch. Do you suppose I am using too much manure (one part to three parts soil), or is my manure too green, or should I use a more open soil? I cannot get leaf-mold here, but can get unbroken buffalo sod, either in heavy loam or quite sandy. Is it advisable to use chopped sphagnum in soil to make it more open? I am located in northeastern Colorado.

L. J. R.

Asparagus likes a good, rich, heavy soil, with proper drainage underneath, so I hardly think that your soil is too heavy. It may contain too much alkali. Try soil from another locality. Chopped sphagnum can be used to make soil more porous, if that is desired. Usually very old rotted manure and sand are better.

A. F. J. B.

LILIES FOR EASTER.

Kindly tell us whether we can force our lilies for Easter. Though ordered in August, we did not receive them until the following dates: Lilium candidum, October 3; Lilium giganteum, October 27; Lilium Harrisii, November 1. They were all potted and put in coldframes the day they arrived. If we cannot force them for Easter, can we successfully hold them for Decoration day, and if so, how?

A. W. F. & S.

I think you should be able to get a good many of your lilies in flower for Easter, which next year comes unusually early. L. candidum should have been received before the middle of September. These will be all the better if they have been kept outdoors to get several good freezings. Many failures in the culture of this lily can be traced to a failure to properly treat them in the early stages of growth. Plants you want for Easter should be housed about December 15, and given a night temperature of 50 degrees. This should not be increased more than 5 degrees at any stage of their growth. If you want candidums for Memorial day, hold them in a coldframe until the end of March and then place them in heat.

Harrisiis potted November 1 should flower by the end of March. This is a late date to receive this variety. Place the bulbs of these and L. longiflorum giganteum in a house kept at 45 degrees at night, under a bench where they will not get drip, or in a shed. In a coldframe now growth will be too slow. Do not give them much warmth until well rooted. Then they want 60 degrees at night. This can be increased 5 degrees when the buds show. If you feel you have not the proper forcing facilities, you can easily hold the longiflorum giganteums for Memorial day in a cold house, but Harrisiis would hardly keep. In the event of your preferring to retard the giganteums, keep them in a frame for some weeks yet. Scatter some dry leaves over them for protection and use mats to exclude frost.

CELESTIAL PEPPERS.

What is the reason for our celestial peppers not getting red, after having been full of berries for six weeks? They are being grown for Christmas, and are now in 5-inch pots. The seeds were sown in April, grown in a poinsettia house most of the summer and have been fed heavily with bone meal, potash in the soil and liquid manure water for two months.

E. F. C.

Your peppers will color all right in good season. Give them a warm, sunny house and keep them well supplied with water. These peppers prefer more heat than the solanums or Jerusalem cherries; 55 to 60 degrees at night will suit them until the fruit is colored, after which you can hold them in a cool house.

The Products of Old Kentucky.

Where can it be procured for less money than at a flower show, where he is paid for filling his space and where newspaper items are published for him (advertising which he could not purchase at all), for absolutely nothing? I think, gentlemen, this is sufficient reason why a retailer derives much from a flower show.

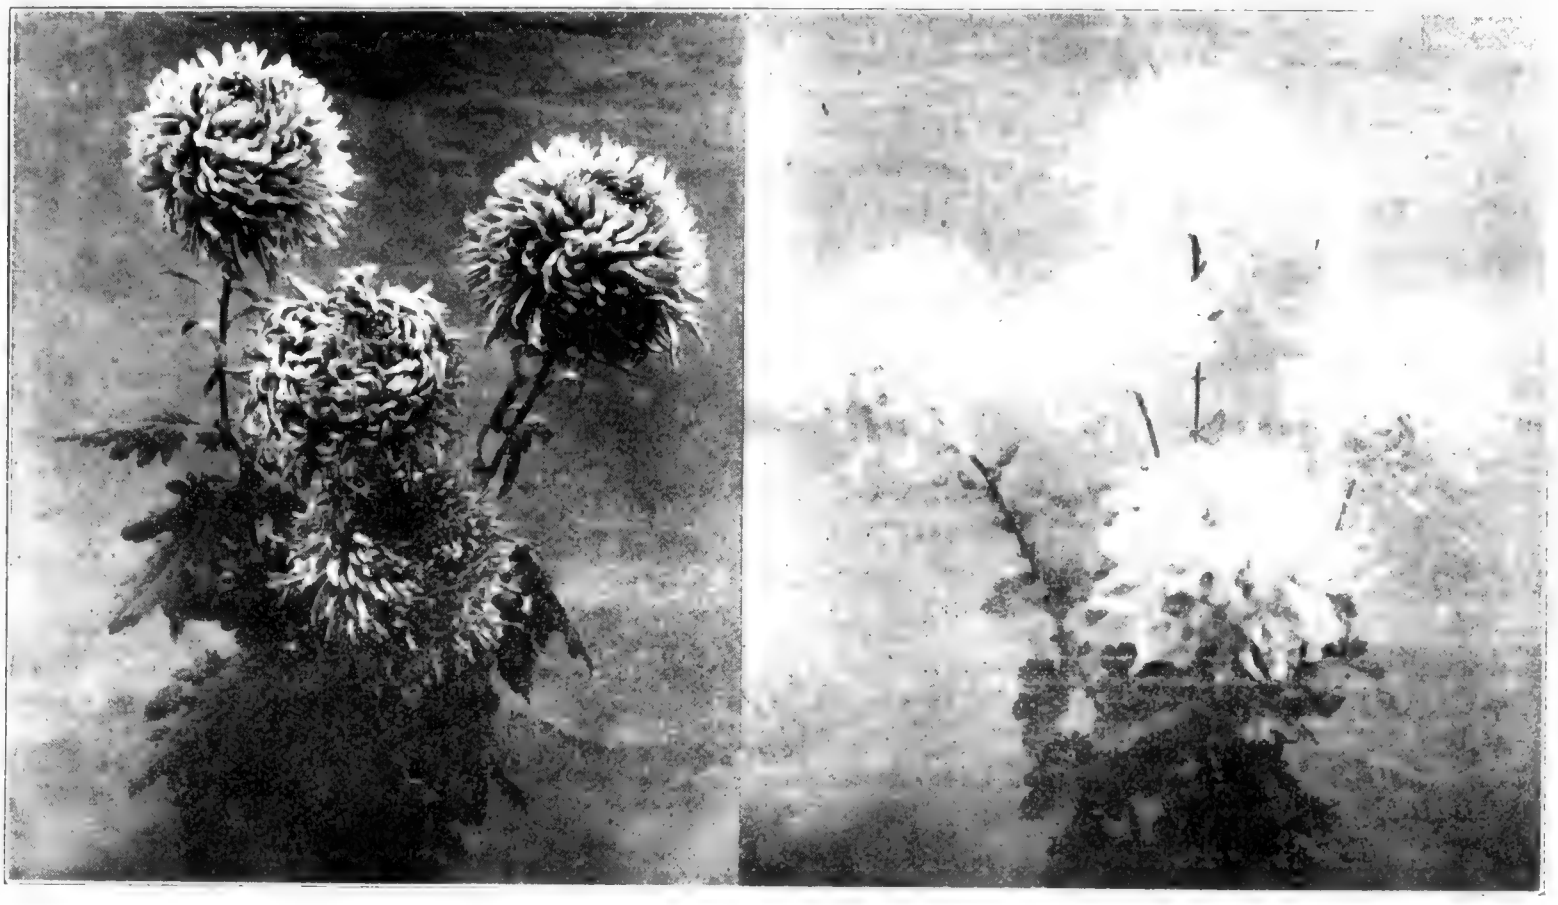
Between Two Fires.

Next, the wholesaler. Poor fellow! I always have had a soft spot in my heart for this unhappy medium, who stands between two fires all the time. The grower expects high prices and the retailer wants to buy cheap; so in steps the wholesaler and says, "We will split the difference," and it goes. I really believe that if it were not for the wholesaler, the retailer and grower would not be on nearly as good terms as they are. On one thing we can all agree, I am sure, and that is: If the retailer can devise a scheme by which he can create a stronger demand for his goods, the wholesaler is also benefited by it. So the foregoing reasons will suffice, also, to show that the wholesaler is benefited by flower shows as well.

Now for the grower. When we talk about the grower I begin to feel a little more familiar with my subject, for I have been a victim to this branch for nearly a quarter of a century and I only hope I may continue so for another quarter. If flower shows are a benefit to the retailer and the wholesaler, they are doubly so to the grower. On the success of either of the other two branches of the trade depends entirely (and well it should) the prosperity of the grower.

Slighted Opportunities.

I am sorry to say it, but I think I can say it without fear of contradiction, that no producer of any article, be it manufactured or grown, is so slow in taking advantage of exhibiting his wares as the average grower of flowers and plants. We can readily recall where farmers and stock raisers, as well as manufacturers, pay exorbitant prices for space at various exhibitions and fairs to show their product. Does the grower have to do that? No. On the contrary, he is paid, and in most cases paid well, for his exhibition, and in addition he gets just as much, if not more, advertisement for his goods as any other profession. I hope the day is not far distant when all the growers will see the flower shows in the light in which they are already seen by so many of our leaders who are helping to make the shows a grand success everywhere.



I hope that the contents of this paper will be received by all who hear it in the spirit it is given, and that every retailer, wholesaler and grower in St. Louis, in fact everywhere, will join me in giving three cheers for the flower shows and all hail to the men who work so hard in making them a success.

MUMS IN KENTUCKY.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph made at the establishment of the Bardell Floral Co., Bowling Green, Ky. This concern grows all its chrysanthemums in solid beds, with eight inches of soil on four inches of cinders. Some idea of the size of the blooms can be gained by comparing them with the other features of the picture. The little girl is 8 years old and stands four feet six inches high. The Whitmani fern is in a 12-inch pan and has a spread of over five feet. The varieties of mum are White Chadwick, Timothy Eaton and Roosevelt. The blooms facing the front, with the dark center, are Roosevelt. Those just in front of the little girl are Chadwick and the highest are Eaton. This picture was taken the latter part of October, which gives an idea of the season of these varieties in that section.

SCHMIDT'S SEEDLINGS.

M. D. Schmidt & Son, Dayton, O., like so many other growers, have for a number of years been experimenting with the raising of seedlings and have produced several new chrysanthemums of merit, two of which are illustrated in this issue. The white seedling is probably the best of their lot, the flowers being extremely large, firm in texture and of excellent lasting qualities. The only possible criticism of the flower is that it is flat, which brings it in the exhibition class, rather than the commercial section. The color is a glistening white and the stem is wiry and stiff, carrying the flower perfectly erect.

The pink seedling is also a robust grower, of unusually clear color. When finished the blooms are almost round and Schmidt & Son have cut flowers ten inches in diameter grown on plants that were carried up to two stems, as was the case with the plants on which the blooms photographed were grown.

Schmidt & Son also have an excellent seedling of an unusual shade of tan, quite distinct from any other variety. They have made no plans for the disposition of these sorts, but doubtless they will find their way into the hands of other growers in due season.

ELDORADO, PA. A. S. Myers is interesting himself in the organization of a fire company here. S. Morris, secretary-treasurer of the Rosedale Land & Improvement Co., will donate a lot for the company's use.

PLUMOSUS TURNS YELLOW.

I am having trouble with my Asparagus plumosus on account of its turning yellow. I cannot blame the watering for this. I have noticed that when an angleworm got into the soil he soon put it in such condition that it quickly turned yellow. My plumosus is now mostly in 4-inch pots, having been put there from 2-inch. Do you suppose I am using too much manure—one part to three parts soil—, or is my manure too green, or should I use a more open soil? I cannot get leaf mold here, but can get unbroken buffalo sod, either in heavy loam or quite sandy. Is it advisable to use chopped sphagnum in soil to make it more open? I am located in northeastern Colorado.

L. J. K.

Asparagus likes a good, rich, heavy soil, with proper drainage underneath, so I hardly think that your soil is too heavy. It may contain too much alkali. Try soil from another locality. Chopped sphagnum can be used to make soil more porous, if that is desired. Usually very old rotted manure and sand are better.

LILIES FOR EASTER.

Kindly tell us whether we can force our lilies for Easter. Though ordered in August, we did not receive them until the following dates: Lilium candidum, October 3; Lilium giganteum, October 27; Lilium Harrisii, November 1. They were all potted and put in coldframes the day they arrived. If we cannot force them for Easter, can we successfully hold them for Decoration day, and if so, how?

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Primulas.

Plants of Primula Sinensis are now in many cases pushing up their flower spikes. Some are already coming into bloom and a few will be in quite good shape for Thanksgiving. Primulas are not plants that sell at a high price and they are almost frowned upon by some of the high-class stores. However, when well grown and nicely flowered, they are attractive and possess vastly better keeping qualities in the average dwelling house than such plants as poinsettias, Lorraine begonias or azaleas. Furthermore, it being possible to sell them profitably at a comparatively low price, they come within the reach of those who are not habitual plant purchasers, and it is customers of this class that the average country florist is glad to cater to.

Allow the plants sufficient space so that the leaves are just free. They love a house where they get an abundance of fresh air and where there is none of that strong smell of fire heat so distasteful to many plants of this class. They will stand any sun we may now get, without shade, but must be carefully watered to prevent their wilting. A severe drying out will spoil many flowers. Afford a dose of weak liquid manure once in five or six days, and if the foliage turns a trifle pale use a little soot water or Clay's fertilizer to color it up.

Primula obconica is not usually in good flower for Christmas. A few flower spikes only are showing yet. It requires more water than P. Sinensis and will appreciate more liberal feeding. P. Kewensis is the most robust growing of the whole family and seems destined to become a useful and popular commercial variety. While it will flower in 4-inch and 5-inch pots, to have it in good condition 6-inch and 7-inch pots should be used. It is a thirsty subject and can be fed much more heavily than either P. Sinensis of P. obconica. It does not flower in season for Christmas, but from the middle of January to the end of March is one of the best decorative flowering plants yet introduced.

Poinsettias.

Many inquiries are now coming to hand relative to poinsettias and how to prevent loss of foliage on them. A common error is to keep the pans or pots too close together. This inevitably causes some of the lower leaves to fall. It is also partially responsible for sourness at the root caused by an excess of moisture. The surest cure for this is to spread out the plants and allow the sun to reach the pots. Bracts are now forming and it is at this time that judicious feeding will immensely benefit them. Do not attempt it unless sure the pots are well filled with roots and capable of absorbing it. The plants cannot have too light a house, and, to hold them stocky, should be as close to the glass as possible. A temperature of 60 degrees at night is a good one. A higher figure means leggy plants, which are not wanted. A lower one is often productive of pale foliage and too slow development of the flowers.

Lilies.

Thanksgiving Harrisii lilies are now opening and can easily be held in a cool house. The Christmas crop has buds of a good size, two to three inches long. These will be kept in a warm, moist house, 65 to 70 degrees at night, until the first buds burst, when a drop of 10 degrees in temperature will be given, unless the backward condition of the plants necessitates forcing tactics. A spraying overhead early each afternoon is beneficial and, besides helping to develop the buds, helps to keep down aphis. Fumigate or spray for the last named pest. It will speedily spoil the beauty of many flowers if allowed any leeway.

Some lilies for Easter are now six inches high. These are being kept in a cool, airy house. A further batch has just pushed growths through the pots, while the last lot of multiflorums and giganteums, owing to delay in shipments, have only just been potted. Any lilies for Easter should now have the growths started, or at least have the pots full of roots and be ready to push into heat at short notice. There is a little over four months left between now and Easter, none too long a time to flower them in. Throw away any plants coming with diseased foliage. It is a pure waste of space to cling to them in hopes that they may grow out of it, something they never do.

Hybrid Perpetual Roses.

November is a good month in which to plant hardy roses. The wood is now plump and well ripened. It is a pity more are not set out at this season, for they will give a much better account of themselves next summer than such as are planted in spring. Never allow the roots to become dry. Plant rather deeply, covering the buds or grafts three to four inches, and firm the ground thoroughly about them. Of course, roses all delight in land which contains plenty of humus and which has been deeply plowed or spaded. One advantage gained in planting hardy roses now is that all stock is freshly dug and has not been stored in a cellar over winter or subjected to much handling or drying at the root. As between own-root and budded roses for outdoor planting, the latter possess more vigor and are longer lived.

The growing of hybrids in pots is less practiced than a decade ago, when we had less variety in the rambler class. Some florists, however, continue to grow a batch each year and there is no better time than the present to pot them. We like to leave the plants outdoors for a time after potting, protecting the pots with straw to prevent breaking in case of severe frost. Roses prefer a rather heavy soil, and if some clay can be added to a naturally light soil, the plants will show a marked improvement in their growth.

Weather conditions are still favorable and, with Indian summer temperatures prevailing, it may seem passing strange to suggest protection to hardy roses. We never know after this date how soon zero weather may come in our northern states, and the necessary protection to hybrid perpetuals should be given just before the ground freezes up. Of the various protecting methods, none is so good as drawing earth up to the stems of the plants. Where the plants are pruned back hard each spring, this is much the simplest and safest plan. Leaves, straw, manure and other materials as coverings are none of them equal to mother earth. We can be morally certain that such wood as is covered with soil will be green and fresh when exposed in spring.

In the case of hybrid teas, an increasingly popular and persistently blooming class of hardy roses, soil protection is not always sufficient and a safer plan is to dig up the plants and bury them outdoors on land which is well drained, or better still, plant them thickly in coldframes over winter. With rambler roses in some of the coldest states, protection is absolutely necessary. Much the easiest plan is to cut them loose and lay them on the ground, where a little later in the season some evergreen boughs spread over them will usually carry them through nicely. Crimson Rambler is a little hardier than the pink varieties. In some states none of these will require any protection, while in others they will be simply killed to the snow line if left exposed.

Hardy Perennial Borders.

Any delayed planting should be completed without delay. This has been a wonderful fall for outdoor work, and the absence of any severe frosts causes some plants to carry foliage almost as green and fresh as in midsummer. Late bulbs, such as Spanish and English iris, are best planted now, while spaces for hardy lilies should be covered with straw or leaves, as these generally are not to hand in some cases before December. All herbaceous borders look neater in winter with the tops cut from the plants. There is no need to haul away these tops, unless you are fastidious as to appearances. Let them lie on the leaves or other mulching material which the borders should get toward the end of the present month. It pays to mulch all perennials, no matter how hardy they may be. The great injury comes in February and March, when hot suns following sharp frosts cause many of the plants to be loosened or thrown from the ground when not mulched.

Watering Evergreens.

Last summer was unusually warm and dry over most of the country, and both summer and fall have been noted for a marked deficiency in rainfall in many states. Before applying the regular winter mulch to evergreens, particularly such broad-leaved varieties as hybrid rhododendrons, andromedas and kalmias, it will pay to delay mulching until we get a soaking rain, or, failing that, give the plants a thorough watering artificially. Every spring we hear lamentations about the damage wrought to evergreens by the severe winter. It is far more frequently lack of moisture at the roots than cold which kills so many plants. An evergreen, no matter whether it be a conifer or a broad-leaved one, will stand the average North American winter all right if moist at the root, but where soil conditions approach dryness, the death roll is bound to be heavy, especially if, as is sometimes the case, no moisture can percolate the soil for two or three months.

A prominent nurseryman remarked a few days ago that he had come to the conclusion that it paid to water evergreens well before the ground froze up and he proposed to soak several acres of stock this fall, including not only rhododendrons, but retinosporas, abies, piceas and other varieties. This successful grower attributes his light winter losses to watering practiced in late fall, when the soil was insufficiently moist to carry evergreens through the winter. Growers of stock on a small scale might well emulate this example, particularly in the case of stock planted during the present year.

TOO COOL FOR ROSES.

Will you kindly tell me through the REVIEW what varieties of roses are best to grow in a greenhouse where the night temperature is 45 to 48 degrees? The house is twelve feet to the ridge, and has concrete walls five feet high. H. M.

There are no varieties that can be grown profitably at this temperature. It would be possible to get a few flowers from most of the varieties used for forcing, but ten degrees more is necessary for success. Golden Gate and Ivory may suffer less than most other varieties at this temperature. RIBES.

WHITE ROSES COMING GREEN.

What is the cause of white blooms coming green? C. L. W.

There are many causes for white blooms coming green. Among the most common is allowing the temperature at certain stages of growth to take a heavy drop. This is more frequently the cause than any other condition, and happens most frequently in the fall, when the growth is soft. Gross feeding can also produce the same effect. RIBES.

FERTILIZER FOR ROSES.

Under separate cover I will send a box containing some soil from my rose bed. The soil, when put in, contained one-fifth rotted cow manure, and added to this was a 3-inch pot of bone meal to the bushel.

The roses were put in July 1 and have made good growth. Some of them have new shoots coming now. Some of the buds have been allowed to mature. I should like advice as to what fertilizer to use and the quantity. There has been nothing in the soil. C. L. W.

This soil is of fairly good quality, but deficient in fiber. The compost of soil and manure is in propor proportions, as is also the addition of bone meal. There is no reason why good stock should not be produced.

A sprinkling of wood ashes once in five or six weeks would be of benefit. Liquid feeding, made from fresh cow manure, and used once a week if the weather is bright, will give vigor to the plants and size to the blooms. RIBES.

MEALY BUG AND MILDEW.

I wish to ask for your advice, as I am troubled with a scale bug on my Climbing Perle rose. It is a little grayish bug and it gets around the joints of the leaves and turns them yellow. I should like to be informed as to how to check the pest. G. H. R.

The insect on the rose leaves is mealy bug, Coccus adonidum. If this insect is attacked when it first makes its appearance, it is easily exterminated. Where there is a good force of water it is easily destroyed by the use of the syringe. Where the pest has got a good hold and is very numerous, it can be destroyed by a weak solution of kerosene emulsion.

A critical examination of the leaves revealed also traces of mildew. Take notice of this, because it is a worse trouble than mealy bug. RIBES.

BLACK SPOT ON ROSES.

I have a small house of roses and the varieties are Killarney, Richmond, Chatenay and a few plants of My Maryland. There is black spot on them and I have been trying to get rid of it, but without success. I run my house at 54 to 56 degrees at night and 63 to 65 degrees on cloudy days. I syringe once a week and I keep my plants wet. They are in good health and free from mildew. C. K. O.

The surest remedy for black spot is the copper solution (cuprum). This should be applied once a week, using a nozzle that will make a fine spray. Every part of the leaves and stems should be thoroughly wet.

Although the temperature may be kept right, it is still possible to have an atmosphere in the house unfavorable to roses and favorable to the growth of black spot. Keep the atmosphere dry and a good circulation of air in the house, by putting on some heat and giving ample ventilation. Syringing once a week is rather a risky proceeding, as at rose temperature it will be difficult to keep spider in check. It is quite usual to syringe every bright day, and good results follow. RIBES.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE BEYER STORE.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken in the store of the Beyer Floral Co., South Bend, Ind., and serves to give an idea how good a flower town South Bend must be. This store has all the facilities for handling trade that are to be found in the big metropolitan stores, and of course no such facilities would be maintained if there was not the business to justify them.

The Beyers, father and sons, are progressive people and good advertisers. They constantly keep up a first-class window display, in fact, leading the merchants of their city in this respect, and they believe it is this feature of their work which brings them the large volume of business they handle.

VALUE OF INSECTICIDES.

[A paper by Prof. Tennyson D. Jarvis, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Can., read at the twelfth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, in Toronto, November 11, 1909.]

It is difficult to give any precise idea of the relative values of insecticides, since the kinds of plants and insects to which insecticides are applied, the density of the foliage, the condition of the greenhouses, and perhaps also the cost of the material have to be accurately considered.

William Hunt, the florist at the Ontario Agricultural College, at Guelph, and D. Manly Jobbins, of New Brunswick, N. J., have devoted a great deal of time and attention to insecticides and their potency, as well as their relative values, and are therefore, to a large degree, authorities upon this subject.

In my discourse before you respecting the various matters to be considered in forming any adequate notion of the relative value of insecticides, it may be necessary for the purpose of illustration to give at least the names of the more common and important insects with which we have to deal. It is, however, not my intention to enter into any minute description of them, as their characteristics, their life history and habits are already so well known to you.

I desire to mention here the white fly as one of the most common as well as, perhaps, the worst pests which infest our greenhouses. It is a small, active insect, easily recognized by its characteristic white and wax-like secretion, which completely covers all the parts of the body. The plant louse, known to the florist as the green fly and the black fly, comes next in the series of pests and is perhaps about as common and as injurious as the white fly. It is a small, soft bodied, green, brown or black insect, with long legs and long, flexible antennæ. The scale insect is usually small and shielded by a scale over it, and is, with but little exception, stationary. The mealy bug, a member of this family, is more mobile, and, with its powdery secretion over its body, makes a marked contrast to the other species of these insects. Mites and thrips may also be mentioned as common greenhouse pests; they are very active and are most numerous on the under sides of the leaves. These being the most common insects upon which our tests for the relative value of insecticides are to be made, we intend to limit the insecticides to those most commonly used by modern florists.

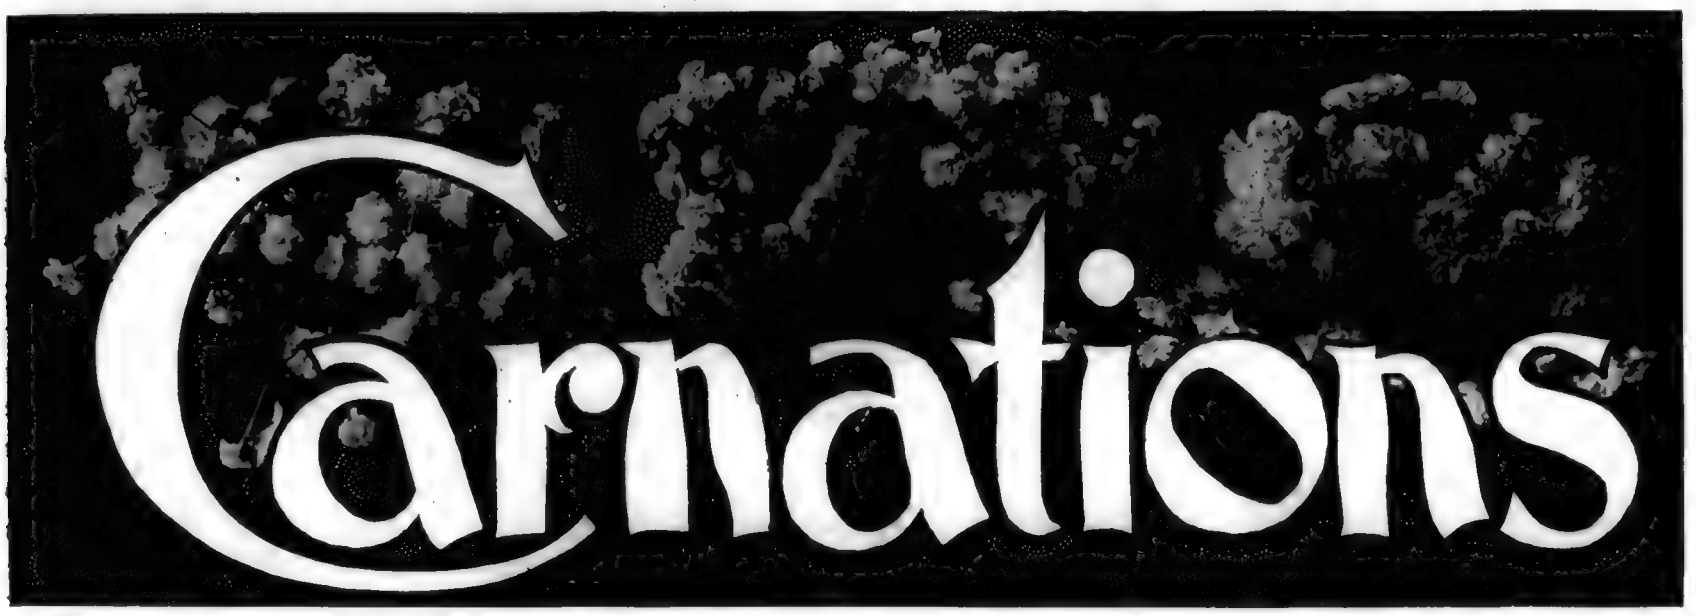
Tobacco Stems.

The time and labor required to prepare this material, the refuse from cigar factories, for fumigation, the discomfort in using it, as also the likelihood of injury to flowering and tender plants, render this means somewhat undesirable. It is the old and out-of-date remedy, which florists used for want of a better one. The cost in actual outlay also exceeds that of any other remedy of equal potency, being about 5 cents per thousand cubic feet of space for effective fumigation. The difficulty in keeping tobacco dry and preventing it from getting moldy renders this means of fumigation almost valueless, and few growers on a large scale fumigate now with tobacco.

Aphis Punk for Fumigation.

The fumigation with this means, used as directed, gives very effective results for plant lice. The material is brown paper strips saturated with strong solution of nicotine. It is sold in boxes of twelve sheets in a box, retailed at 60 cents per box; by the case containing one dozen boxes, or one gross of sheets in all, $6 to $7 per case. It takes about one box of twelve sheets to fumigate thoroughly a greenhouse of plants infested with green aphis, containing about 30,000 cubic feet of space. For black aphis or black fly a ten per cent stronger solution would be necessary; the cost per thousand cubic feet of space is about 2 cents. The material is easy of application. It is also less injurious to flowering plants than fumigating with tobacco stems. The cost of storage and labor is comparatively nil when compared with the cost of tobacco stems.

There are also several other preparations of nicotine for fumigating purposes, but the one mentioned is most generally used when fumigation with nicotine is used at all. A greenhouse 21x160 feet and eleven feet to the ridge would cost from 50 to 60 cents for enough aphis punk to thoroughly fumigate it.



Nicotine Solution for Spraying.

There are several of these preparations made and sold. They are highly concentrated extracts of tobacco. A pint bottle costs from $1.50 to $2, and is diluted 400 to 600 parts water to one of the preparation. Mr. Hunt has found it advisable to use the 400 to one of the mixture in order to give thoroughly satisfactory results for green aphis. For black aphis on chrysanthemums a ten or fifteen per cent stronger solution is necessary, especially on old stock plants. The cost of this material is about the same per thousand cubic feet as for aphis punk. The cost of time and labor in preparing the solution and of application would be slightly more than fumigating with aphis punk, but not as heavy an item in this respect as the cost of fumigating with tobacco stems. The cost of nicotine solutions, to be effective, depends much upon the kinds of plants sprayed, the density of foliage, and whether the plants are badly infested with insect pests or not. As a rule, it is generally considered that applications of nicotine solutions are from thirty to fifty per cent cheaper, when considered from all points of view, than fumigating by the materials before mentioned. CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Disbudding.

Although the operation of disbudding is generally conceded to be indispensable in the production of high grade blooms, it is doubtful if it is practiced to the extent it should be and with a clear understanding of the advantage to be derived. Too often it is regarded as a necessary evil, as something to be gotten over with the least possible exertion or perhaps postponed until the mass of surplus buds presents so distracting an appearance as to dishearten the most patient grower.

Primarily the object sought is to divert the energy which would otherwise be used in the development of side buds, into increased growth in the main one. We cannot, however, hope for an increase equal to the growth which would have taken place in these side buds, had they been allowed to remain, but we may be sure that if removed soon after appearance, there is no appreciable loss of plant energy. Inasmuch as only a part of the conserved energy will be utilized to increase the size of the bloom, a portion will go to strengthen the stem, calyx, etc.

Some years ago the question was put to me if disbudding did not cause abnormal growth in the partially developed main bud, thereby increasing the tendency to burst. Repeated experiments fail to prove this theory correct. In fact, the evidence would seem to show improvement in the opposite direction, provided the operation is properly conducted.

When and How.

Instead of allowing a mass of side buds to accumulate, these should be removed gradually and as soon as of sufficient length to be readily caught hold of. The removal in a short time of considerable growth, whether buds or cuttings, will cause a check in the plants and consequent splitting of calyxes. Besides, the benefits of the operation are lost if not performed when the buds are in the young stage.

On the other hand, there is such a thing as disbudding too early, causing injury to stem or leaves, and especially is this true if the bud directly under the main one is removed prematurely.

Under no circumstances is it excusable for injury to be done to the foliage, for, as everyone is aware, the carnation is not provided with a superabundance of leaves along its stem, and it is difficult to imagine a more inartistic bloom than one with its stem skinned to a bare pole.

Those of you who regularly read that ably conducted department of the REVIEW, "The Retail Florist," will perhaps remember Miss Blair's just criticism, some time ago, of the careless manner in which some carnations were disbudded. It clearly shows that the divine flower is not judged wholly by size of bloom, rigidity and length of stem, etc. To pass that most critical and withal final test, the feminine eye, it must needs possess qualities impossible for mere man to fully appreciate. GEO. S. OSBORN.

POOR GROWTH AND FEW BLOOMS.

I think perhaps you can give me some suggestions which will help me. I am located in northeastern Colorado and this is my first season. My carnations, when benched, were in good condition, except that they were somewhat affected with rust. They do not seem to have made the growth or flowers that I had hoped for by this time, in certain parts of the bed, and the only cause I can see is that I evidently got more manure in that part and it was horse manure. At the time I thought the manure well rotted, but I now see that it might have been more decomposed. You see, we had to put this soil and manure directly into the benches, because we had not at that time any compost heap started.

The bench that puzzles me the most probably had the largest quantity of manure in it. It is located against the west side, so that the west wall of boards, from the bench to the gutter, shades the plants along the back edge of the bench. The back edge is quite wet from drip all the time, so that I seldom water it, and yet the plants at the back seem to be growing more thriftily than those nearer the walk. Some myosotis planted along the edge next to the walk is somewhat yellow, evidently showing lack of chlorophyl in the leaves.

Now, I am puzzled whether the plants at the back really will make any more flowers than the others, or whether they are only stretching up for want of light. Our house is really remarkably light except for this. Perhaps the plants in the front of the bench are not getting enough water. I keep the soil moist. There are pipes under this bench. Does the fact that the plants next the outside are possibly cooled by the outside wall have anything to do with it?

Could I improve the soil by taking out a little and adding some buffalo prairie grass, sandy soil, on top to take its place, or do you think the plants will take a hold after a little and make up for lost time? They are now of a darker color than the ones growing more rapidly and there are always a few of the bottom leaves turning yellow. L. J. R.

After reading your letter carefully, I am inclined to suggest that your plants along the front of that west bench would enjoy a little more water. Those in the rear of this bench are probably getting more than they need, but they would stretch up that way even if they had only the proper amount of water. I would suggest that next summer you put in glass from the gutter down to the edge of the bench, to eliminate this drawing up.

I understand that in certain parts of Colorado it is impossible to get a really good natural soil. You will just have to experiment for yourself until you find where you can get the most suitable soil for growing plants. Your proportion of manure and soil is all right for some soils, while for others it would not do. Not knowing anything about your soil, I cannot advise you. Again I say, experiment. A. F. J. B.

RUST ON HARLOWARDEN.

Will you tell us what the trouble is with the carnations from which the inclosed leaves were taken? All our Harlowardens are getting into this condition. A. F. C.

Your Harlowardens are affected with the common carnation rust. This disease is not difficult to control, but if allowed to go unchecked it will do enormous damage. We attribute it usually to improper watering and syringing, connected with unfavorable atmospheric conditions. At this time of the year great care must be exercised in these respects, to prevent not only rust, but all other spot diseases as well.

By careful watering I do not mean scant watering, and the same holds good with the ventilating. The carnation enjoys liberal watering at all times, when in full growth, providing the drainage is ample. You should, however, from early in October on, syringe as little as possible, and only to keep red spider in subjection. We find that syringing once a week is sufficient, as a rule. There are always certain spots in your houses which are more favorable to red spider than the rest of the house, and these you must syringe oftener. By keeping the foliage dry you will keep the rust spores in a dormant condition. The brown, powdery substance constitutes the spores by which the rust multiplies.

It will do little good, however, to stop syringing unless you ventilate properly to keep the atmosphere from getting foul. Fresh, pure air is one of the best fungicides, in that it invigorates the plants so that they are able to resist the ravages of the diseases. Avoid sudden chills when the weather is cold and damp. Raise the ventilators moderately first, and increase the ventilation by easy stages as the weather may require.

Do not allow your houses to run cold and damp over night, but run a steam pipe in each house, even though you may have to keep the ventilators open a couple of inches. It does not pay to be niggardly in this respect. Paint the pipe with sulphur, lime and water about once each week. Dust your plants with air-slaked lime and sulphur, half and half, or better still, get some Grape Dust and dust it on.

If you will follow these suggestions you will have little further trouble with rust. A. F. J. B.

THE WORLD'S LARGEST FUCHSIA.

Alexander McConnell, the New York florist whose name is familiar to most readers of the Review, is a native of the Isle of Man, that interesting, romantic, tiny speck of ground near the west coast of England. It was during a recent visit to his birthplace that Mr. McConnell procured the photograph of the immense fuchsia which is shown in the illustration.

Fuchsias attain to great size and perfection in the island, on account of the remarkable equability of the climate. The average outdoor temperature is about 59 degrees in summer and 42 degrees in winter, and thus the difference between the summer and winter averages is only about 17 degrees. In that wonderfully uniform climate some palms and other plants, which in other temperate latitudes require artificial heat, grow throughout the winter in the open air. Bedding plants of all kinds grow luxuriantly and flower abundantly. Hedges of fuchsia are frequently seen in front of cottages.

The fuchsia illustrated is growing within the grounds of S. A. Whitham, Ballure House, Ramsey, Isle of Man. It is twenty-three feet in height and 105 feet in circumference and is believed to be the largest fuchsia in the world. The variety is a prolific bloomer, and when Mr. McConnell last saw it, early in September of this year, it was loaded with blossoms. On a former visit to the island, twenty-four years ago, Mr. McConnell noted that the fuchsia was then an immense specimen, and since then it has grown more in diameter than in height.

The Isle of Man is only about 12x33 miles in extent, and is so completely occupied by a mountain range, stretched over everything like a huge reposing animal, that one would suppose there would hardly be room for anything else. Yet about seventy per cent of the area, at last accounts, was under excellent cultivation and the balance of the space was utilized for pasturage. There is also some beautiful scenery, reached by good roads, which are traveled in summer by hosts of visitors. There are good English schools and the Manx language is rapidly becoming extinct.

Though the island is under the government of England, yet the modern institutions are strangely mingled with many peculiar remnants of ancient laws and customs, and the combination forms a fascinating subject of study. No wonder that Mr. McConnell's fellow Manxman, Hall Caine, the novelist, found plenty of good material around him for the writing of "The Manxman," "The Deemster," "The Bondman," and other stories.

The Largest Fuchsia in the World.

GYPSOPHILA PANICULATA.

The well known baby's breath is one of the florists' indispensables among hardy herbaceous perennials. If your stock of these is light, it is not yet too late to secure and plant a few more. Do not forget to try a few plants of the double flowering form. This cannot be raised from seed, like the single variety, but is a splendid thing for bouquet and funeral work. It is not generally known how useful this gypsophila is in spring if gently forced. Now that the plants have had a few good freezings, dig up some of them. Pot singly or place several in boxes six to seven inches deep. Stand outdoors until they have one or two good freezings. Then store in a frame or pit until you want to start them, which can be done any time after the middle of December. Gypsophila does not respond encouragingly to hard forcing. A temperature of 45 degrees for a start, advancing to 50 degrees, is quite warm enough at night for it.

COST OF METERED WATER.

In answer to R. M.'s inquiry as to rates on water by meter, I am sending you the meter scale of the city of Lynchburg, Va. The monthly charges are as follows:

2,500 gallons ..... 50 cents
Excess, 17 cents per 1,000 gallons to 5,000.
5,000 gallons ..... 93 cents
Excess, 14 cents per 1,000 gallons to 15,000.
15,000 gallons $2.33
Excess, 11 cents per 1,000 gallons to 50,000.
50,000 gallons $6.18
Excess, 8 cents per 1,000 gallons to 100,000.
100,000 gallons $10.18
Excess, 6 cents per 1,000 gallons to 200,000.
200,000 gallons $16.18
Excess, 4 cents per 1,000 gallons to 300,000.
300,000 gallons $20.18
Excess, 3 cents per 1,000 gallons for all over.

My water bill averages about $1 to $1.25 per month. I have about 10,000 feet of glass and also have my residence connected with the same meter. As you will notice, the more water used, the cheaper it is. Harry R. Brown.

MARGUERITES.

The growth now being made by the young marguerite plants is rapid and they will need frequent overhauling, as they fill the pots with roots rapidly. As chrysanthemums pass, it is possible to give the marguerites more space. It will not be possible to flower much of this young stock for Easter unless pinching is now discontinued, but as there is a steady call for marguerite blooms through April, May and June, there should be no trouble in disposing of the plants or flowers. Plants carried over summer in pots, or such as were lifted from the open ground and potted, will now be throwing some flowers and giving promise of a nice crop six weeks hence. Keep these in a night temperature of 50 degrees. Feed liberally when once the pots are full of active roots and never allow the plants to suffer from dryness.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

A few days of cold weather the first part of the week checked the supply of cut stock considerably and it would undoubtedly have been for the best had Indian summer not returned. Mums are about over and the end of the week will wind up their season. Beauties have been in heavy supply. Carnations still seem scarce and will continue so until steady cold weather sets in, then stock and prices will improve.

New Wholesale Florist.

Washington now has her second wholesale florist, the name of the new firm being the Washington Florists' Exchange. This new firm was incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia and is now doing business at 729 Thirteenth street. At a meeting November 15 the following officers were elected: President, J. L. Loose; vice-president, Theo. Dietrich; secretary, Robert Bowdler; treasurer, John Robinson; manager, Albert Schnell. Mr. Schnell has managed the local branch of the Pennock-Meehan Co. He will be assisted by Mrs. Schnell. The Washington Florists' Exchange will handle a full line of florists' supplies as well as cut flowers and plants.

Flowers for Seed at Fairfield Farm, Randolph, Wis.

Various Notes.

Z. D. Blackistone has returned from a shooting trip to lower Maryland, River Springs and Blackistone's Island. Mr. Lauscher, of this firm, is all smiles these days, as he is papa of a fine daughter.

A trip to the establishment of David Grillbortzer, Alexandria, Va., shows things to be in excellent shape. All that was left in the mum section was one bench of Timothy Eaton that were just about ready to cut. The carnation houses promise a heavy cut for Christmas. All the best commercial varieties are to be seen here. The roses are grown in the new range put up last season. Richmond occupies considerable space and the plants are extremely vigorous. Killarney is his heaviest crop and just at present is in full cut. It is an inspiration to go through this house. My Maryland and Ivory are also grown at this establishment. A bench of poinsettias that will be ready to cut in two weeks was a beautiful sight. Mr. Grillbortzer is looking forward to a good season and with the condition of his stock at present there is no reason why his expectations should not be realized.

Just across the road are the greenhouses of the Washington Florist Co. Everything at this place is spick and span. Here a general line of stock for the retail trade is grown, including a lot of pot plants, such as cyclamens, begonias, primulas, California peppers, poinsettias and some fine adiantums. Carnations are good, with a nice cut each day. Several benches of Beauties are in fine shape, producing some good stock. Cardinal takes the lead in red, with My Maryland in pink. Mrs. Taft is coming on fine, throwing heavier canes than almost any other rose. Orchids and gardenias are an important crop at this place. This is the only firm in this neighborhood that has taken up the culture of gardenias. So far it has been more than satisfactory. All the output is disposed of by the firm's two stores in Washington.

Gude Bros. Co. is displaying in the window this week a collection of orchids that attracts a great deal of attention.

Two new automobile delivery wagons were put into commission in the last few weeks by florists, one by Fred H. Kramer, the other by Z. D. Blackistone. Mr. Blackistone's "On Time" is very appropriate, as there is nothing like being on time in these matters.

The first load of holly struck this city last week and certainly was fine. It is unusually heavily berried.

Wm. J. Moore, of Philadelphia, has filled the vacancy in the store of the Pennock-Meehan Co. caused by the resignation of Mr. Schnell.

Paper Whites have made their appearance in this market and were given the glad hand.

Visitors: Sydney Bayersdorfer, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., and Mr. Schott, representing M. Rice & Co., both of Philadelphia. W. F.

FLOWERS FOR SEEDS.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken in September at the Fairfield Seed Farm of the J. W. Jung Seed Co., Randolph, Wis. Although only flowers are shown in the photograph, the farm also raises a large acreage of garden and farm seeds. Peas, beans, sweet corn, cucumbers, radish, tomatoes and muskmelons are the leading garden seeds grown there.

In farm seeds they make a specialty of breeding Dent varieties suited to the northern states, but also give considerable attention to barley, oats and clover seed.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Retail Florists' Delivery Association.

Pursuant to action of the preliminary meeting of retail florists held at Chicago, the following have been appointed a committee on organization of a Retail Florists' Delivery Association: J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo., chairman; William F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich.; W. L. Palmer, Buffalo, N. Y.; E. Wienhoeber, Chicago, Ill.; John Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind.; W. L. Rock, Kansas City, Mo. W. N. Rudd, Sec'y.

OBITUARY.

Jens P. Brudahl.

Jens P. Brudahl, of Racine, Wis., died Monday, November 15, at St. Luke's hospital, after a short illness with pneumonia. The funeral was held Saturday, November 20, from the Dania hall. Mr. Brudahl was 75 years of age, a native of Denmark, and came to Racine in 1867. He was one of the most prominent citizens of the city. His last resting place was amid a wealth of flowers, one of the most striking pieces being a large easy chair which his son-in-law, M. B. Lassen, had covered with flowers and which stood at the head of the casket. Six Racine florists, Messrs. Benstead, Burgens, Adams, Miller, Olsen and Porter, acted as pallbearers.

Frederick C. Schneider.

Frederick C. Schneider, one of the oldest florists of Detroit, Mich., died Monday morning, November 22. He was 68 years of age and had been engaged in the florists' and market gardening business in Detroit for at least forty years.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
THE REVIEW brings results.

THE REVIEW would like to receive good, sharp photographs of some well-filled fern dishes.

HOW many growers are keeping the records needed to intelligently answer the questions for the census of floriculture next year?

IT always is easiest to get the patronage of those whose trade is least worth having; the man to whom payment is an unconsidered matter cares not about the price.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE many uses that are found for modern advertising methods are well illustrated by the use of space in the leading Chicago daily now being made by W. N. Rudd's Mount Greenwood Cemetery.

WHEN the Wells-Fargo Express Co. last week declared a dividend of 300 per cent it put in the hands of the shippers a strong argument against the periodical advances in rates which all the express companies are making.

WHY is it people write to newspapers, asking perfectly legitimate questions, and fail to sign their names? The REVIEW does not answer anonymous inquiries in its columns. J. D. H., Cupertino, Cal., is not a subscriber and it therefore is impossible to identify him. And there are others.

MONEY FOR BOTH.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

I do not know how I could get on without the Review; it certainly is a money-maker for the subscribers and advertisers. By reading the last three copies I made $30, and perhaps more, for the trades do not all come in at once, you know.—L. M. Smith, Laurel, Del.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

A meeting of the National Flower Show committee was held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, November 19, for the purpose of organization and arranging a preliminary schedule. President-elect Pierson presided and S. J. Goddard, secretary of meeting, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Robert Craig, Edward A. Stroud and William J. Stewart, of the S. A. F. committee, were present. The committee inspected Mechanics hall and obtained an option on it for March 23 to April 4, 1911.

About $15,000 will be apportioned for premiums.

All the committee present were enthusiastic over the outlook for Boston, 1911. Mr. Pierson requested the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston Coöperation Flower Market, Park Street Market, and Gardeners' and Florists' Club to each appoint three members to compose a general committee. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society will appoint at its next regular directors' meeting. The Boston Coöperation Flower Market has appointed Wm. H. Elliott, Morris F. Comley and John McFarland. The Park Street Market has appointed S. J. Goddard, E. Allan Peirce and Alex Montgomery. The Gardeners' and Florists' Club has appointed P. Welch, Duncan Finlayson and T. Roland.

The next meeting will be upon the call of committee on preliminary schedule.

Mechanics hall contains 105,000 square feet of exhibition floor space.

S. J. GODDARD, Sec'y.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Thanksgiving is not a holiday to be compared with Christmas, Easter or Memorial day, but this year it assumed unusually large proportions in the market because of the fact that turkey day came just at the time the weather changed. Following several weeks of unseasonably warm, bright weather, the change to dark, cold days resulted in a considerable curtailment of production. The reduction in crops was not only apparent in the Chicago district, but it occurred simultaneously throughout all the middle west, with the result that the shipping demand increased decidedly. It would have increased anyway, had it not been Thanksgiving, but the extra demand for flowers for the holiday dinner-tables served to give the market an extra activity. The reduction in supplies came just at a time when the chrysanthemums were pretty well cut out with many of the out-of-town growers who have been supplying their local demand, and this always means that buyers will come back into the Chicago market for roses and carnations.

The week beginning November 14 was little if any better than the week preceding, which was the worst November week this market has experienced in years. Toward the end of last week the reduction in supplies had begun to affect the market, but it was too late to make a satisfactory average for the growers that week. While the business increased largely at the beginning of this week, and prices advanced, the change was only sufficient to put the market on a good early winter footing. The price of Beauties went up above the normal rate for the season, because the supply for the last few days has been extremely light, but the value of other flowers was not above what it usually is at this date, and on some leading items, like violets, the price has been below that of last year. The buyers have been having things pretty much their own way the last few weeks, and many objected to paying the prices asked this week, but really they were paying no more than they ordinarily pay at this time of the year, and the only special cause the growers have for thanksgiving is that the market had resumed the normal condition.

While Beauties are scarce, other roses have been about equal to the demand, though the supply is only half what it was ten days ago. The dark weather has hurt the quality of roses. Killarney is even better, compared to Maid, than it usually is. White roses again are

Killarney

And you will know where to get your supply for the holidays.

We have had a big cut of fine Killarney for two months or more, but the real crop is just coming on—timed to be at its heaviest at Christmas. This certainly is grand stock—a good proportion of the "special" lengths, but mostly "selects" (medium to long), that every retail store can sell in quantity if the customers only see them. We want you to try these now, so we shall be sure of your order for Christmas when we shall have a big cut of Specials and all other lengths.

CARNATIONS

Most of the stores that need good Carnations know that year after year we have had the finest and most uniform large supply of Carnations offered on this market. The crop is on again and the quality never was better. From now till summer you cau wire Amling and be sure you are calling on the largest lot of really good stock in this market.

BEAUTIES

No matter if Beauties are scarce, we always have them, the best stock, carefully handled, sure to fill the bill where buyers are critical.

VIOLETS

If your competitors do business with the ordinary Violets, try ours; you can pull the trade your way, just as we are doing, once you let people know the quality of your Violets. You will agree we have "the cream of the Hudson River doubles," also fragrant home-grown singles. Try some today.

Green Goods

Use Smilax in your decorations. We can supply it by the hundred or thousand; $10 per 100; $80 per 1000. Plenty of Asparagus bunches. All other Greens in large supply.

selling fairly well. Richmond has sprung into favor.

Really first-class carnations are holding up fairly well, but generally speaking the carnation market is weak. With the prices so low as they were, it is only natural that the growers should have saved up stock, hoping for an extra demand this week. This accumulated stock has been selling according to value, and some of it had hardly any money value. The result is a wide range in prices, with the usual disappointment at averages.

Chrysanthemums have sold better this week than at any time recently. There has been an adequate supply of the big, fancy, late varieties; so many, in fact, that they have not realized their full value; but good small flowers have not been equal to the demand at the price. Chrysanthemums are now fairly well cleaned up, but there will be mums in the market for a month yet.

Violets have not realized as much money as they did last Thanksgiving. Sweet peas are more abundant. There is plenty of valley, but it has been selling well. Stevia, bouvardia and mignonette, with Paper Whites, are now available.

There is nothing new in the green goods market, but boxwood of good quality is again selling fairly well.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held an adjourned meeting at the Union restaurant November 18 to felicitate itself on the financial outcome of its connection with the flower show and to voice the hope of its members for still better things. This is the first time on record that the club has made a penny out of the show, and many speakers thought the time has now come when the club should be admitted to full partnership in the exhibitions of the Horticultural Society.

According to reports presented by E. F. Winterson, J. B. Deamud, Ed Enders, Fred Lautenschlager and D. A. Robertson, for their various committees, the club has a net profit on the show of between $400 and $5 0, while the Horticultural Society, in the face of the bad last day, made about $2,600 net. Of the club's income, $472.13 came from the flower booth, where the profit fell only about $75 short of what was made in the nine days during the national show last year. The committee spoke a word of appreciation for Poehlmann Bros. Co., Bassett & Washburn, Wietor Bros., Peter Reinberg, J. A. Budlong, George Reinberg, E. F. Winterson Co., Zech & Mann, C. W. McKellar, J. B. Deamud, C. A. Samuelson and Schiller, who donated stock. All the committees were discharged with thanks, and H. E. Philpott, the member from Winnipeg, was given a special vote of appreciation for his work.

G. D. Reid and Ed Assa were elected to membership, and the names of A. C. Kohlbrand, J. H. Prost and Joseph Koboquist were proposed.

The names of August Poehlmann and C. L. Washburn were added to those of W. N. Rudd, J. C. Vaughan and Leonard Kill to consider the matter of asking for the 1911 S. A. F. convention.

Fred Lautenschlager gave a short account of the St. Louis and Milwaukee shows and the secretary was instructed to express to the clubs of those cities the congratulations of Chicago and the club's thanks for hospitalities shown its members.

T. E. Waters acted as secretary in the absence of Secretary Johnson, who was out of town. Refreshments were served, as usual.

Various Notes.

Louis Bauscher and his son, James, of Freeport, Ill., have been in town buying supplies for the new store they plan to open shortly.

Fourteen young ladies, employees of the W. W. Barnard Co., had a jolly time Saturday evening, November 20, at a theater party, preceded by a chop suey supper. The boys were barred from the festivities, as this was strictly ladies' night, and the girls report the time of their lives.

The executive committee of the Horticultural Society held a meeting November 19 to approve reports on the flower show. It appears that the profit was about $3,200, a few accounts yet remaining to be adjusted. So successful did this show prove, costing slightly more than $9,000, that it already has been decided to hold one in 1910, and George Asmus has been appointed a committee of one to draft a preliminary premium list. J. H. Stockmans was voted $100 in recognition of the merit of his landscape plan for the last show, and Manager Asmus, Press Agent Burdett and Ed Hauswirth, who had charge of the admission, each received a recognition in cash for their good work, to which the success of the show was largely due, bringing the net profit down to around $2,600.

The retailers had a rally at the Masonic Temple November 18, to which every retailer in town had been invited, and which brought out a large attendance for the discussion of mutual interests. The retailers are pushing along in their work of harmonizing divergent views and their efforts seem likely to result in putting the business in Chicago on a better footing than ever before.

E. C. Amling says that Monday, November 22, brought a heavier run of shipping than any preceding day this season.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. says that after having tried all sorts of wood and paper boxes for the shipment of its stock from greenhouses to store, the most satisfactory and cheapest has proven to be the one made by the Sefton Mfg. Co., on Thirty-fifth street, out of extra heavy corrugated board. Some of these boxes have made as many as thirty trips from Morton Grove to the city. On each trip nearly the cost of the box is saved on express charges, and the return of the empties, bundled, is far cheaper than with wood empties that now cost 10 and 15 cents each to return. After the boxes are pretty well worn they are used for shipments to customers in nearby towns, thereby taking the place of a wood box and saving express charges for the customer.

Bassett & Washburn say the fame of the O. P. Bassett carnation has spread around the world and they have received orders from Europe for several thousands of cuttings. They expect to do a big business in young stock again this season, on Bassett, White Killarney and My Maryland.

George Asmus became a thirty-second degree Mason last week, the ceremony lasting through three days and concluding with a banquet.

Frank Johnson has been on one of his semiannual trips to the Twin Cities and Duluth for the A. L. Randall Co.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. reports the busiest season in the history of the business. Saturdays have been extremely busy with debutante work, for which long roses principally have been used, but there has been a big run of funeral work and table work. It is reported that the Wienhoeber Co. expended close to $900 in maintaining its booths at the flower show, though Mr. Wienhoeber himself is not saying anything about it.

Kyle & Foerster have added another ice chamber to their big cool room, thereby giving them much better control of the temperature during hot weather.

Conrad Wolfe, of Duluth, was one of the week's visitors.

J. D. Thompson and the company which bears his name at Joliet threshed out another of their legal difficulties last week. It was a suit to determine the ownership of some of the personal property, including several cups and medals won at flower shows.

George Fabyan, who owns the Riverbank Greenhouses, at Geneva, formerly the Harvey establishment and later conducted under the name of Engledew & Co., is rebuilding the houses at the southern end of the property, the removal making room for landscape work which is in contemplation.

Kennicott Bros. Co. received a carload of eastern ferns by express November 22 for cold storage.

Charles Schneider, who formerly did business as the Central Floral Co., has filed a petition in bankruptcy. There are quite a number of small claims, especially among the smaller growers who sell their own stock. Miss Eaton, formerly in the flower business, also has gone into bankruptcy, but her liabilities are principally to the landlords on leases. Two or three other buyers have shut up shop, affording further lessons in the necessity for requiring cash from buyers of unknown responsibility.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is receiving from F. R. Gilman, Rhinebeck, the Mrs. Gilman violet in excellent condition.

Anton Then, Jr., was found lying unconscious in one of his father's greenhouses November 18. His brother, John, who made the discovery, called help to take him home, where he now is seriously ill with typhoid fever. Mrs. Then is still in the hospital, where her daughter was born November 10.

C. W. McKellar says that it is impossible to get anywhere in this country all the cattleyas that are required just now, between the crops of labiata and Trianæ. He says that under the circumstances buyers are using Dendrobium formosum, but that the shortage will be overcome by the arrival of Trianæ in another ten days or so.

A. Lange was the only retail florist who attended the land show banquet at the Congress hotel November 20.

A visit to the greenhouses of Ernest Oechslin, at Maywood, shows prospects for a good Christmas and spring trade. He has one house each of azaleas and poinsettias and his men were busily engaged potting lily bulbs for the spring. Mr. Oechslin says he is now crowded for room, but there is little chance to expand at present, as his ground is now practically all under glass and the adjoining property is built up.

Joseph Kohout, carnation foreman at Bassett & Washburn's, is doing a fortnight's term of jury duty at Hinsdale.

Bowling.

The Carnations lost three straight to the Bullard & Gormley team November 20, but they still lead the Florists' League. The scores November 18 were:

NEW YORK.

The Market.

This week opened cloudy and colder, with the hope and prospect of crisp, seasonable weather. Shipments towards the close of last week decreased in volume and a general cleaning up at somewhat better prices gave the street encouragement.

Early this week it appeared that Thanksgiving prices would be reasonable. The holiday is not expected to be other than a good Saturday at this busy time of the floricultural year.

The demand for orchids from out of town grows constantly. The local call is persistent. The amount of stock sent in will not go around. Prices are advancing. The chrysanthemum supply is immense and the quality of most of it now superb. For the medium and inferior grades there is little demand, and these go at any offer, but the Chadwicks, Bonnaffons and Gold Mines are snapped up rapidly.

Carnations have held well at 2 cents in quantity for the best stock, with a higher rate at times for the novelties or small lots. Valley and lilies do not vary. Narcissi and bouvardia are here. Gardenias, when perfect, bring $4 a dozen, and few can be had under $2 of any grade. The demand is greater than the supply. There are no more of them on the streets. The big football games lifted the violet market; 75 cents was top, with 50 cents per hundred in bunches of fifty, and half of that for anything the street men handled.

There are many large weddings booked for this week and next, with a large number of debutante affairs, so the leading retailers are having a good run of work.

Club holds its final meeting for the year. It is election night. The house committee will dispense liberally.

Kessler Bros. say they are doing a land-office business with decorative plants for florists who have no facilities for keeping palms in their stores. They handle large quantities of boxwood and have beautified many of the large hotels with window-boxes and evergreens. The sympathy of the trade is extended in the loss of their brother on Monday, November 15.

Mr. Warendorff, of the Ansonia hotel, had a swell wedding last week at Riverside, in which large quantities of white and pink mums and American Beauties were used. The immense hall of the mansion was covered with wild smilax and Beauties, the canopy of lilies, the bride's bouquet of valley and orchids. Miss Horn, formerly with Bloomingdale Bros., is now at the Ansonia, and, with Herman Warendorff, directed the decorations.

Nicholas Schreiner has embarked in the retail business in Solinger's store, at Seventy-first street and Lexington avenue.

The Hoffmeir flower shop is now open at Eighty-sixth street and Broadway, directly opposite the Belnord flower store, where Mr. Brown presides. Mr. Hoffmeir is a popular artist and his new store is in one of the best sections of New York.

The Harris-Inderleed wedding at the Prince George hotel last week was decorated by J. F. Sharkey. The new store has started well. Mrs. Sharkey is in charge of the office and H. R. Scommodan is the artist.

ceiving an average of over 1,000 Gold Mine, Chadwick and Bonnaffon mums daily from Garreau Bros., of Jersey City, which have all sold at from $2 to $3 per dozen. Saturday, November 20, they handled over 5,000.

John Egenbrod, formerly with A. J. Guttman, has joined the ranks of the speculators in cut flowers and is doing well.

Paul Rigo, formerly with Henshaw & Fenrich, is now with A. J. Guttman.

Peter F. McKenney, Fifth avenue and Forty-second street, had the decoration of the Marie Antoinette hotel November 17 for the Ferguson-Forshaw wedding.

Walter F. Sheridan had a beautiful window of White Frick mums Saturday, November 20, a new variety of perfect white and of good size, grown by Paul Fisher, of Woodbridge, N. J.

The Onaway Florist, with greenhouses at Boonton, N. J., is open for the season at Seventh avenue and Fifty-seventh street, with Miss Bearsley as manager and George C. Simms, formerly with Charles Thorley, as artist.

S. Masur, of Brooklyn, has added a new wagon to his conveniences, and says November has been his best month in years for wedding decorations. He hopes to occupy a much larger store in the spring.

Mary Kolloge, sister of Herman Dreyer, deceased, was adjudged a bankrupt Tuesday, November 16, and W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., appointed trustee. William Kolloge was manager and there are nine houses, filled with a general assortment, to be disposed of.

There is to be a new Castle Gould, costing a million, where Harry Turner presides over horticultural things. The old castle was erected in 1902. Great landscape effects are already provided for.

At College Point one needs to go early if a satisfactory examination of the Anton Schultheis place is contemplated, for it takes a lot of time to enjoy the complete plant display provided. There are houses of Erica fragrans, poinsettias, azaleas, oranges, Jerusalem cherries and camellias all ready for shipment. Azaleas were in bloom for Thanksgiving. The camellias are varied and handsome. I have seen no finer stock of ericas. Bougainvillea is perfect and the stock of Pandanus Veitchii, araucarias, palms and ferns of all the popular varieties has never been excelled here. The stock of hardy roses is immense, the ramblers predominating. The whole plant is modern and complete, and with his seven sons to follow in his footsteps, there seems good reason to expect the name of Schultheis to long be allied with American floriculture.

A meeting of retailers and growers was held at 133 West Twenty-eighth street last week, with J. H. Troy, of the Rosary, in the chair. A growers' committee was appointed, consisting of R. M. Schultz, H. L. Rohner, David McKenzie, C. F. Ditsenberger and H. C. Steinhoff, to meet a similar number of retailers and report results at a subsequent meeting. About eighty were present and remarks were made by John Birnie, George D. Nicholas, George Stumpp, H. C. Steinhoff, Mr. Warendorff, Mr. Barton, Robert Simpson, President Dards of the retailers' association and others. The present outlook is favorable to a continuance of the methods of distribution which have prevailed successfully for so many years, and to a better understanding between wholesalers, growers and retailers and a greater harmony than has ever characterized the cut flower business in this center.

Holly is selling for Thanksgiving at $7 a case. Many of the supply men are handling it.

The shipments of wild smilax grow. The Kervan Co. and B. Rosens receive quantities daily and the demand takes it all.

A demonstration of Aphine will be held at the store of the Manhattan Flower Market, 46 West Twenty-eighth street, December 13, if Treasurer Ebel's present plans are consummated. The day has been chosen because of the Florists' Club meeting that evening.

M. C. Ebel, the treasurer of the Talmadge Co., with C. H. Totty and Mr. Schultz, attended the debut of Velasca Surrett at Hammerstein's Monday, the lady Mr. Totty lately honored by naming his big new red Australian mum after her. Mr. Totty gave Velasca 95½ points, with a full score for beauty, size and form, but he said she was a little scant on foliage.

John T. Withers, of Jersey City, starts February 5 on an educational and observation trip.

P. H. Goodsell, nurseryman, will be married December 4, at the residence of the bride's father, General Jackson, at Hartford, Conn. Myer, of Madison avenue, has charge of the floral decorations. The honeymoon will be spent in Europe.

Walter Mott, of the Yuess Gardens, Newburgh, was in the city November 19 and 20, visiting the bulb houses.

Bowling.

This is Thanksgiving turkey week with the Flatbush and Astoria bowlers. There were two contests for birds at Astoria Tuesday evening, one donated by Philip Kessler. November 16 was ladies' night, and forty gentlemen and ladies participated in the banquet and festivities. The ladies' prizes were won in the following order: Mesdames Siebrecht, Jr., Lorenz, Jr., Weishar, Boese, Bleckwen, Jr., Siebrecht, Sr., Donaldson, Doerhoefer, Bleckwen, Sr., Jacobson, Lorenz, Sr., Korfmann, Miesem, Anderson, Arnold, Einsman. Mrs. Jacobson made the best average for the afternoon, with a high score of 147. Mrs. Siebrecht, Jr., winner of the first prize, met with a painful accident when her fingers came in touch with a returning ball. Many a bowler can sympathize with the victims of this accident. In the evening the ladies and men bowled several games together. The prize offered by Philip Kessler was won by himself, so was handed over to the second man, John Donaldson. The men's best scores follow:

Player.	1st.	2d.
Kessler	147	175
Donaldson	158	178
Siebrecht, Sr.	147	151
Miesem	147	176
Einsman	133	146
Schleth	140	147
Jacobson	133	140
Lorenz	137	149
Doerhoefer	137	148
Bleckwen	114	139
H. Siebrecht	114	133
Arnold	102	136
Shaw	100	128
Boese	106	114
Siebrecht, Jr.	102	111
Anderson	101	115
Bleckwen, Sr.	51	100

Captain Berry asks all the New Yorkers interested in bowling to meet him at Thumm's alleys Wednesday evening, December 1, when it will be decided whether or not there is sufficient interest to go on with the weekly bowling.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Last week was not quite up to the standard set by the previous weeks, causing a piling up of all kinds of stock toward the end of the week until about Saturday, when business picked up again.

The wholesale houses anticipate a good week for Thanksgiving, some good orders being already on file. Prices have not advanced, in this city, on any flowers but carnations. The continual scarcity of these has necessitated a slight advance in prices for Thanksgiving.

The sale of house plants continues good. Cyclamen, begonias, chrysanthemum plants, primroses, Jerusalem cherry trees, etc., are selling nicely.

Club Meeting.

A well attended meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held Monday evening, November 15.

The subject of the evening was a discussion of "The Relations of the Employer and Employee." E. A. Scribner and Frank Danzer started a lively discussion on the subject by reading the papers which were first used at a meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association and published in the REVIEW of October 28.

Mr. Scribner took the side of the employer and had the best of it, because there were but few employees present. Still, these few stirred up a lot of good arguments. The most of the talk dwelt upon the matter of wages. It was admitted that the wages received by the average greenhouse man are not quite equal to those received in other lines. But to offset this the argument was advanced that a florist or grower has steady employment throughout the whole year, and loses no pay if he is off for a day or sick for a week. Neither is he docked if he happens to come a half hour late some morning. Then the work is not such a strain on a man as is working at a bench or perhaps a polishing wheel all day.

Mr. Sullivan blamed the men themselves if the sanitary conditions are not up to the standard. He stated that some years ago he fitted even his modest place out nicely with toilet, towels, mirror, etc. "But look at it now," said he. "The men will not take the least pains to keep things clean."

Herman Knope gave some good advice to both sides. Mr. Knope is foreman at Breitmeyer's, and is well versed on both sides of the question. He said that many men are not worth what they receive. He referred to the jealousy existing among the men as a rule, saying that some men are always complaining that another is not doing his share.

Someone suggested a general raise in prices of all flowers and plants in order to better the wages, but how to bring about this raise was not stated.

All other business was suspended and the meeting was not adjourned until near eleven o'clock, when Herman Knope wound up affairs by suggesting that employees be taken into the club at a lower rate of dues and the name "Club" be changed to something else. Mr. Knope said that if the employees would attend the meetings more and broaden their knowledge, they could demand better pay.

Florists' Club Show.

The Detroit Florists' Club held its annual display Friday evening, November 19, at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, which firm has been kind enough, year after year, to turn over to the club their large, well-lighted basement, light, water, heat and all the help gratis.

The quality of the stock this year was certainly excellent and it was not lacking in quantity either.

Messrs. Michael Bloy, Herman Knope, Ed. Beard, Thomas Browne and Albert Stahelin constitute our exhibition committee this year and to these gentlemen must be given much of the credit for the show, as they spared no efforts to make it a success. All the stock was effectively arranged, making a neat, businesslike appearance.

Exhibits were made as follows:

J. F. Sullivan made a fine display of mums. The flowers were of good size and well grown.

Fred Miesel & Sons showed some very fine cyclamen, primroses and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

Gus. Taepke filled considerable space with four splendid vases of mums.

Beard Bros. showed some fine Whitmani and pteris ferns; also a vase of assorted mums.

Chas. Distelrath was on hand with good chrysanthemum plants, vases of Dr. Enguehard, Nagoya and Arline, and also a vase of assorted carnations.

Theodore Damerow's vase of yellow and white Eaton was one of the features of the evening. This grower also showed vases of W. Jones and Helen Weeks.

August Von Boeselager again showed his seedling carnation, Clara. He also showed a seedling known as Marshall, the color of which is like Harlowarden. Another dark seedling shown by Mr. Boeselager is known as Albert P.

Mr. Bloy was one of the largest exhibitors. He had a fine lot of cyclamen and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine; primroses, Whitmani ferns, two fine specimen asparagus ferns, and some lily plants. In chrysanthemums, Mr. Bloy showed Pres. Taft, white and pink Maud Dean, and White Chadwick. A vase of well grown Bride roses completed this exhibit.

Another of the large exhibitors was J. Breitmeyer's Sons. They showed a good collection of stove and greenhouse plants, some good orchids, some well grown valley, and plants of good clean Harrisii lilies, also several vases of well grown chrysanthemums, a vase of pink Imperial carnations, of fine quality, which attracted especial attention, also some fine O. P. Bassett, Enchantress, White Perfection, and Beacon, winding up with several vases of fine violets, both single and double.

John Dinser made a nice exhibit of plants, including some begonias, ferns, cyclamen, and araucarias.

Robert Klagge's stock was finer than ever. His display of roses was excellent. Rhea Reid, Richmond, Killarney, La Detroit, and White Killarney were particularly noticeable. Mr. Klagge also showed a vase of fine valley, and his single violets were good. A fine lot of cosmos in white and pink completed his exhibit.

R. H. Ellis, of Leamington, Ontario, was on hand with well grown vases of O. P. Bassett, Enchantress, White Enchantress and Beacon.

Among the best carnations seen were those of Ferdinand Kolbe. They were white and pink Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and Beacon.

Last but not least, Mr. Pautke showed some fine pompons, one being a vase of Diana, also a seedling pompon which is a decided improvement on Diana. It is a cross between Diana and another pompon, is a vigorous grower, quite full and a good propagator. A sport of White Chadwick, the color of which was terra cotta bronze, was one of the attractions, as were also some Bonnaffon and Adelia. Mr. Pautke also showed a vase of lupines.

The report of the judges, J. F. Sullivan, Frank Danzer and Herman Knope, was as follows:

Chrysanthemums, white; first, G. Taepke; second, T. Damerow; third, M. Bloy.

Bronze; first, J. Breitmeyer's Sons.

Yellow; first, J. F. Sullivan; second, M. Bloy.

Pink; first, M. Bloy; second, J. F. Sullivan; third, J. Breitmeyer's Sons.

Best collection of not less than fifty; first, J. Breitmeyer's Sons; second, G. Taepke.

Best vase, one variety; first, Fred Pautke, Bonnaffon; second, T. Damerow, on Eaton; third, M. Bloy, on Chadwick.

Best collection of plants, first, J. Breitmeyer's Sons.

Cyclamen, first, M. Bloy; second, F. Miesel & Sons; third, J. B. Dinzer.

Primroses, first, M. Bloy; second, F. Miesel & Sons.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, first, M. Bloy; second, F. Miesel & Sons; third, J. B. Dinser.

Whitmani fern, first, M. Bloy; second, Beard Bros.

Specimen Boston, J. Breitmeyer's Sons.

Specimen Scholzelin, J. Breitmeyer's Sons.

Mum plants, Charles Distelrath.

Roses, best general appearance, R. Klagge.

Carnations, first, J. Breitmeyer's Sons; second, R. Klagge; third, Ferd. Kolbe.

Those receiving honorable mention were: R. Klagge, M. Bloy, R. H. Ellis, T. Damerow, C. Distelrath, A. Von Boeselager, F. Pautke, and J. Breitmeyer's Sons.

Various Notes.

The fine new show window at Sullivan's is quite a drawing card with its prettily arranged hampers and baskets of flowers. Norman Sullivan, who is the window trimmer, is continually displaying some new arrangements of flowers and small plants.

W. B. Brown is receiving daily some of the best carnations seen hereabouts. They are from the houses of Ferdinand Kolbe.

Hielscher's wire works is working overtime getting ready for the Christmas trade.

Another of the old florists of this city has passed into the great beyond. Frederick C. Schneider died Monday morning, November 22, after a long illness. He was 68 years old and had been engaged in the florist and vegetable business, in Detroit, for at least 40 years.

Mrs. Pearce, wife of Hubert V. Pearce of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House, has been at a local hospital for some

The Market.

The market last week was somewhat overcrowded with everything the retailers wanted, and prices were low, but we are looking for a different state of affairs for Thanksgiving and all of our wholesalers are making preparations to supply the local trade with stock of all kinds. It looks as though stock will be plentiful, as we have had warm and clear weather.

The chrysanthemum is still the leading flower and some extra fine blooms are coming in every day at reasonable prices. Roses are now at their height and plenty of fancy stock is now coming. There will be a slight advance in prices on these this week. Beauties have been plentiful all the week. Extra fancy stock in carnations is now coming in. Last week they were selling at a low price, but fancies will go up to $5 per hundred this week. A few Romans and Paper Whites have made their appearance, but not many as yet. Violets will go up to $1 per hundred this week and there should be plenty of them. Lily of the valley has a good call. Smilax is in demand and all other greens sell well.

Various Notes.

D. Augspurger, of D. U. Augspurger & Sons, Peoria, Ill., called last week.

Frank M. Ellis, formerly one of our wholesale florists, now of Panama, paid a visit to his many friends here last week. Mr. Ellis says the recent flood in Panama did great damage to his banana plantation. He will return in a few weeks.

Oscar Kuehn, head of the wire department of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., was on the sick-list last week. Mr. Kuehn expects to be on deck again this week.

Alex. Siegel, at Sixth and Washington avenue, says that his counter trade has been excellent, with a good deal of funeral work.

Walter Retzer, late with Grimm & Gorley, is now employed with the Plant Seed Co., at 802 North Main street.

O. K. Sanders, son of C. C. Sanders, who has been on a western trip to California, will return this week and will enter the employ of his father at 5600 Delmar avenue.

Otto Sanders, who started recently under the Maryland hotel, makes attractive window displays. Mr. Sanders is using the daily papers freely to advertise his business and is doing well.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, Ill., called last week and reports that he just returned from a three weeks' hunting and fishing trip and was sorry he had to miss the last club meeting.

A meeting of the executive board of the St. Louis Horticultural Society will soon be called to settle up flower show matters. All the prizes have been paid up in full.

R. J. Windler and C. Bergstermann, on South Grand avenue, are showing some excellent blooming plants and report a good trade so far this season.

At C. A. Kuehn's, last week, a fine lot of cut roses from J. F. Ammann and extra fine carnations from Henry Baer, of Peoria, were noticed. Stock of all kinds was quite plentiful last week and demand slow.

At the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. violets and carnations were coming in quite heavily from Kirkwood, with a fair demand for violets, carnations and roses.

At H. G. Berning's and George H. Angermueller's there was an abundance of everything, especially mums and roses. The demand for stock was not as good as it should be.

The free chrysanthemum show, which was held last week and this week at the Missouri Botanical Garden, has been a great drawing-card. The show is held, as usual, in a large tent and despite the cold days the attendance has been large. The orchid houses, in the care of G. H. Print, and the cactus houses, in the care of G. Thompson, have also attracted the crowds during the show. The main show in the tent is open until 10 p. m., with plenty of electric lights. The show was visited by a great many florists during the week, who said these free shows do draw the crowds.

Visitors: F. J. Farney, representing M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; W. E. Wadsworth, representing the Columbia Novelty Co., Chicago. J. J. B.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Frank Burfitt, of Springfield, Mass., is looking for a suitable location, owing to the expansion of business.

George H. Sinclair, of Holyoke, Mass., who sent out Carnation Viola Sinclair, which is a local favorite, has a white seedling that is highly promising. In habit of growth it equals White Enchantress, with the flower of White Perfection. We shall hear more of this seedling later.

John McKenzie, of Cambridge, Mass., has moved into his new store, the only one in the five-story block he recently erected. He says it is the safest place for the surplus, when good mums are selling at less than 5 cents and can be bought cheaper from the faker on the street than from the wholesaler.

Fred C. Becker, of Cambridge, does a good business with the Harvard boys and welcomes anything in red at any time.

Dan Murphy, superintendent of the W. E. Doyle greenhouses, at Cambridge, for many years, took a vacation recently, intending to make it permanent, but the temptation to return was too strong and he is back again at the old stand. The boys welcomed him with a song, the refrain of which was "Danny, we have missed you."

At W. W. Edgar's, of Waverley, Mass., chrysanthemums are nearly over. The earlier varieties are grown, so as to give place to the big stock of blooming plants. Azalea Mme. Petrick will be in flower for Thanksgiving. It is a good seller.

It is an inspiration at this time to visit the houses of W. T. Walke, of Salem, Mass., where blooming plants are grown by the houseful. Cyclamens, poinsettias and Begonia Lorraine are fully up to the high standard attained here. I noted, when at R. W. Allen's place at Hudson recently, a pretty combination of poinsettia, Euphorbia jacquiniæflora and ferns made up in pans, and they sold at sight. Mr. Walke was panning up some Bonnaffons, naturally grown, which, he says, sell well.

A. J. Schmutz, of North Adams, Mass., has Enchantress, both white and pink, that average three and one-half inches across and that are perfect blooms. There is no sign of this grand variety giving out yet. M.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The week ending with the day before Thanksgiving is difficult to describe. The quantity of flowers coming into the market has been greatly increased and their quality has not been improved by depressingly warm weather. Saturday, November 20, saw a fair "clean-up" at some price, everyone realizing the importance of disposing of perishable stock in such weather as the close of the week. Monday found a more buoyant tone in the market with prices advancing on some select stock in small quantities, but with large sales of good ordinary stock at low prices. The supply of almost everything is very heavy, and the demand is brisk. Chrysanthemums are an important feature of the Thanksgiving business. Bonnaffon is the leading variety of the day, the principal demand being for the good ordinary grades; white and yellow Eaton, Golden Dome, white and yellow Chadwick, Jeanne Nonin, white and yellow Mrs. Jerome Jones, and in pink Maud Dean, Dr. Enguehard, Harry Balsley and Mlle. Jeanne Rosette are the principal varieties, the four pinks of course being in limited quantity. Carnations are selling better than for a month past, the fancies have advanced a point, but the bulk of the sales are at last week's quotations on a firmer foundation. Valley is quite scarce, cattleyas exceedingly scarce, gardenias rather more plentiful, though the quality warrants the higher figures. Violets are not as high as at this time last year, there is a good healthy demand for all choice stock at moderate prices, and fancy singles are worth nearly as much as doubles, due to their unusual quality.

Beauties have gone up as they always do at a holiday, but the balance of the rose list is in bad shape, only a few fancies of Jardine, Killarney and Richmond going up. Paper Whites have come in quantity, mignonette is improving, while the balance of the smaller flowers on the list show signs of the awakening that comes when the end of the autumn queen's reign is approaching.

The Sales of Ferns.

There is a strong feeling among the florists of antagonism toward department stores, a feeling which I have always shared to the extent perhaps of not giving full recognition in this column to the horticultural work these stores are doing. We can certainly learn a lot from their business methods. I will abandon the ostrich habit and proceed.

The department stores in this city have held a number of fern sales lately. The theory in these sales is to attract the public by special bargain offers, moving the stock rapidly as an advertisement for other stock, the profit being small. A large store held a three-days' sale of Boston and Scottii ferns, disposing of 4,000 plants in that time. These plants had cost them 20 cents each and sold at 25 cents each, the stock being received a wagon-load at a time. Another sale at a nearby store disposed of nearly as much stock; I think it was 3,000, in two days. A third sale of higher grade ferns, costing the store 30 cents each, with 20 cents' worth of embellishment added, disposed of 400 ferns at 89 cents each. The same price for the same size fern to the dealers in the regular channels, i. e., 30 cents, failed to move the stock.

These sales are undoubtedly of great educational value. They probably have little or no effect on the regular business, but it seems to me the margin is too small to make them permanent.

A New Rose.

The partners in the rose-growing firm of Stockton & Howe, Princeton, N. J., came to this city November 22 with a new rose which they displayed at some of the leading stores and at the wholesale commission house of Berger Bros. The rose is a seedling of their own, soft pink in color, an Enchantress shade, with long, pointed buds and extraordinarily heavy stem. It is said to be prolific. The firm has about 500 plants of this seedling which they propose to grow on another season before deciding on its future.

WATSONIA ARDERNEI
Florists, it will pay you to grow some of these bulbs. The flower is pure white, produced on stems about five feet in length. For cut flowers, they have proved especially valuable, lasting several days in a cut state, and are very decorative. The bloom and habit is similar to that of the Gladiolus, coming into full bloom about Easter, when its pure white blooms are of great value. Immediate ordering advisable at the special low price of $6.00 per 100.

Those who saw it were favorably impressed.

Godfrey Aschmann's Plants.

A beautiful house of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is just coming into bloom, with the Lonsdale pale pink variety in the foreground. All the plants are spaced to insure shapeliness and freedom of bloom. It was as pretty a sight as Ontario street has ever seen at Thanksgiving. The plants were mainly specimens, with a side bench of a smaller size for baskets and ferneries.

The azaleas, also just coming into bloom, are of good quality. Mme. Petrick has entirely displaced Simon Mardner, while Vervæneana, soft pink, and Deutsche Perle, white are the other varieties grown for Christmas, these three being considered superior to any others for early forcing.

The demand in ferns this season has been largely for the straight-leaved varieties of nephrolepsis, Boston and Scottii. Whitmani is most popular among the crested sorts, Todeaoides second.

Primroses are extensively grown, many florists and dealers depending on this place for their supply. The preference is given to bright colors. White is not especially wanted at Christmas. A fern-leaved variety is an oddity.

Edward Aschmann says that the demand for araucarias has been heavy this season, a marked contrast to that of a year ago. His father particularly called my attention to an order just going out, saying that there was value in those araucarias as in all that he shipped. The place looked prosperous.

Various Notes.

The Monday before Thanksgiving by weekdays, and November 25 by the day of the month, was the twenty-fourth anniversary of M. Rice's start in the florists' supply business.

White Brothers, 231 North Eighth street, are preparing to open a branch at Sixty-fourth street and Woodland avenue, West Philadelphia. Charles Stewart, until three weeks ago with the Highland Rose Co., has gone into the firm to assist his uncle by managing the new place.

J. George Sturgeon, Baltimore, Md., spent two days in this city this week.

Walter R. Livingston reports that the demand for the Moore-Livingston plant stands is ahead of the supply.

Paul Berkowitz was recalled from his business trip last week, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Martin Bayersdorfer, Mount Holly, N. J.

William Robertson's sport from Cheltonii is a lemon-yellow, not a white as reported in the Review account of the Philadelphia show. The flower is a good keeper of excellent size with heavy stem and foliage.

Ralph G. Shrigley commenced work last Monday with Samuel F. Lilley.

W. E. McKissick & Bros.' fancy single violets are of an exceedingly high grade.

Another new store in West Philadelphia, it is understood, will be opened in the neighborhood of Thirty-eighth and Market streets.

Walter P. Stokes says that the bean seed situation is almost as serious as that in pea seeds.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Thanksgiving week finds business vastly improved. The weather continues remarkably warm and there promises to be no scarcity of stock. Chrysanthemums are coming in lessened shipments and move better. Bonnaffon, Enguehard and Eaton are still the three dominant varieties of their respective colors. Some fine Jeanne Nonin are bringing good prices; some nice Gold Mine, Chadwick and Maud Dean are also seen; $4 per dozen seems to be top price for fancies. Roses are moving much better. Beauties of the best grade bring $4 per dozen. Some fine white and pink Killarney are arriving, as well as excellent Richmond, while Bride and Maid go more slowly. Carnations are in good supply, but in active demand at much improved prices.

Violets had a great sale for the Yale-Harvard game, in common with crimson mums. Violets average 75 cents per hundred, but will probably bring $1 for Thanksgiving. Both lily of the valley and white bouvardia are in strong demand at $3 to $4 per hundred. Cattleyas are comparatively scarce, selling as high as $7 per dozen. Mignonette, Paper Whites, Roman hyacinths, callas and lilies are all in fair supply. Cypripedium insigne is more plentiful. Stevia comes from one or two growers only, the bulk preferring to market it later.

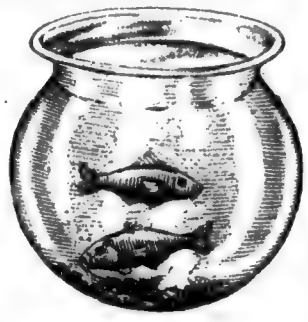
Green stock is in excellent demand, with but little change in prices. Plant trade is quite good. Lorraine begonia is the leading flowering plant.

S. A. F. Spring Show.

At the meeting in Horticultural hall, November 19, in connection with the S. A. F. spring show in 1911, the following were present: President F. R. Pierson, E. A. Stroud, Robert Craig, J. K. M. L. Farquhar and W. J. Stewart on behalf of the S. A. F.; N. F. Comley and John McFarland, of the new Park street flower market; E. Allen Peirce and S. J. Goddard, of Park street market No. 1; and Thomas Roland, P. Welch and D. Finlayson, of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

The following committee was appointed on the schedule: J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Robert Craig, W. A. Manda, Robert Cameron and Thomas Roland. Part of a committee of 100 was also made up. It was stated that an option on the main hall of Mechanics' building had been secured for March 22 to 30, 1911.

The sum of $4,000 had been so far secured on the guarantee fund, but it was confidently anticipated that the full amount needed, some $15,000, would be secured before long. The schedule will be made up and ready for inspection before the next committee meeting.



At the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club these awards were made: Thalictrum from T. D. Hatfield,

Various Notes.

James F. M. Farquhar sailed for Europe, November 17, on a short business trip.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are having a heavy call for their fine quality of boxwood and other greenery, and are at present exceptionally busy on Thanksgiving flower orders.

We continue to get abnormally warm and dry November weather. Such shrubs as Spiræa Thunbergii and forsythias have many flowers open, while such hardy plants as pansies, daisies, pompon chrysanthemums and primroses are blooming profusely. Lawns and fields are golden with dandelions in many places. This is not ideal Thanksgiving weather, nor such as flower growers like.

Among visitors last week were: F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; E. A. Stroud and Robert Craig, Philadelphia.

Herman Waldecker, the well known Braintree florist, was married, November 16, at Whitehouse, Norfolk, Conn., to

Armadillo Baskets

THE HIT OF THE SEASON

Something new and unique for florists. They make novel flower and hanging plant baskets. Are well prepared and guaranteed waterproof. These baskets are made in (4) four different styles and sizes. The price ranges from 60c and up for jobbers. The plain basket makes a unique novelty for a gift, very strong and durable. They are made from the horned shell of the Armadillo.

WHAT IS AN ARMADILLO? A most curious and interesting animal, captured in the mountains of West Texas and Old Mexico. In freedom it makes its nest about six feet under ground; sleeping during the day, it ventures out at night. Its shell or armor is fashioned into the oddest and most curious baskets ever known. I have no agents and therefore am able to give you my lowest quotations. Ship goods direct to all parts of North America. Write for catalogue and prices, special terms to jobbers.

CHAS. APELT, Comfort, Texas (The Home of the Armadillo). Dealer in Texas and Mexican Curiosities. My Specialty is the Waterproof Plant Basket.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

With a slight decline in temperature there was a perceptible improvement in trade last week, so that general business has been materially accelerated. There has been a good demand for mums at $2 to $4 retail, and the growers have been hard put to fill rush orders on several occasions. Violets and roses are coming better, while carnations, always a Providence favorite, move rather slowly while the mums are on show.

Funeral work has been unusually brisk, the number of prominent persons who have died recently calling for an exceptionally large number of floral pieces. This was especially noticeable in the cases of Dr. Frank B. Sprague, on November 20, when more than 100 designs were shown, and at Albert Winsor's funeral, when several large special pieces were made.

Social functions also have been on the increase, there having been a number of weddings and receptions, while debuts, on the east side, have made heavy demands for choice stock.

Club Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held at the rooms of the association, in Swart's lodge hall, 96′ Westminster street, this city, on Monday evening, November 15, with a large attendance. The reports of the various officers and committees showed the club to be in a good financial and numerical condition.

The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock with ex-President James Hockey in the chair, in the absence of President Charles Macnair. After the reports, the following were unanimously elected as officers for the ensuing year: President, Robert Johnston; vice-president, Eugene A. Appleton; secretary, William E. Chappell; treasurer, William Hill; executive committee, James Hockey, Cornelius Hartstra and Harry Clark; librarian, James Dillon.

A supper was served, after which the rest of the evening was given over to a discussion of the best way to arouse more enthusiasm in the club and of acting more in harmony and conjunction with the Rhode Island Horticultural Society. Nearly all the members took an active part in the general debate, but no satisfactory solution to the problem was reached.

It was voted to hold the annual supper of the club on Monday evening, January 17, and a committee consisting of Eugene A. Appleton, Alexander Macrae and Harry Clark was appointed to make the necessary arrangements.

Various Notes.

E. J. Fancourt, of Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, was a visitor in the city last week. On November 15, he was a guest at the meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club.

H. M. Wilson, of Middletown, is booking many orders for privet and ornamental trees and shrubs.

The Highland Floral Co., 17 Tenth street, has been making a big run on small potted palms and ferns.

should be chartered, and the secretary was instructed to consult an attorney on the subject.

A memorial of the late John H. Menard was ordered to be printed and copies presented to his family and distributed among the members.

A highly creditable exhibit of flowers was on the table. The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. had a lot of chrysanthemums, most of them of the midseason varieties, such as Jerome Jones, Dr. Enguehard, Cannell, Timothy Eaton, Golden Wedding, W. H. Chadwick and Buff Globe. They were all good flowers, as perfect as can be grown under glass anywhere, north or south.

In the line of roses, American Beauty, Bridesmaid, Ivory and Smith were also fine. The field-grown varieties were numerous. At no other time of the year have we had such a quantity of perfect roses grown all over the gardens in New Orleans. A few spikes of double tuberose, well opened and cultivated under glass, showed that this flower can be cultivated here when protected from thrips, though the prevailing idea so far among the florists has been that only the single sort could succeed here. President A. Alost had nice samples of American Beauty and Cochet roses.

R. Eichling is a week ahead on last year in the flowering of his Paper White narcissi and presented a bunch of outside flowers, without any forcing. J. St. Mard showed that chrysanthemums can be grown well outside of a greenhouse, by a few samples that he had brought.

In order to make the meetings more interesting, Mr. Lagerbie made a motion that the members should bring to each meeting some plants and flowers for discussion. Next meeting will be for plants suitable for Christmas presents and decorations. M. M. L.

Mrs. P. Kaul, wife of the florist at 633 Cherokee street, recently met with a serious accident. She slipped and fell against the wall of a greenhouse, forcing her hand through a pane of glass, and the hand was almost severed from the arm. Mr. Kaul has completed a handsome new greenhouse, adjoining the old ones.

HOPKINSVILLE, KY. — T. L. Metcalfe, who has stores and greenhouses here and at various other places in Kentucky, Tennessee and Illinois, recently visited Paducah, Ky., with a view to establishing a branch in that city.

CALDWELL THE WOODSMAN CO.
EVERGREEN, ALA.

MOUNT CLEMENS, MICH.

The greenhouses of John Breitmeyer's Sons were never in better shape than now. In the new range one of the 250-foot houses is devoted to carnations, mostly of the newer varieties. This house is under the supervision of Ernest Wolf, who deserves much credit. Pink Imperial attracts much attention. This is one of the favorites. It bears a good, large flower early in the season.

The roses at Breitmeyer's give every promise of a fine crop of nice, clean flowers this year. My Maryland looks especially fine. This variety appears to be an extra good one. It is not subject to disease, as are most of our roses. The Beauties, Killarneys and, in fact, all the roses showed much good care on the part of Melvin Davison, who is in charge. Two houses, each 36x250 feet, were added to the new range last summer, and these are now devoted to roses. This addition makes a total of 175,000 square feet of glass in the new range. Eventually all the houses will be on this part of Breitmeyer's sixty-five acres of ground.

One thing especially noticeable at Breitmeyer's is the growing of vegetables. Every available space is planted with tomatoes, lettuce, etc. Fred Breitmeyer says, "When our early mums and indoor asters are gone, we have plenty of time to grow a crop of vegetables before we need the benches again, and it is by having your houses working for you always that you make them pay." The chrysanthemums at this place would be hard to beat. Every good commercial kind and some fancies are grown. Many fine pompons, anemones and singles are also seen. In the pompons the beautiful dark bronze variety, Vera, causes many exclamations.

At Robert Klagge's place one of the principal features is an unusually fine house of La Detroit roses. The even growth of these is really remarkable, each and every plant about the same as its neighbor. When Mr. Klagge starts cutting, then look out. The Detroit market will see as fine La Detroits as one could wish for, and lots of them.

Leopold Mallest grows only carnations and violets, but these he does well. His carnations were not planted until the latter part of July. They have taken a good hold and show great care. Mr. Mallest employs but little help, but, by strict attention to business and with the help of his father, manages to grow stock above the standard.

At A. L. Stevens' place a fine lot of stock greets the eyes. Besides carnations and violets, Mr. Stevens will this year try his luck with sweet peas. If he succeeds in growing the sweet peas as well as he has grown the other stock, then all will be well.

At John Cary's the visitor will certainly feel compelled, in spite of the proprietor's modest denials, to form a high opinion of the stock, especially the Killarney roses. The house of Killarney seen here, both white and pink, is not surpassed by anything at Mount Clemens.

August von Boeselager has more than just greenhouses. He has an eye to the artistic. The grounds around his residence are very nicely laid out. Upon entering the greenhouses, you pass through a cobblestone front, the windows of which are all outlined with miniature electric lamps.

The carnations seen at Boeselager's remind one of a field of thrifty weeds, so heavy is the growth. The plants are healthy and one mass of buds. Some fine varieties of pompon and anemone mums are also seen. H. S.

Money Maker for Retail Florists

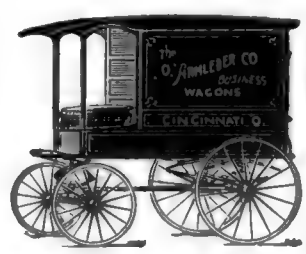
Do you advertise? If so you want results. We get them for you through In And Out Door Floral Culture (copyrighted 1909), a book of 32 pages, 8x10, beautifully illustrated with half tone cuts of plants, floral designs and wedding decorations. The book contains floral cultural notes written so as to appear as your own production, with your name and address printed on first page of cover, which is beautified with a garland of roses either in one or two colors. There is not a cheap spot in the book, enameled paper, high class workmanship. A credit to any first-class floral shop or retail florist establishment.

As a Business Getter it is not to be compared with newspaper or calendar advertising, as it will last for years on account of the valuable information it contains. You will see at once that it is the most impressive way of keeping your name before your customer. The price is so reasonable that the smallest florist can use them to great advantage.



Write at once and get exclusive for your city.

The Market.

Business last week was fairly good, with nothing of great importance to report. All the growers of this vicinity are looking for colder weather. Prices for Thanksgiving will advance slightly and it is the general opinion that if colder weather should set in, prices will advance considerably.

Chrysanthemums have passed midseason, and after another week only a few late varieties will grace the market. This reminds me of our old friend Harry Sunderbruch. He once said, "I am always glad to see chrysanthemums making their appearance; they open up activities among flower lovers in the fall, and I am just as glad to see them go because they depreciate the value of everything else;" and I think he was right. An order of a few dozen choice blooms takes a horse and wagon.

Roses have been plentiful, except American Beauties, of which there seems to be no surplus. My Maryland, Killarney and Richmond have a steady call, with Brides and Maids sluggish. Carnations come in excellent condition, quality never being better for this time of the season, prices ranging about the same as last week—$3 per hundred for the best. Harrisii lilies are enough to meet demand, selling from $8 to $10 per hundred. Paper White narcissi have made their appearance, but have no call. Good violets have a steady call at 50 cents per hundred. Green goods have been plentiful, with a steady demand. Pot grown chrysanthemums in the Sixth street flower market moved slowly last Saturday, but there was a healthy call for well grown cyclamen, Primula obconica and Gloire de Lorraine.

Various Notes.

The chrysanthemum show at the city park greenhouses, last week, attracted much attention and many visitors.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

It is said some of the French and English crops of beet will be almost a total loss.

The planting of bulbs for 1910 crops in Holland is not yet finished, and is fully two weeks behind the usual stage, due to too much wet weather.

There seems to be a good deal of difference in the quality of holly this year; some is extremely poor in both foliage and berries, while other cases are above the average.

Word comes from the Wisconsin green district that the ground now is covered with deep snow and that the prospect is slight for the picking of any further large quantity of lycopodium. Another season of short supply seems certain.

The annual chrysanthemum show of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., in the store at 114 North High street, was a comprehensive affair and was even more attractive than in previous years. Though the mum was most conspicuous in the display, many other varieties of flowers also were included.

The American Breeders' Association will hold its sixth annual meeting at Omaha, December 8 to 10, as the guest of the National Corn Exposition. Among those who have places on the program are Prof. C. A. Zavitz, who read a paper before the Seed Trade Association at Niagara Falls last June; W. W. Tracy, J. Dwight Funk and Eugene D. Funk.

How many canners will themselves plant the peas they are offering for sale?

ONION is one of the most important items and one that is fairly easy in this year of general shortage.

B. F. BROWN, president of the Brown Bag Filling Machine Co., Fitchburg, Mass., is making a western trip.

AN English seedsman, trading in a small way, recently took his life by drinking an insecticide containing nicotine, camphor and alcohol.

THERE always is somebody to buy seeds of unknown origin, but the seedsman who has a reputation wants the stock he purchases also to have one.

THE way the canners are cleaning up the 1909 pack speaks for a good demand from this important branch of the trade next season; even tomatoes are now on a firm basis.

EDWIN LONSDALE passed through Chicago Sunday, November 21, on his way to take charge of the new Burpee seed farm at Lompoc, Cal. He was accompanied by Mrs. Lonsdale.

THE situation in sugar corn is not giving any concern, but a little more certainty as to the supply of some of the vine seeds would be a help to both wholesalers and retailers.

DOBBIE & Co., the largest mail order seed house in Scotland, are now busily engaged in transferring their stocks and plant from Rothesay to Edinburgh, as they now intend to make the Scottish capital their headquarters.

REPORTS from Holland indicate an advance in the prices of spiræas, especially of the newer types, on account of the crop turning out below the average. Gladioli, on account of the wet season, have done badly and first-size bulbs are exceedingly scarce, and the same reports are current regarding liliums. Crops of all three articles mentioned are below the average. Two or three Dutch bulb growers are visiting London weekly on the lookout for late orders to clear a few surplus stocks of hyacinths and tulips still on hand, but the bulb trade in England is not overbrisk, as late planting seems to be the rule.

IN an interview published in the REVIEW some weeks ago, E. J. Deal, of W. W. Johnson & Co., Boston, England, called attention to the steady encroachment on the supply of stock seed that has been going on for a number of years and pointed out that this one factor assures a continued high price for seeds until there come several consecutive seasons of good yields, one good crop not being enough to restock the warehouses. Nothing in a long time has served to arouse so much discussion. Mr. Deal appears to have pointed out a truth that all recognize, once their attention is called to it, for confirmation is heard in several languages.

offered, but the fact remains that more or less of these uninspected crops find their way into the warehouses of firms that have a standing, and they all come into eventual competition with the supply from known sources. The temptation to take up these offers is strong, but the shorter the supply the more careful the buyer should be to ascertain just what he is getting.

Forcing Gladiolus

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladiolus are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose.

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $3.25 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosey crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs, 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

Gladiolus, Colvillei and Nanus (type).

Plant some of these among your carnations; they will come in handy at any time.

Peach Blossom. The most beautiful of all the Colvillei type of Gladiolus; the color is a lovely soft pink, on the order of the Killarney rose. $0.90 per 100; $8.75 per 1000.

Blushing Bride. Flowers are large, pure white, with delicate pink spot. Useful for early forcing. $0.75 per 100; $6.00 per 1000.

The Bride (Colvillei alba). This lovely white miniature Gladiolus makes a useful cut flower for early Spring use; will stand forcing. $0.65 per 100; $5.00 per 1000.

Ackermanii. Salmon-orange, with white blotches, edged scarlet; very pretty. $0.75 per 100; $6.50 per 1000.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

Business previous to the last two weeks had been quite satisfactory, but since that time it has been a little quiet. This seems to be the complaint in general, in and around Dayton. While the florist is glad to see the chrysanthemums come in, he is equally glad when they are all over with, as while mums are in season the demand seems to run to them, making it apparently necessary to dispose of roses and carnations at a sacrifice. But at the same time, the mums come at a time when the florists' business is beginning to pick up, and when the new crops of carnations and roses are not sufficiently large to fill the demand, but in the last few weeks all seasonable varieties of flowers have been plentiful, and stock has been first-class.

The prolonged Indian summer, which we have had the privilege of enjoying this year, has brought crops on remarkably well, and has made a great difference in the appearance of stock. There are a great many outdoor chrysanthemums in bloom, owing to the warm weather, and this, of course, is a detriment to business. Things, however, are brightening up somewhat for Thanksgiving, although in this city Thanksgiving, in the way of business, does not mean much to the florists, and their complaint is that the customers spend all their surplus cash on their Thanksgiving dinner and don't allow much more than 50 cents for a table bouquet. There are some fine callas on the market now, but giganteums are a little scarce.

Various Notes.

The Miami Floral Co. will, in a week or two, break ground for the erection of five new houses, 240 feet long, and a new cement boiler-room. They are cutting some fine callas, roses and carnations. C. J. Briggs, of Sidney, O., was a visitor to their plant November 16.

Chas. E. Pease, president of the Miami Floral Co., was called to Demopolis, Ala., last week, on account of one of his cotton mills burning down.

George M. Garland and wife, of Des Plaines, Ill., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Bartholomew on November 12.

S. Hodges and Miss Louella Hodges, of Cincinnati, O., were the guests of Miss Ruby Bartholomew on November 21.

The Dayton Floral Co. has experienced a streak of hard luck with its geranium cuttings this season, having lost about 10,000 cuttings in the sand. There seems to have been a little egg in the cutting, which hatched into a little worm, and this creature ate into the cutting and killed it. If any of our readers know anything about this little creature, regarding its origin, its nature or any way to dispose of it, the Dayton Floral Co. would be glad to hear from them.

W. G. Matthews has recently imported a boxwood tree from Holland, which is trimmed in a shape to represent a fountain. It has been on exhibition in front of his store and has attracted a great deal of attention.

Ray and Herbert Bartholomew, Roy Ewings and Roy Tice, employees of the Miami Floral Co., spent a few days of last week on a hunting trip. They were well repaid for the time spent. Rabbit and quail were enjoyed by their friends, who hope they will take a similar trip in the near future.

H. H. Ritter says he has several large dinner decorations for Thanksgiving, but all call for chrysanthemums. They are picking some fine violets now, for which they find ready sale. R. A. B.

Vegetable Forcing.

RHUBARB AND ASPARAGUS.

Will someone kindly tell us how to force rhubarb and asparagus, and what kinds to use? J. W. R.

Both rhubarb and asparagus force in about the same manner and in the same temperature.

Palmetto is undoubtedly the most popular and satisfactory variety of asparagus. As to rhubarb, there is some difference of opinion. Burbank's Linnæus or Giant Victoria will be found satisfactory.

Strong, healthy clumps, not less than three years old, should be secured. The stronger and healthier they are in the field, the better they will force. They require little light and one bed can be grown above another, in the same way as mushrooms.

The beds should be about a foot deep and the clumps packed in close together, filling in between them with soil, having about two inches in the bottom before starting and putting more on top to entirely cover the crowns after placing them. Soak well and add more soil, where it settles enough to require it, to smooth up the beds. A temperature of 50 degrees is high enough to start with, but may be raised to 60 and 70 degrees after growth is started. Considerable water is required to keep the soil always moist.

A batch of plants does not yield very long and is worthless when taken out. More plants may be dug and stored in a cold shed, to be had any time when needed to replant the beds all winter. It is best not to dig them until cold weather and leave some soil on the roots.

H. G.

WHITE FLY ON CUCUMBERS.

My house of cucumbers and tomatoes, just bearing fruit, is infested with a little white fly and the young ones can be seen on the cucumber leaves. I have fumigated with punk and sprayed the leaves with Fir Tree oil, but without result. There are hundreds of them. What would you advise me to do to clean them out? J. R. P.

The insect is no other than the common white fly. This insect is now a pest in greehouses all over the country and can be found on weeds, etc., outside in summer. Fumigating with the tobacco product will not affect them in the least and spraying will be found entirely unsatisfactory. There is only one way to get rid of them positively, and that is to fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas. Although they are easily killed by this method, no other has been found to be at all effective. The complete directions for using this gas have been published frequently in the Review, but many growers, especially beginners, have not had occasion to use it, and are, consequently, not informed on the subject.

You will need some half-gallon stone jars, four or five of them for each 100 feet of house. You will also need sulphuric acid and some cyanide of potash, ninety-eight per cent pure. A house about twenty-five feet wide, with gutters seven feet high, will require four jars per 100 feet of length. In each jar is placed a pint of water and a little less than a pint of acid. These are fixed up a half hour before fumigating. Then all that is necessary to do is to drop in a package containing one and one-half to two ounces of the cyanide, for light or heavy fumigating. The packages should be wrapped in double papers or little sacks, and the whole package dropped in without unwrapping it. Start at the far end of the house and drop one carefully, walking quickly to the next jar, and so on. When you get to the end of the house, get out quickly and lock the house to keep everyone out until morning.

The acid will soon eat through the papers and decompose the cyanide, making a poisonous gas. The cyanide itself is the deadliest of poisons and must be handled with the greatest care. The foliage must be dry when using it. Do not use it when the house is wet, or it will injure the plants. H. G.

FUNGUS ON PALMS.

We enclose herewith a sample of a phœnix palm which has an insect on it with which we are not acquainted. Can you tell us how to destroy the pest?

S. S. C.

The specimen referred to in this query is affected with a fungoid disease that is not uncommon on various species of this palm. The fungus in question grows from spores that develop within the tissue of the leaf in much the same manner as those of the carnation rust. The fungus in time grows through the surface of the phœnix leaf and ultimately discharges another crop of spores, to do further damage.

This phœnix fungus is not specially dangerous to the plant grower, though it is unsightly. The trouble is usually aggravated by too low a temperature and too much moisture during the winter season.

PORTLAND, ORE.—W. H. Wood has sold the greenhouses on the Base Line road and East Sixty-first street to N. L. Crouch, of Salem.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business conditions for the last week have been exceptionally good, with only an occasional dull day. Prices of selected stock are slightly advanced. Carnations are more plentiful, but far from being a surplus. Chrysanthemums are in their prime and prices remain firm. Appleton, Jerome Jones and Ivory head the list. Pompons and miniature varieties also sell well, either as pot plants or cut flowers. The cold, rainy weather has at last cleaned out the outside stock, which will create a greater demand for flowers.

Roses are a scarcity, with a daily cleanup. Valley is to be had in limited quantities, but the demand is intermittent. Local violets are exceedingly scarce, but California grown violets have made their appearance, although much of the fragrance is lost in transit. Cattleyas are increasing in public favor, but can only be had in limited quantities. There is an unusual demand for ferns and house plants and the available supply of medium sizes is about exhausted.

The outlook for Thanksgiving day is promising, and advance orders are being booked rapidly. The usual football game at Multnomah field will create a demand for the yellow mums.

Various Notes.

Wallace Garside, late of the Tonseth Floral Co., is now with John Holden.

Frank Leupke, of Vancouver, was congratulating himself on the completion of his new houses, only to have his stock nipped on account of defective plumbing.

Max Smith was a victim of a bad check last week. After placing a large order for future delivery, a man presented a check, and the clerk, unsuspecting, cashed it, to his sorrow.

Sam Roake, the green goods man, is down the coast gathering lyrata foliage. It remains green the entire winter, on the western slope, and is unusually effective for decorations, when the wild smilax is not obtainable.

George Betz has sold his location at 349½ Morrison street to A. Souberou, who will continue the same as a retail store. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There has been a decided change in the weather within the last week. We have had several nights of severe frost and, as a consequence, outside stock is scarce. Gaillardia, coreopsis, stocks and sweet peas have completely passed out of existence. Chrysanthemums to a slight extent show the effects of the cold weather. The prices have advanced slightly and, if we have a continuation of frost, we may expect still higher prices. The best Bonnaffons cost the retailers at the rate of about $5 per hundred, with the white sorts a shade cheaper.

Violets are not so plentiful as they were, and unless we have a change in weather, whereby rain will supersede frost, we can expect to have an advance on the present prices; 75 cents per dozen bunches has been the ruling price for the last month, but with the advent of cold weather, the growers have made the bunches slightly smaller, without changing the rates charged the retailers. Carnations show a tendency to become scarcer, although at the present there has been no difficulty in getting plenty of stock. Enchantress has been especially plentiful for the last few weeks and, although at the present time the growers are bringing in slightly less stock than before, there seems to be no danger but that there will continue to be ample cuttings of this popular sort. All the red varieties are slightly scarcer and we may look for an advance on these at any time.

The only really scarce article with the retailers at the present time is good roses. The growers at Burlingame are sending into town the only Beauties that we have, but these are only second quality at the best and practically no fancy stock has been exhibited in the shop windows for several months. The display of Bride and Maid is up to the average, and these, with a few bunches of Liberty and Cecil Brunner, practically compose our showing of roses at this time. The Alameda county growers are bringing into town some good yellow chrysanthemums and a few late whites; these are sold to the stores at from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen.

Valley is fairly plentiful, but seems not to be generally of first quality. The growers, owing to the few days of cold weather, have overforced it, and long, weak stems and small flowers have been the result. Orchids are displayed in greater numbers than at any time this season. Cattleyas are the ruling flower and a majority of the stock comes from Santa Cruz, Cal. Maidenhair ferns and asparagus are rather scarce. California red berries have made their appearance in large quantities and are the most popular article with the street hucksters.

Business is quiet compared to that of a year ago, but the dealers are looking forward to a heavy Thanksgiving week. Funeral trade is fairly good, and quite a number of society functions have assisted in keeping the ball a-rolling.

VIOLETS IN SAN FRANCISCO.

For many years the growing of violets has been entirely in the hands of the Italian market gardeners in the neighborhood of San Francisco. Several miles from there, in the neighborhood of Ocean View and Colma, are situated the largest violet beds in California. Originally these lands were devoted to truck farming, which is also entirely controlled by Italians in this neighborhood. Several of these farmers a few years ago commenced the growing of violets in a small way, and a season's results showed that the rich sandy land and moist atmosphere were peculiarly adapted to the growth of these flowers. Immediately after San Francisco's big fire their culture was kept up only in a desultory fashion, but with the advent of the tremendous demand of the last two seasons, more growers have entered the field and more acres have been devoted to the growing of violets.

In a few isolated instances, the growing of violets has been tried in Alameda and portions of San Mateo counties, but, owing to the fact that both these localities are not strictly within the fog belt, only partially successful results have been obtained.

The Princess of Wales violet has been for the last ten years the only variety that has been grown here in quantity, and from present indications it appears to supply every want of the flower-loving public. It is only within a radius of five miles that it can apparently be grown with profit. It was formerly supposed that the violet could be grown reasonably well on almost any soil, but we have found out that in California at least, the atmospheric conditions have quite as much to do with the successful growing of this flower as has the ground in which it is planted. Long, cool nights, foggy mornings and sunshine in the afternoon are the ideal conditions, and these, together with deep, rich, sandy soil, fertilized for years for vegetable growing, have proven violets to be one of the best paying crops to which it is possible to devote the land.

As before stated, the Italian growers have absolute control of this industry, in the same way that the Chinese have monopolized the sweet peas, asters and chrysanthemums.

On the approach of the holidays, it is the custom for shippers, who buy and send the flowers to out-of-town points, to make an effort to control the holiday crop by offering a bonus on the ruling rates until after the holidays. This they can well afford to do for several weeks, as the interior florists, as well as those in Washington and Oregon, are perfectly willing to pay good prices for these flowers at such times. This works quite a hardship on the local dealers. Flower buyers are so accustomed to seeing large quantities of violets on all the street corners during the season, that they seriously object to the extra price which it is necessary to charge them, by virtue of the fact that for a few weeks out-of-town buyers will pay a handsome advance on San Francisco market rates. G.

GLADIOLI ON PACIFIC COAST.

We have read with interest the articles in the REVIEW'S San Francisco correspondence, and beg the privilege of making inquiries in regard to gladiolus culture on the Pacific coast. Will you kindly give us some idea of the demand and the average price per hundred for cut flowers, the length of the season, and also the demand for bulbs in the fall? Would it be wise for one to go there expecting to make a living growing gladioli for a time, at least until one could become acquainted with other farming or fruit-growing methods there, that might be better? Of course, we understand that it is necessary to irrigate. We have been growing gladioli here, in Ohio, successfully for many years and thoroughly understand the business in this part of the country. We are growing the new, large varieties exclusively.

A. H. A.

The demand shown by the flower buying public for gladioli during the past season shows that this well-known flower has come to stay. This was particularly noticeable with the newer varieties, and such kinds as America, Augusta, Easter, 1900 and many others were not produced in anything like sufficient quantity to cover the market. The comparatively high prices asked for flowering bulbs kept many growers from planting them, but those who did so had no difficulty in getting from $5 to $6 per hundred stems and retained their stock bulbs for another season. The older and poorer strains are being gradually superseded by the better article and, if the demand is as general next year as it was in the season that has just passed, gladioli will be another good paying crop.

Gladioli seem to flourish in almost any soil that is neither too heavy nor excessively sandy. Good sediment ground, with a generous drainage, suits them best. Regarding watering, unless the season is exceptionally dry or the soil allowed to get hard, a couple of good soakings will be all that is necessary to induce the bulbs to put forth their greatest efforts. In places in California where the rainfall is very light it would be necessary to keep the ground artificially watered oftener than this. Again, in localities where the natural moisture stays in the ground all season, no extra waterings need be provided.

Good cultivation, freedom from weed pests, no excessive manuring and a new situation every few seasons, is all that is required either by an amateur or an old established grower to produce a profitable crop, provided the best varieties are planted and the crop is produced near enough to market to be advantageously handled without paying too high tribute to the express company.

By a judicious succession of plantings it is possible to have flowers from June until the end of November. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THE McKay Nursery Co., of Waterloo, Wis., has purchased seventeen acres of land near that town.

T. V. MUNSON, of Denison, Tex., is on the program of the American Breeders' Association, which meets at Omaha, December 8 to 10, for a paper on breeding the grape. Most of those on the program are Department of Agriculture or agricultural college experts.

IT is going the rounds of the trade press in Europe that "John D. Rockefeller has ordered from Gouda, Holland, nurserymen, 35,000 pine trees, with which he proposes to plant a park. The trees will pay $20,000 duty on entering America."

THE Wichita Nursery Co., of Wichita, Kan., sold 60,000 catalpa trees this fall to Rev. O. N. Roth, who will plant them on his farm in Harper county, Kan., believing that there are few better investments than the planting of such trees for timber, especially in western Kansas.

VALUE OF INSECTICIDES.

other point in favor of the solution is that it does not injure the bloom or growth as fumigation often does, if the solution is properly prepared and applied.

Fumigation With Cyanide of Potassium.

It is my experience, after considering all kinds and conditions of plants and insects and greenhouses, that this material, though perhaps used the least, is the cheapest and most effective means for fumigation. The best results are obtained by using three-quarters of an ounce of potassium cyanide, at a cost of 2½ cents, and one and one-quarter ounces of sulphuric acid, at a cost of about ¼ cent, per thousand cubic feet. This method, besides costing only about 2½ cents per thousand feet, is thoroughly effective and requires little labor in its application.

As this remedy has heretofore been considered by a great many florists as dangerous to human life in its application, it has been but sparsely used. The solution, however, is so weak that there is not the least danger to human life or health if only the simplest precautions are taken.

The formula recommended is as follows: Potassium cyanide, one ounce by weight; sulphuric acid, one and one-half ounces by volume; water, three ounces by volume.

The cyanide should in all cases be chemically pure, ninety-eight per cent pure cyanide, and the sulphuric acid be the best commercial or eighty-five per cent grade. It is always best to have the cyanide broken up into small pieces. Generators should always be earthen or glass vessels, never metal, having a gallon capacity. In order to distribute the gas equally throughout the greenhouse, it is well to place the generators at equal distances apart along the walks. The greenhouse should be as much as possible air-tight, with dry atmosphere and a temperature below 60 degrees Fahrenheit, and the generation of gas should be done after darkness has set in. After having placed the generators properly, with water and sulphuric acid, the packages of cyanide are then added, commencing at the generator farthest from the place of exit, and the operators should then leave as soon as possible and close the door. The dropping of the packages of cyanide into the generators by means of a cord operated from a position outside the greenhouse is entirely unnecessary and is now quite obsolete, as the fumes from the composition are too weak to do any injury. The quantity of the doses must, however, always be regulated by the florist from the condition of the greenhouse, the plants, and the insects to be destroyed. As to the time of application, the table below will give the approximate time. It is, however, always better to have the solution strong and the duration of the application short than the reverse, both for the life of the plants and the destruction of the insects.

Table of Plants.

Three-fourths of an ounce of potassium cyanide to 1,000 cubic feet of space for twenty to twenty-four minutes: Araucarias, ageratums, alternantheras, aspidistras, asters, asparagus, aquatics, bulbs of all kinds, begonias, bougainvilleas, coleus, chrysanthemums, crotons, cordylines, Cyperus alternifolius, dracænas, dahlias, euphorbias, ferns of all varieties (except adiantums), geraniums, gardenias, hoyas, marantas, orange trees, lemon trees, salvia, sweet peas, tradescantia, pandanus, roses, carnations.

Three-fourths of an ounce of potassium cyanide to 1,000 cubic feet of space for twenty-two to twenty-nine minutes: Palms, phœnix, livistonas, kentias, cocos, sago, latanias, orchids, violets, etc.

Three-fourths of an ounce of potassium cyanide to 1,000 cubic feet of space for eighteen to twenty-four minutes: Lettuce, spinach, parsley, tomatoes, onions, beets, corn, celery, turnips; in fact, all vegetables.

It is the confidence I have in the remedy which prompts me to highly recommend it as the cheapest and most effective means for destroying the white fly, plant lice and scale insects commonly found in the greenhouse, without, however, destroying or endangering the health of plants or of the operator of this remedy, and I would encourage in every way possible the use of this means, that those insects, if not totally destroyed, may still be so kept in check as to do but the minimum of harm.

should now go into coldframes. Included among these are pansies, myosotis, Canterbury bells, foxgloves, aubrietias and a number of other plants, many of which might survive the winter in the open, given favorable climatic conditions, but which will all come through unscathed if given sash protection after steady cold weather arrives. Dry leaves, pine needles or hay can be used over the plants in winter in frames, but should not be put on until the soil is firmly frozen. All these biennials can be planted quite closely together. We do not want them to grow during the winter, but just keep them alive and fresh.

SHADING.

There are not many plants which will require shading on the glass after this date. Adiantums or other tender ferns and many palms should have a little; not that there is now any great danger of their burning, but with shade they hold a darker green color. Chrysanthemums in bloom should have the glass obscured. Carnations want all light possible, as do violets and roses. Orchids, with a few exceptions, will now stand the full sun and be benefitted thereby. The leaves may take on a rather more yellowish hue, but bulbs made up will be firmer and afterward more floriferous. A use of the hose and brush on roofs that still carry shading will give the plants more sunshine, which, except in a few special cases, as those named, is what they now need, the amount of sunlight now steadily declining daily.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Business, which has been good all the fall, was given a boost by the cold wave and snow storm of November 17.

Fall weddings have been numerous this season, another evidence of prosperity—to the florist, at least. Introduction parties, teas, receptions, balls, bridge parties and the many other events incident to elite society are also in full sway, all creating a demand for the florist's goods and his skill in decorating.

The call for violets, valley, orchids, Beauties and mums has been heavy and continuous. The only noticeable scarcity has been in violets. Roses and mums have been coming in heavily. There has been a good demand for single and pompon mums, some of the newer varieties becoming quite popular.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association was held Thursday evening, November 18.

The executive committee reported on the arrangements for the annual meeting of the State Horticultural Society, to be held in Minneapolis December 7 to 9. The Florists' Association is now an auxiliary society, and December 8, at 11 a. m., is arranged for the reading of papers by members of the Florists' Association and the exhibition of flowers.

A. C. Hansen, who visited his native country, Denmark, the past summer, gave a short talk on his impressions of the trade in that country, the florists being apparently better off there than here.

H. Will gave an interesting description of the Chicago and Milwaukee shows, which he attended.

F. M. Johnson, of Chicago, gave a few encouraging remarks complimentary to the society.

S. L. Dysinger read a paper on "Looking Outward," giving the office man's view of the business in general.

Prof. L. R. Cady followed with an interesting talk on "Plant Breeding," as conducted by the state experimental station, concluding with the remark that this department of the work might be quite beneficial to the florists if they would ask the legislature for the needed appropriation.

J. Jorgenson, of the Donaldson Co., exhibited White Enchantress carnations, scoring 81 points; White Perfection, 83; Light Pink Enchantress, 80½, and Yellow Eaton mums, 81 points.

E. Nagel & Son had a nice vase of assorted mums, scoring 79½.

The next meeting will be held December 14.

Various Notes.

Holm & Olson are cutting some extra fine orchids. They have just installed another large refrigerator for storage purposes. O. J. Olson, of this firm, is away on his annual moose hunt in the northern part of the state.

Visitors: T. Mellstrom, New York, representing Sander & Sons; A. Hans, Boston, representing K. J. Kuyk, and F. M. Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

STERLING, ILL.—The Sterling Floral Co. is making improvements at its greenhouses.

ADMIRATION

This carnation we offer to the trade as being one of the finest Carnations of any color that we know of up to date. Being a beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Winona, having that beautiful satin finish, always showing up well either in natural or artificial light. Plants benched in August are now coming into full crop, carrying from 10 to 20 buds. We have been cutting since September 10th. As a money maker you will find no equal.

The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, excellent form, well built up in the center, with the petals so arranged as to make it stand the general requirements of a good fancy commercial variety. A grand keeper and shipper.

The habit is ideal, upright with no surplus grass and every shoot going into flower. Its freedom and earliness make it nearly the ideal carnation. The calyx is very tough and seldom bursts. Can be handled with great success either from the field or grown inside all summer. No one has to be an expert to handle this variety. It scored 86 points at the American Carnation Society meeting at Indianapolis, January 27 to 28, 1909.

Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.
250 at 1000 rate.

Sangamo

Brilliant, glistening pink. Winner wherever shown: Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee. The greatest bloomer and fastest grower of any. Flowers perfect, stems long and stiff.

Why You Should Grow SANGAMO

1st.—It will give you more blooms in a season than any other variety. The fastest grower we have ever seen. 2nd.—It is the best color of anything in this class, Winsor, Rose-pink Enchantress or any other. 3rd.—The blooms are well formed, nicely rounded out in the center, and do not fade. 4th.—The flower stands well above the calyx, making it impossible to split. 5th.—It comes early with long stems that are always stiff, holding the flower gracefully. 6th—The entire stock is clean and healthy. The cuttings root easily and the plants lift from the field and establish themselves without a set-back. 7th.—Not only an exhibition variety, but the best bread and butter Carnation for any florist to grow. Let us pay your coal bill for you.

Rooted cuttings guaranteed. January delivery, 100, $12; 1000, $100

Call and See it Growing Miami Queen

In dissemination of this new carnation, the introducer feels confident it excels all similar varieties in the following respects:

It has a strong constitution and will thrive with ordinary culture.

The color is a grand cerise pink and very double, shows up fine under artificial light.

The blooming qualities are of the best, commencing in early Fall and continuing throughout the season.

During the dark days of Winter, this carnation, having a strong calyx, does not split to any extent, like other pinks.

The form is ideal, the flower being from 3 inches to 4 inches; the plant compact, with no surplus grass; the stem is long and graceful; keeping qualities are excellent; a good shipper; and we fell confident that this is one of the best commercial carnations sent out in years; we have given it five years' trial, and it is better this year than ever.

We are booking orders for January, 1910, delivery, at $10.00 per 100; $85.00 per 1000. Orders filled in strict rotation. For sale by

The Market.

Only slight improvement is noticeable in the flower market, probably owing to the continued warm weather. Chrysanthemums have shortened up considerably in the last week, no doubt on account of the growers holding them for Thanksgiving. Lilies and callas are both of good quality. Lily of the valley, violets and orchids meet with a fair sale. Some Paper Whites are to be seen, but they are not in great demand yet. Sweet peas are arriving in fair quantity and meet with a good demand. Beauties, roses and carnations are equal to the demand. There are some good Lorraine begonias, cyclamens and primulas to be seen, but as yet there is little demand.

Various Notes.

Ed. Rankin has taken over the greenhouses at Broad Ripple, formerly managed by the A. A. Warner Co. Mr. Rankin has gone to considerable expense in overhauling the place, having put a new roof on the boiler shed, besides going over the entire heating system and making numerous other repairs.

Roepke & Rieman have a fine crop of smilax coming on for Christmas. This firm has a bench of California violets and pansies this year, and if successful, intend to increase the quantity next year.

The Smith & Young Co. has been sending in some good Brides and Maids. This firm reports good success with orchids this year, having been making regular shipments to St. Louis and Chicago.

A. Wiegand & Sons have suffered quite a loss in their cyclamen, having lost about one-half of their entire lot on account of the mite. The plants were looking exceptionally fine until the last three or four weeks, when they began to show unmistakable evidence of this pest.

J. J. Karins, with H. A. Dreer, was in the city last week.

John Rieman served last week on the jury that acquitted the moving picture show people, on trial for keeping open on Sunday.

B. F. Hensley, of Knightstown, was a visitor last week. Mr. Hensley says he has a fine lot of mums for Thanksgiving.

F. W. Brandt, who purchased Wm. Billingsly's place, reports business good.

Alvin Schreiber, foreman for Bertermann Bros., has a fine lot of cyclamen and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine coming on for Christmas. Mr. Schreiber is hard to beat on these two plants.

The Market.

Business has been rather quiet for some time, yet some of the retailers say they have no kick coming. Those who have had plenty of mums have done a good business. Roses have been plentiful, with little sale for them. Carnations are good, with a fair demand. Thanksgiving will just about see an end to mums and then we can look for better sales for other stock.

So far, this month has been warmer than the corresponding month for a number of years, but at present it is cooler, with prospects for more seasonable weather.

Various Notes.

The William Blackman Floral Co. reports business as good, especially their out-of-town trade. They have had some large weddings and funerals, with plenty of stock for the work. George Blackman says that Thanksgiving will about finish their mums, which have been extra good this year. They are cutting a large quantity of American Beauties and other roses. Their Beauties are good. Their supply of seasonable flowers is always good.

Emil Niednagel says that business has been quiet for a week or two, but is picking up again. He says that fancy ferns are nice, but do not keep as well as usual. This means something to them, as their fern bill is a large item.

Nellie Goodge expects a nice crop of carnations for Christmas. Her potted plants are all in good condition. Business has been quiet with her.

Royston & Fenton are receiving some fine carnations from W. J. Ritterskamp, of Princeton, Ind.

Louis Fritsch says business is good, but could be better. E. L. F.

GREENWICH, CONN.—Robert McMillen, who furnished the decorations for the coming out ball of Miss Everard, of this city, has found it necessary to sue the lady's parents for $1,200, the balance said to be due for the floral display. The decoration, according to orders, was so arranged as to carry out a color scheme of lavender and yellow, and was a fashionable and lavish affair, using a large quantity of orchids at $1 each, as well as other expensive items.

ANDERSON, IND.

Stuart & Haugh gave their eighteenth annual chrysanthemum show the last three days of last week. Two houses of benched and potted mums were in their prime, several varieties showing blooms equal to any show flowers. Four houses of carnations were a mass of buds and bloom. The white, pink and rose-pink Enchantress took the lead, being fine, while Bountiful, Lawson, Lawson-Enchantress, Beacon, Robert Craig, Victory, Ruby and White Perfection were elegant. Three houses of roses well in crop were much admired, those grown being Richmond, Rhea Reid, Killarney, Bride and Maid. Two benches of callas in flower and Lilium rubrum in full flower were quite attractive. A house of smilax, with one solid bench of Kaiserin, and with side benches of cyclamen and Lorraine begonias, were praised by the visitors. Ferns, palms, asparagus, araucarias and rubber plants filled two houses. The violets, primulas, poinsettias and coleus showed up to good advantage and the thousands of rooted moonvines in sand surprised the visitors.

The weather was fine and the attendance large, all present being greatly pleased and interested. These shows are always free and are looked forward to by hundreds of friends and customers. Sunday, November 21, the day after the show, the place was thronged with visitors.

Baur & Smith exhibited a vase of their white carnation, Shasta, which showed up fine and demonstrated its keeping qualities, also a white seedling that will give White Enchantress a good race.

The E. G. Hill Co. sent two vases of its elegant show mums, which were surrounded by interested visitors at all times.

Baskets of roses, carnations and mums, and floral emblems of flowers and wreaths of magnolia, galax and cycas leaves added much to the exhibition.

PARIS, TEX.—The Paris Floral Club recently held its annual flower show in the Massenburg building. The attendance was satisfactory to the club members and the exhibits were excellent.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—The first annual meeting of the Illinois Outdoor Improvement Association was held here November 18 and 19. The discussion related largely to the improvement of public school grounds and streets by means of trees and shrubs. The meeting was an entire success and great interest was shown, many notable speakers taking part in the discussion.

Prepare for the Holidays

A View of one of Godfrey Aschmann's Gloire de Lorraine Houses, taken Nov. 18, 1909.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Have a whole house full of them in 6 in. sizes, in first-class condition, ready to bloom now and for the holidays. Our experiments in the past in raising and cultivating this early Christmas plant put us in the foreground and now we will be able to deliver them in a much improved condition, with flowers much brighter in color and hardier, standing shipping well. Everybody seeing them, even enemies, must admire them. They are cracker-jacks; 7-in. pots, $1.25 to $1.50; 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00. The 75c and $1.00 sizes are almost as big as 8-in.; 3-in. pots, 12c to 15c.

Made-up Plants, 8-in. pans, with 3 3-in. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in center, edged with Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, or assorted dish ferns, very attractive. Sell on sight, 60c per pan.

Begonia Flambeau, 4-in., 15c; 5¼-in., 20c.

Begonias. New improved Erfordii and Gracilis, 5¼-in., $2.50 per doz.

TESTIMONY FROM MICHELL.

I personally visited Mr. Aschmann's greenhouses September 21, 1909, and found that the Araucarias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Boston, Whitmani, Scottii, Amerpohlii, Todeaoides ferns, Rubber Plants, Kentias and Arecas are indeed A No. 1. Have never seen any better plants. The Gloire de Lorraine begonias in 6-in. pots are a perfect wonder, bushy and clean. Have never seen his greenhouses filled with plants as good as they are now.

FOLIAGE TURNS YELLOW.

Will you tell me what makes the leaves on my poinsettias turn yellow and drop off? They made good roots, but in a week or two they started to rot. They keep making new roots and keep rotting off. J. G.

There are several causes for the leaves on poinsettias turning yellow. The most common cause is too much water at the root. If the soil in the pots or pans becomes soggy, you will assuredly lose a large part of the foliage. Too heavy or too frequent use of liquid manure will also cause the leaves to turn yellow, as will too low a temperature. Keep your plants now in a night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees. Do not water until the soil in the pots dries out fairly well. Never apply manure water unless you are sure the pots are well filled with roots and always avoid the use of fresh manure in the compost. The plants want full sunshine and free ventilation to keep them stocky. As the bracts develop, a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night will suit them, lowering it 5 to 10 degrees when the bracts are fully expanded. C. W.

NEWS NOTES.

Freeport, Ill.—The Freeport Floral Co., which was incorporated some months ago by Louis Bauscher, D. C. L. Mease and Chas. H. Little, will occupy a large, handsome room in the new Alfred Frueh building, on Stephenson street.

Beaver Falls, Pa.—E. C. Wagoner, whose greenhouses are located on the Darlington road a short distance from this city, has been suffering for several weeks from a severe illness and general physical prostration, but is now recovering.

Richmond, Ind.—Fred H. Lemon & Co. held a chrysanthemum show in the Starr piano salesrooms, at the corner of Tenth and Main streets. The show continued for two days and attracted large crowds of people. Mr. Lemon's pompon mums won several prizes at the St. Louis show.

Kansas City, Kan. — James Brough, who bought the business of A. T. Holmes, at 708 Minnesota avenue, has now removed to 812 Minnesota avenue and is nicely established in his new store. Mr. Brough is an experienced florist and was with J. S. Short, at 512 North Sixth street, this city, eleven years ago.

Fond Du Lac, Wis.—Bush & Broome have purchased the Boulay greenhouses, formerly used for vegetables, and are now growing a line of florists' stock. Mr. Broome was previously a retail florist at Stevens Point, Wis. The Veraus & Bauer Shoe Co. is now handling cut flowers and plants, at the old Johannson store, as a side line.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Topel & Giebels, a newly organized firm, have opened a store at 328 First avenue. Mr. Giebels has just completed a large job of landscape work at Grand Rapids, and more work of the same sort has been promised to him in that city, including one contract which requires the planting of something over 2,000 shrubs next spring.

Kingston, N. Y.—David Burgevin has been elected, on the democratic ticket, as supervisor in the seventh department of the city. This result is considered a particularly emphatic endorsement of Mr. Burgevin, since his district is strongly republican. He was born in this city, has built up a good business here and the voters were well acquainted with the man they were supporting.

Connellsville, Pa.—P. R. De Muth & Sons have incorporated with $20,000 capital stock. At a recent meeting of the stockholders P. R. De Muth, C. E. De Muth, A. N. De Muth and J. A. De Muth were elected directors and then elected the following officers: President, P. R. De Muth; vice-president, C. E. De Muth; secretary and treasurer, A. N. De Muth; manager, J. A. De Muth.

Logansport, Ind.—Gustav Minx, the florist at the Longcliff institution, gave his annual flower show Tuesday and Wednesday, November 9 and 10. As Mr. Minx had previously announced, the display of flowers was not as large as last year, but more select in character, as he had decided to give his attention to a comparatively few choice specimens. The visitors from the city were received on the afternoons of the two days, and the patients attended in the evenings.

Greenhouse Heating.

The coal trade reports that the car shortage is passing.

If your heating apparatus does not work as well as it should, send the Review a careful description of it. We will give you the advice of a practical man and it may save you a good bit of fuel money.

This season a new line is appearing in the catalogues of those houses that make an effort to list a complete line of growers' supplies. The new line is pipe joint compound and iron repair cement. The pipe joint compound makes a tight joint but one that comes apart easily; the iron cement stops leaks in boilers and pipes. There are several manufacturers of these useful articles, but only one, the Alan H. Tripp Co., has thus far appreciated how glad greenhouse owners would be to know about them, and as a result is getting its line into all the big supply catalogues.

LETTUCE AND CARNATIONS.

I am figuring on erecting a range of two houses, running east and west. House "A," the south house, will be 18¼x75 feet, and the south or exposed wall will be four and a half feet high. House "B" will be 14¾x75 and seven feet high to the gutters. Both houses will measure eleven feet three inches to the ridge. I intend to use house "A" for lettuce and house "B" for carnations and other flowers.

I should like a little more light on the heating proposition. Will you, therefore, please advise me what horse-power of boiler to use; what size of pipe and how arranged; what make and kind of boiler to use, whether for steam or hot water, and the probable cost of the whole outfit? Any information you can furnish will be greatly appreciated. I am located in northern Ohio. O. A. C.

For a temperature of 50 degrees, which will answer for lettuce and for most varieties of carnations, about 800 square feet of radiating surface will be required, if hot water, which will generally be preferred for a range of this size, is used. It will be found most economical of fuel if a boiler with a rating of 1,000 square feet is used. The estimate is made with the understanding that there is no glass in the side walls.

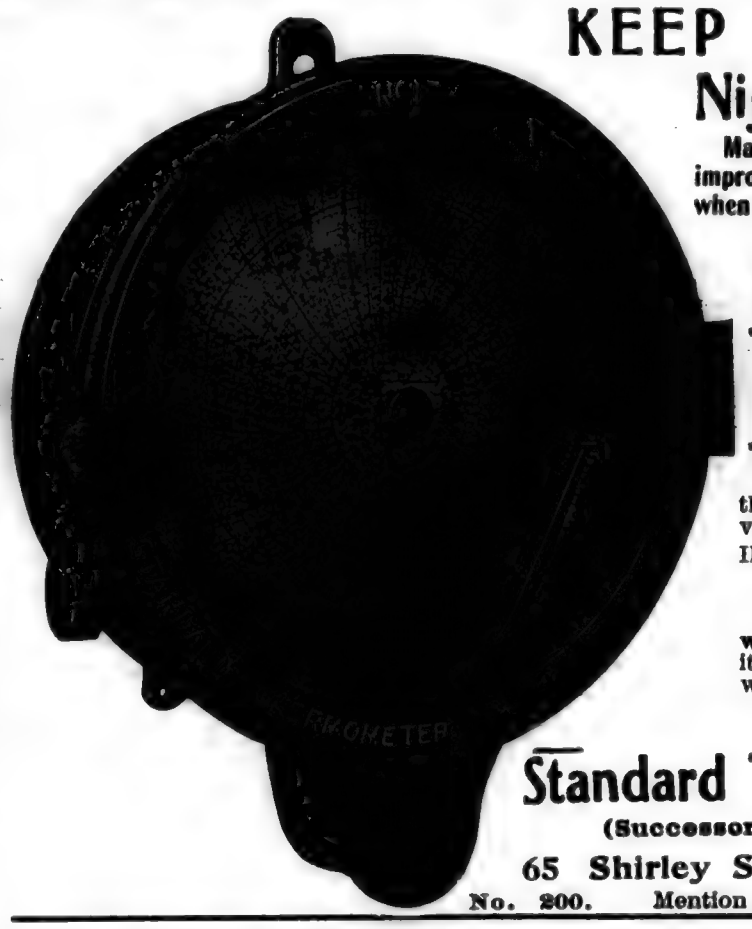
To heat house "A" to 50 degrees it will be well to use two 2½-inch flow pipes, carried either upon the plates or truss rods, and seven 2-inch returns on the walls will answer as returns. Of these, four should be upon the outer wall. In house "B" use two 2½-inch flow pipes and five 2-inch returns.

The cost of installing the plant cannot be closely estimated, as the kind of boiler used would make quite a difference, and the discounts that could be obtained upon the boiler and the piping would vary so much in different places as to make an estimate of little help. The best way to ascertain the cost is to obtain bids from two or three reputable firms.

TWO OHIO HOUSES.

We expect to build two greenhouses in the spring. The houses will run east and west. The south house will be used for lettuce and the north one for carnations. The lettuce house will be 19x75 and the south wall will be four feet high, with three feet of glass. The carnation house will be 14x75, with a wooden wall on the north side. The west end of both houses will be built against a shed, but at the east end there will be glass above a 3-foot wooden wall. The ridge in both houses will be eleven feet high and the partition wall will be glass.



Kindly give me the best plan for heating these houses. We have a Wilks boiler, 36x42, rated at 1,450 feet of 4-inch pipe. Will it answer the purpose, and will it also be sufficient for an extra house, 14x75, to be joined to the north side? What do you think of the plan of making the south wall glass to within one foot of the ground? Would you make the north wall solid, as we propose? If we use two benches, with a walk between them and a narrow walk along the side walls, will we thus have a convenient arrangement and utilize as much space as possible? D. A. A. C.

To heat these houses and an additional house 14x75 feet will require about 1,200 square feet of radiation. This is somewhat under the rating of the boiler named, which would undoubtedly maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in the three houses, but it would be rather more economical of fuel if a boiler with a somewhat larger rating could be secured. The arrangement of the benches so as to allow a narrow walk along each side wall, with a walk through the center of the house, will be quite satisfactory, as will the use of three feet of glass in the south wall of the lettuce house, in which the crop is evidently to be grown in the ground or upon slightly raised beds.

For the lettuce house use two 2½-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns, and in the carnation house two flows and five returns.

A RANGE OF FOUR HOUSES.

We are building four greenhouses, two of them 16x100 and the other two 20x100, and intend to heat them with hot water. The houses run from northeast to southwest. The southeast side is four and a half feet high, with eighteen inches of glass and the lower part cement. The two 16-foot houses each measure nine feet to the ridge. We have planned to use a 3-inch flow on each side, running them on the side walls, giving them a rise of twelve inches to the back end and connecting with five rows of 2-inch pipes, to return on each side below the benches. Would that be enough piping to keep the temperature up to 70 degrees in the coldest nights, here in southeastern Pennsylvania?

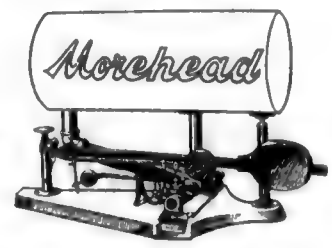
The two 20-foot houses are eleven feet to the ridge. In these houses we propose to put six rows of 4-inch pipes, to keep a temperature of 55 degrees. Is our plan a good one? J. C. F.

The use of two 3-inch flow pipes would take care of the radiation required in the 16-foot houses, and five rows of 2-inch pipes upon each side of the houses in the return coils would keep the temperature up to 70 degrees in the coldest weather in your state.

In the 20-foot houses the use of six 4-inch pipes, as proposed, would maintain 55 degrees, except in the coldest weather, and then it should not drop below 50 degrees.

IN WESTERN NEW YORK.

How many runs of 2-inch returns and what size of main will I need to heat my greenhouse to 60 degrees in zero weather, with hot water heat? The house is 21x50, fourteen feet to the ridge and six feet to the gutters. Three feet of the sides is glass and three feet double boarded, with paper between. The house runs north and south. The north end is protected by a workshed; the south end is glass. I will use three raised benches and one solid bed. A. M. D.



For a house twenty-one feet wide and with three feet of glass in each side wall, it will be advisable to have three 2½-inch flow pipes and fourteen 2-inch returns. One of the flows and four returns could be carried on each wall. The other flow can be under the ridge or on the purlin, as preferred, and two of the returns could be under each bench.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Mild weather still prevails and as yet there is no frost in the ground. Chrysanthemums still reign supreme and are selling fine for Thanksgiving. The medium grades are the most sought after and stock will be none too plentiful when the big rush comes. Roses have been scarce the past week, as have been carnations. Valley and orchids are exceedingly scarce, and it was hardly possible to get an orchid flower the early part of the week. Plants will be used very much this year, as there are many begonias and cyclamen on the market now. Stock for Christmas is rounding into shape nicely, with nearly everybody.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Spring-like weather and an abundance of flowers are the conditions which the wholesalers are facing at this time. This, of course, has not been good for prices, although trade has been good and there is not much complaint from any source.

Thanksgiving looks good from here. There will be plenty of stock, that is sure. Chrysanthemums will be about all in this week, the weather bringing the later varieties right along with everything else, and when we do get bad weather we will be up against it, as stock of all kinds is being brought in now and may cause a shortage for Christmas.

Various Notes.

The reception committee met at the call of Chairman H. L. Blind and outlined their work for entertaining the American Carnation Society, and the program, if carried out, will certainly afford a pleasant time to our visitors.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. and the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. have merged their business under one head, which will be known as the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., incorporated under the state laws of Pennsylvania, with a capital stock of $300,000, all subscribed and paid in. Hoo-Hoo.

Business for the last two weeks has been fair. Nothing big occurred to create a demand for flowers, but a little work was turned out each day and the call for flowers for gifts and tables was good. Stock, therefore, cleaned up well in spite of the fact that we are in the midst of the mum season.

Mums, as a rule, are good, bad and "punk." The best are selling at $5 and $6 a dozen, and down as low as 50 cents. Violets are having plenty of call, and some good ones are to be had. Sweet peas are coming in, but are not moving as well as expected. Carnations are improving daily and some good ones are to be had, which are selling well at times. Roses are not selling well, with the exception of Beauties, which clean up each day. Valley and orchids are selling well. Other stock is in good supply, including green goods. K. R.

The Market.

Thanksgiving week is the next thing in order, and the market men are getting ready for something unusual in the way of a rushing holiday business. There is every indication that this year's Thanksgiving demand, as well as the supply, will exceed that of many former years. The demand the last week has been unusually strong for the week before Thanksgiving, and there is a crisp tone about the market that promises well for a fine run next week.

Chrysanthemums are selling well, probably quite up to former years. Some fine varieties are to be seen at the Exchange and are moving well. Some extra fine Chadwick and Helen Frick are to be seen in the Charles street stores. Carnations are becoming daily more plentiful, but are taken well and the best long-stemmed ones are in steady demand. Enchantress appears to have the best call in every respect. Roses are more than plentiful and minor grades are hard to move. Crimson varieties are taken a little more freely, owing, no doubt, to the season. Killarney and My Maryland are doing finely with the growers. White Killarney seems to be a good thing to handle.

Various Notes.

James Hamilton, of Mount Washington, will give a talk at the Gardeners' Club, November 22, on his trip to the gold fields.

Halliday Bros. have some poinsettias which look promising and would be hard to beat. They have two large houses planted.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

There is too much stock on the market here, and not enough demand for good stock to bring it forth. Every day a lot of short roses and carnations, imperfect mums, etc., are loaded on to the market. There are some good roses, and carnations are improving. Beauties are not to be had, and mums are getting scarce. There is a prediction of a shortage the coming week.

Various Notes.

The Minnesota-Michigan game caused a great showing of maroon and gold mums, which sold well and at good prices, but necessarily in small quantities.

The regular monthly meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association was held November 18, instead of November 16, being postponed on account of the storm. The meeting was held in the hall at 510 Snelling avenue, St. Paul; it was well attended and was a good meeting. Prof. L. R. Cady read a paper on "Plant Breeding," and S. Dysinger gave a paper on "Looking Outward." Both were fine papers and occasioned some discussion. The next meeting will be at the Unitarian church, with the State Horticultural Society, with which the Minnesota florists have affiliated. The next regular meeting will be on the second Tuesday of December, instead of the third Tuesday, which would be too near Christmas.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Trade fell off a little last week. Flowers are quite plentiful just now. Carnations are coming in of fine quality and retail at 50 cents per dozen. Roses are good, bringing $1.50 per dozen at retail. Violets sell for $1 per hundred. Mums are still with us, but not quite as plentiful as before, the price ranging from $1.50 to $3 per dozen. Other fine flowers, such as candytuft, alyssum, mignonette, etc., help out a good deal.

The lack of cold weather has certainly been light on the coal bin. Prospects for Thanksgiving trade are bright, and indications are that flowers will be in good suppy on that day. Most of the outdoor bulb planting is now finished. Funeral work is fairly good at present.

Various Notes.

E. H. Chamberlain has a nice display of plants at his store, and reports a good demand for small table ferns. He is receiving some nice ones from Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, Mass.

P. Peirce is receiving some single violets from Harvey Briggs, of Dighton, Mass., that are simply immense. Mr. Peirce is also receiving some nice White Killarney and My Maryland roses.

J. H. Cleary is busy these days and keeps that new delivery wagon of his on the go.

Mrs. E. M. Davis is sending nice Whitmani fronds out of town. She makes a specialty of these.

R. H. Woodhouse had a nice wedding decoration last week.

The warm weather last Saturday brought out many fakers with cheap carnations for sale.

H. A. Jahn has a house of stocks that will be about right for Christmas. He has some very promising seedling carnations.

R. E. Nofftz is showing some fine Beacon carnations. W. L.

About Its Erection

Taken side by side, with conditions equal, the U-Bar house can be erected with less trouble and greatest speed. Look at a U-Bar house and it is plain enough why—rafter and roof bars combined in one—the entire frame reduced to a mere web—no complicated fittings to bolt up—one-third less glazing to do because the glass is spaced one-third wider—simply straight away work from start to finish.

If yours is a case where time counts and where greatest endurance and highest productiveness are requirements, then send for a catalogue and get in immediate touch with us.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

The Annual Christmas Number will be out December 16

The whole Trade knows the interest that attaches to these Special Numbers. This Christmas Number will be fully as fine as any that have gone before (The Review never goes backward)—and that's enough said on that score.

Advertisers who want to take advantage of this splendid opportunity for TALKING TO ALL THE BUYERS, should send their advertisements at once.

First forms (front and back pages) go to press December 10. Best positions go to those who get in early. No new advertisements or changes can be accepted after 5 p. m., December 14

Regular rates apply on space in the Special Numbers. A page is $30 00, a half page $15.00, a quarter page $7 50, and other spaces in proportion, with usual discounts to those who have yearly contracts. Classified advertisements are 10 cents per line each insertion, net.

Many a florist in a country town has built up a good wholesale mail order business in plants or cuttings by using these classified advs.

For every Special Edition some desirable advertisements arrive too late. You will make sure and avoid disappointment if you

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

AN ELABORATE FUNERAL.

Elaboration seems to be the order of the day in funerals, as well as in the other affairs of life. Far be it from any florist to deplore this tendency, for people who are buying funeral flowers probably are less inclined than any others to question cost so long as they get the service that they want, and the large funeral orders which now come to the leading retailers are more easily handled than any other class of large orders. But a big funeral calls for the exercise of no little originality and decorative skill. The elaborate, modern casket covers are among the best examples of the deftness and taste of the man in charge of the making-up.

At Pittsburg recently the Zieger Co. executed a funeral order which, for elaboration, never has been equaled in that city, famed as one of the best flower towns in the country. The accompanying illustrations give an excellent idea of the floral features of the funeral. One of the pictures shows the embowered couch on which the casket lay during the funeral services. It was arranged in the family home and the work required the use of 1,000 Beauties and 250 lilies, with large quantities of asparagus and other stock. This was the most unusual feature of the arrangements.

Another of the illustrations shows the scene in Allegheny cemetery, just before the arrival of the funeral cortege. A large tent open at one side was erected at the front of the vault, the flowers being used in the decoration of the interior of the tent. The third illustration serves to give an idea of the number and character of the designs that were sent to the funeral, many of them coming from other cities. The picture was taken after the tent had been removed from the front of the vault and the designs rearranged. The illustration is so clear that florists from outside of Pittsburg who shipped designs to the funeral can doubtless identify their own work.

LOOSE DESIGNING.

Artistic Value of Prevailing Styles.

A few weeks ago someone, whose name has now escaped my memory, invited a discussion of the artistic value of the prevailing style of loose designing. Although this subject was thrashed up and down and all around in these columns a few months ago, still the subject is important enough to warrant reopening the discussion, and I, for one, am willing to reopen it. I respectfully suggest, also, that somebody of the opposite opinion shall contradict my statements, with reason annexed or fancies expressed. Let us have something else than stolid indifference. A grunt of approval or a growl of disapproval would be preferable to a prolonged silence. It is certain that a free-for-all discussion of the subject would prove advantageous to readers, but most profitable to those who are interested enough to contribute some thought and ink. The scriptural statement that "it is more blessed to give than to receive" is a profound truth in all lines of effort. Let us give forth our best thought and experience, and test the assertion for ourselves.

Some Stereotyped Samples.

To be fair, we must take the average piece at the shop of the average florist, where we will find more five dollar pieces are being sent out than ten dollar or fifteen or twenty dollar pieces, and for the sake of simplicity we will select a wreath, both as a common piece and as one of possibilities. The style in which we most frequently see this piece finished is common enough, popular enough and stereotyped enough for any one to keep a mental picture of it before him constantly. We will take it for granted that the size is twelve to fourteen inches in diameter, and that the flowers with which it is to be covered are cut to the length of about four inches and inserted out and up from all three sides. By the time the piece is finished there is scarcely any center visible, but a mass of flowers and foliage, with no expression or design in arrangement. To say that this production could be recognized at a glance is scarcely within the limits of accurate language. It is huge, to be sure, but that is the most that can be said of it. It is too flaunting, and is all a thin boast of wealth and profusion that are absent.

For another example, take a piece of more intricate outline, such as an anchor, about a 24-inch size. Complete it after the most approved loose style and you really have a clumsy piece. The outline fills up too wide for the length of it. There is no variation in the strength of the lines; all are equally broad. There are no sharp points on the flukes, no diminishing and increasing in the branches, and there is just the same monotonous, flat width in the surface of the whole piece.

Outlines Lost in Confusion.

If you start out to do a thing, do it and don't do at it. If you are pretending to make an anchor, make a true one; if you start out to make a triangle, do not be too delicate about sharp points. Either make your formal pieces distinct and legible or do not make them at all. Do not lose your design in confusion before it is completed. Let these formal pieces be positive and clear-cut. The loose style is never going to develop character or individuality in designing. Do not be afraid of something that looks like a point or a bold outline.

Because pieces are loose, it is not necessarily true that they are artistic. There is such a thing as looseness which amounts to slovenliness, and neatness may be a twin of artistic worth.

The only place where the loose arrangement shines is in large pieces, and there its fault is that it is not loose enough. Loosen it out some more; give the roses and mums and carnations more stem. Give them a uniform outline if it is an intricate piece, and then give the loose style full play, letting the looseness break out and fall over in showers and sprays and all kinds of wild forms.

The Happy Middle Ground.

But what is the happy medium between the too solid and the too loose effects? In avoiding the fault of indistinctness, is there not danger that there will be too much formality and no suggestion left to imagination? Well, take that first design mentioned—the wreath. Do enough strict outlining to distinguish the form of the wreath and then continue to finish the piece in some definite form of design, as a spray of roses tapering to a point as it follows around the wreath, or two sprays crossed and tied on one side, with the two points coming close together, or a series of clusters with spaces of the background showing between.

With the anchor use a more strict outline throughout. Make the standard a straight line, fairly heavy. Make the ring at the top very wide and the flukes decidedly sharp at the points and heavy again where they join the standard. Preferably this piece should be made solid and relieved by a chain of small flowers on a cord, wrapped around the standard. The arms in a true anchor are at right angles with the standard, instead of being flat, and this will necessitate mounting the piece low on a base and filling the base with foliage only, as its best setting. An anchor thus completed ought to be a popular piece.

Monotonous Similarity.

One pertinent objection to the loose style of arrangement is that all the pieces sent from one shop to a certain funeral are so much like those of another shop sent to the same funeral. Then each of us is just like his rival. Why shall our store not have its individuality and our work be easily recognized? Is not that an inducement for customers? Style counts for a great deal in other lines. And then, taking utility into consideration, a piece more compactly arranged lasts better; or, rather, it does not show the wear and tear so plainly as one which, if a flower here and there drop out of place, begins to look ragged.

But somebody will suggest that flowers should not be crowded as they are in a solid piece. Who has not seen thick ranks, clumps and patches of trees and plants growing wild? Then mass every now and then, but be careful to relieve that mass by something free and easy over against it, like an open space in the forest which the vines have bridged over and the daisies have bordered.

Now we will listen while somebody else talks a while. Yes? Gertrude Blair.

AUTOMOBILE DELIVERY.

A. B. Cartledge, senior member of the firm of Pennock Bros., Philadelphia, when asked to give an opinion on the value of the automobile for the delivery of plants and flowers, said: "The automobile delivery wagon that we have been using for a year is not heavy enough for the purpose. Last season the manufacturers were so rushed with orders for touring cars that we were unable to get any one of them to originate a delivery car suitable for our purpose. We got a wagon builder to make it. He used the best material, but, as he had no experience, it proved too light when loaded with decorative plants. We are still using the machine, and believe that, when perfected, the automobile delivery wagon will become invaluable for the florists. We find that our car can make three trips to Chestnut Hill, eleven miles, and back without difficulty, while one trip is quite as much as our team can manage in a day." Phil.

WORKING HOURS IN ENGLAND.

If retail florists in the United States, who are unrestricted except for some communities which compel Sunday closing, were obliged to obey such regulations as are in vogue in England, the "holler" would resound through the length and breadth of the land. In England the so-called Factory and Workshop Act is applied to flower stores the same as to boiler shops, and it prescribes conditions of service much more minutely than would seem tolerable in this land of the free.

In this country, outside the organized trades, the hours and all other details of employment are a matter for individual agreement, but in England the law describes practically every detail, leaving little except the question of wages to be settled between employer and employee. The hours of work are fixed by law, and so are the periods of "in and out" employment which may be required. By in and out employment is meant the sending out of shop employees, as in the case of those who go from florists' shops to put up decorations at the houses of customers. One section of the law has prohibited sending out an employee except during the regular hours of employment, which were themselves limited. This was so burdensome that the retailers took the matter to court. A report states:

"Much stress was laid on the fact that it was necessary, especially in the London season, to carry out decorations at customers' houses up to the hour of 10 p. m. It was stated by the principal florists that many London hostesses require that the flowers used in decorations shall be absolutely fresh and arranged as recently as possible before the entertainments commence. The employers contended that this work is not arduous and that it is enjoyed by the assistants.

"'I fear,' said the court in his decision, 'there is no reasonable chance of entertainments in London beginning at any earlier hour in the evening. The tendency seems to be to begin them later. The conclusion to which I am driven, I admit reluctantly, is that these decorations will be demanded in future as heretofore, and the master florists will be required by their customers to prepare and arrange them as late in the evening as heretofore. The skilled assistants who do this work are generally ladies of artistic taste, and with an experience usually acquired by an apprenticeship of training of some years' duration.'"

The Court then went on to recommend modifications of the law permitting "in and out" employment for two hours a day, but for 100 days in the year only. Where the outside employment occurs after the regular hours the permitted two hours should, in every case, be given back to the assistant on the morning of the day after the time has been taken, and a period of at least twelve hours should elapse between the ending of the work out of the workshop and the resumption of work either in or out of the workshop on the next day. All outside work, except during regular hours, should be paid for as overtime, and no deductions should be made for wages in respect of the hours returned to the assistant. The weekly half-holiday should be allowed at the option of the occupier of a florist's workshop either on Saturday or any other day. Power to grant the weekly half-holiday to assistants in florists' shops and workshops on different days should be included in any future legislation dealing with workshops.

SPIRAEA JAPONICA.

The roots of the herbaceous spiræas or astilbes generally arrive from November 10 to 30. After unpacking, soak the clumps well in water and heel them in closely, either outdoors or in a cold-frame. Wherever they are placed, it is best to let them have one or two good freezings before potting or starting them. The old variety, Japonica, is now largely superseded by the improved varieties, such as grandiflora compacta, Gladstone and astilboides, all of which are now inexpensive. Do not overlook the new pink varieties, Peach Blossom and Queen Alexandra. These do not force so well as the white flowered varieties, but for spring decorations are superb. Queen Alexandra comes in beautifully at Memorial day, the smallest clumps making surprisingly fine plants.

AZALEA MOLLIS.

While less grown than the Indian azaleas, there can be no gainsaying the fact that the mollis azaleas, even while almost leafless, as they are when in flower, are the more beautiful of the two sections. The beautiful yellow, orange, old gold, pink and other shades are charming, and as there is no difficulty in growing and blooming them, it is not surprising to see them largely used each winter in all the up-to-date stores.

The new stock is now to hand and extra well budded. In potting we endeavor to squeeze the balls into as small pots as possible, and place the plants in a frame where the pots are protected and the plants allowed to get several good freezings. Of course, it may be an exploded theory about frost being necessary for any plants prior to their being forced, but a long experience shows a decided benefit from these freezings. For late use, where the plants have had a tolerably long rest since the fall of the leaf, freezings are not required. The freezings are supposed to put the plants to sleep, and when lulled into that condition they respond quickly to heat and moisture. As a general rule, it does not pay to start forcing the mollis azaleas until after Christmas.

and don't do at it. If you are pretending to make an anchor, make a true one; if you start out to make a triangle, do not be too delicate about sharp points. The skilled assistants who do this work are generally ladies of artistic taste, and with an experience usually acquired by an apprenticeship of training of some years' duration.'"

The Court then went on to recommend modifications of the law permitting "in and out" employment for two hours a day, but for 100 days in the year only. Where the outside employment occurs after the regular hours the permitted two hours should, in every case, be given back to the assistant on the morning of the day after the time has been taken, and a period of at least twelve hours should elapse between the ending of the work out of the workshop and the resumption of work either in or out of the workshop on the next day. All outside work, except during regular hours, should be paid for as overtime, and no deductions should be made for wages in respect of the hours returned to the assistant. The weekly half-holiday should be allowed at the option of the occupier of a florist's workshop either on Saturday or any other day. Power to grant the weekly half-holiday to assistants in florists' shops and workshops on different days should be included in any future legislation dealing with workshops.

SPIRAEA JAPONICA.

The roots of the herbaceous spiræas or astilbes generally arrive from November 10 to 30. After unpacking, soak the clumps well in water and heel them in closely, either outdoors or in a cold frame. Wherever they are placed, it is best to let them have one or two good freezings before potting or starting them. The old variety, Japonica, is now largely superseded by the improved varieties, such as grandiflora compacta, Gladstone and astilboides, all of which are now inexpensive. Do not overlook the new pink varieties, Peach Blossom and Queen Alexandra. These do not force so well as the white flowered varieties, but for spring decorations are superb. Queen Alexandra comes in beautifully at Memorial day, the smallest clumps making surprisingly fine plants.

AZALEA MOLLIS.

While less grown than the Indian azaleas, there can be no gainsaying the fact that the mollis azaleas, even while almost leafless, as they are when in flower, are the more beautiful of the two sections. The beautiful yellow, orange, old gold, pink and other shades are charming, and as there is no difficulty in growing and blooming them, it is not surprising to see them largely used each winter in all the up-to-date stores.

The new stock is now to hand and extra well budded. In potting we endeavor to squeeze the balls into as small pots as possible, and place the plants in a frame where the pots are protected and the plants allowed to get several good freezings. Of course, it may be an exploded theory about frost being necessary for any plants prior to their being forced, but a long experience shows a decided benefit from these freezings. For late use, where the plants have had a tolerably long rest since the fall of the leaf, freezings are not required. The freezings are supposed to put the plants to sleep, and when lulled into that condition they respond quickly to heat and moisture. As a general rule, it does not pay to start forcing the mollis azaleas until after Christmas.

SPOT ON VIOLETS.

What is the cause of white spot on violet leaves, and the remedy?

J. W. S.

We are unable to tell you the cause of spot on violet foliage, nor can we give any reliable remedy. In the case of single violets, the spotting is rarely sufficiently serious to injure the plants, although we have seen instances where even these have been well-nigh denuded of leaves. Picking off badly affected foliage usually suffices for the singles. In the case of doubles, particularly Marie Louise, the best of the blues, whole benches and houses are ruined each year by spot. Damage is least when the plants are grown where they are to flower, and usually most serious with late planted stock. Cleanliness, picking off affected foliage, plenty of fresh air night and day, and all possible sunshine should be the treatment given. Do not coddle, but let the night temperature be as near 40 degrees as possible. C.

BARONNE ROTHSCHILD VIOLET.

Last season F. W. Fletcher Co., Auburndale, Mass., and C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., jointly introduced Violet Baronne Rothschild, shown in the accompanying illustration. This is a single variety which originated at the Fletcher establishment. Exhibited at the Boston flower shows prior to its distribution in the trade, it took the eye of all the growers, so that when it was sent out all the available stock was quickly taken up by those who wished to give the variety a trial this season. Mr. Fletcher describes it as much more floriferous than Princess of Wales, and the foliage is smaller than in that variety.

Thus far this season the plants sent out last spring have done nicely with most of those who bought stock of the novelty, and there are many who think they have here a formidable rival of Princess of Wales, which heretofore has practically monopolized the market for single violets.

SPOT ON DOUBLE VIOLETS.

Will you kindly inform me if there is anything I can do to exterminate spot disease on my double violets? I have picked off the leaves as fast as the spot shows, but still it comes on. Some of the plants that were badly affected I have taken out. F. M. B.

Having tried about every imaginable remedy for spot on double violets, I am forced to confess that nothing seems to check it once it has appeared in a virulent form. Picking off affected leaves helps in some degree, but I have had little success with spraying solutions, such as Bordeaux mixture, sulpho-napthol and permanganate of potash. Cleanliness, stirring of the surface soil, an abundance of pure air and a night temperature as near 40 degrees on cold nights as possible, are conditions which double violets like.

Double violets are best grown in the beds or benches in which they are to flower. This plan is adopted in the noted Rhinebeck section on the Hudson river. If planted outdoors, they should be lifted much earlier than the singles, which latter should be left out until they have had one or two freezings. C. W.

NAMES OF VIOLETS.

Kindly inform me as to the names of the violets enclosed; one is light blue and the other dark blue. H. C. G.

The flowers when received were much shriveled, but, as near as we can make out, the dark variety is Governor Herrick and the lighter one Princess of Wales. C.

ALKALI WATER FOR VIOLETS.

I should be pleased to know about the effects of hard alkali water. Would it be advisable to try to grow violets with the use of hard water? What effects would it have on violets in particular, and also on carnations, roses and all other flowers and vegetables. I am located in Colorado.

M. J. C.

Violet culture is a department of floriculture that few make any success of, and especially is this so in Colorado, under the influence of its mild and open winters. To attempt to grow them under the adverse conditions mentioned by M. J. C. is certainly a problematical undertaking. If he has any knowledge relating to the properties of soil, such as its fertility, consistency, firmness and porous nature, and if he establishes a well drained subsoil, he is as apt to be successful as many others who have had to use alkali water in their culture. I would not recommend the culture of roses or carnations when water has to be used that is strongly impregnated with alkali. J. B.

LENGTH OF SHADOW.

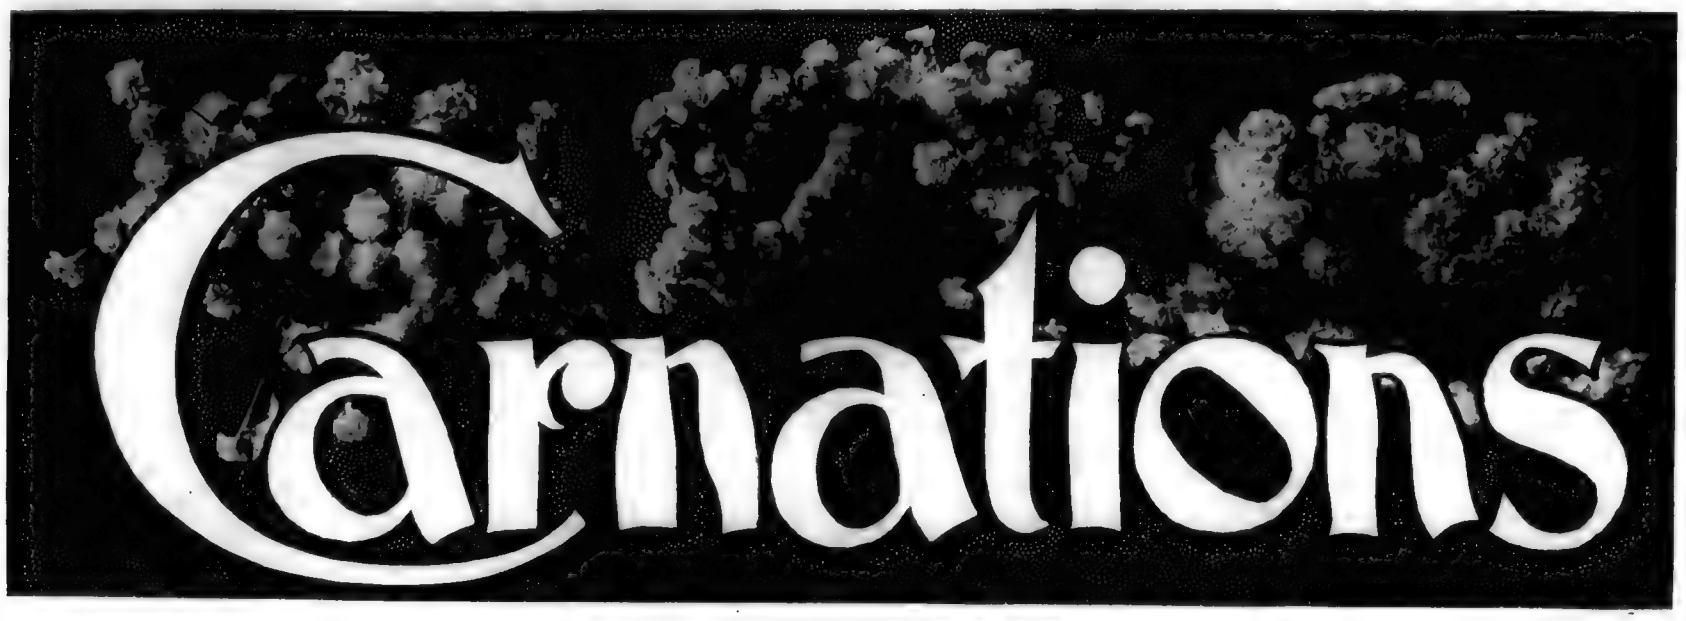
How far will a building twenty-five feet high throw its shadow to the north at noon, December 22? J. C. M.

The length of shadow thrown to the north at 12 o'clock noon, December 22, by a building twenty-five feet high in the latitude of New York would be approximately fifty-two feet long, in Chicago approximately fifty-four and one-half feet long and in Boston approximately fifty-six feet long. L. C. C.

CALLAS RESTED IN FRAMES.

Callas with us are particularly good this season and we think this is due largely to the way we dried the plants. We grow both chrysanthemums and callas in the same house and are therefore obliged to lift the callas by the middle of May, in order to get the early chrysanthemums benched in time. It is due to this that we are obliged to dry the callas outside instead of in the bench.

Last year the plants were dried a little in the bench and then lifted and laid in the sun, with no soil on the roots. The result was that a great quantity of the bulbs rotted, and we think this was directly due to the rapidity with which the plants dried.



This season we thought we would try a different plan. When the time came to lift them, we left a 5-inch square of soil on each plant, and transferred them from the house to a coldframe. The plants were placed quite close together, soil was thrown over the bulbs and they were then left to dry. About September 1 they were potted up, so as to keep them growing until the early chrysanthemums were gone. The plants have been in the bench nearly a month now, and are growing vigorously and flowering freely.

We are much pleased with our new plan, as we did not lose a single bulb.

A quantity of callas were planted in the field for the cut blooms, but this was not a success, as the plants did not receive enough water. This plan has its advantages, however, to any person who would like to increase his stock, for we found that for every plant put out, at least eight were potted up when they were lifted this fall.

W. J. Vesey, Jr.

Anadarko, Okla.—One of the many things which the Bath Addition has a right to be proud of is Mr. Ernest's new greenhouse, which is already stocked with carnations and other plants.

BEST SORTS FOR BEGINNER.

We have completed a new greenhouse and wish to plant it to carnations. Would you please tell us what varieties are the best? We are located in southwestern Idaho. P. O. M.

Which varieties of carnations will suit you best will depend somewhat on your climate and your trade. I will name several varieties in each color, any one of which may suit you better than all the rest. I would advise you to try them all, and then select those varieties which do best for you.

White—White Perfection, White Enchantress, Lady Bountiful, Mrs. J. C. Vaughan. Flesh Pink—Enchantress, May, Pink Delight, Mayday. Light pink—Rose-pink Enchantress, Winona, Winsor. Dark pink—Victoria, Afterglow, Aristocrat. Scarlet—Victory, Beacon, O. P. Bassett. Crimson—Crimson Glow, Harlowarden, Harry Fenn.

You will also do well to include a few each of some of the novelties being introduced this season, as it will not only pay you to buy the best varieties now, but it will pay you well to keep your list of varieties up-to-date. We see this demonstrated every few days. Visiting growers will, in going through the houses, make remarks about this variety or that, which they failed to buy when they were introduced, thus making a mistake which they greatly regretted, since they had missed some good things. We consider that a reasonable amount of money spent each season on new varieties is money well invested. A. F. J. B.

FAIRY RING AND STIGMONOSE.

I have been in business for some years and never had any serious trouble with my carnations until last year. The disease at that time was pronounced the fairy ring. I followed the instructions given in the REVIEW and got rid of the trouble in the spring, but the flowers never amounted to much. To avoid the recurrence of the trouble, I fumigated the carnation house twice with flowers of sulphur, whitewashed all the woodwork, used fresh top soil and procured new plants, and yet a few weeks ago the same trouble appeared, only more aggravated. At once I took heroic measures, cut all the plants back, removed the stakes to give more light, used Grape Dust twice a week and sprinkled the pipes with flowers of sulphur. A few days ago I gave weak liquid cow manure to stimulate new growth.

As I never had such serious trouble before, I am puzzled to know what causes this disease.

I forward a few specimen plants. Although they are still covered with Grape Dust, yet they show a lack of vitality and the leaves appear spotted when held in the sunlight. As I cut all the plants back, I am not able just now to send buds, where the fairy ring manifests its deadly power the most. P. C. M.

Your plants may be affected with fairy ring, as you suggest, but the shoots forwarded do not indicate any such condition. They are, however, full of stigmonose, which in some respects is even worse. The two together would prove most destructive to any house of carnations, and you will have a hard, long fight to get rid of them both.

For the fairy ring I would suggest Bordeaux mixture, sprayed on about once each week. Also go over the plants and pick off all affected leaves. Water moderately, though not too scantily, and eliminate syringing altogether for a time. Ventilate freely and paint a steam pipe with sulphur and lime, made into a thick paint with water. This ought to eradicate the fairy ring.

For the stigmonose you will have to practice careful selection of cuttings. Select those which are free from those light spots, and in the course of a few years you may have your stock clean and healthy. This trouble is brought on through the punctures of insects, such as aphis, etc. Your present blooming plants can not be cured, but you can help them somewhat by careful culture. Avoid excessive watering and any feeding which may have a tendency to soften the growth. Instead, you must water carefully and keep the temperature uniform and moderate. Give the soil a light dressing of air-slaked lime about once in each month, to toughen the growth. Ventilate day and night if possible, to keep the atmosphere fresh and bracing. You cannot reach this disease with remedies applied externally, so you must confine your efforts to aiding the plant to grow strong and to throw off the disease itself. A. F. J. B.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

W. H. Shumway, Berlin, Conn., registers the following new carnations:

Elizabeth—Parentage, uncertain; color, brilliant red; size, three to three and one-half inches; a good grower, of excellent habit; not overmuch grass; every shoot flowers; does not discolor after cutting; is a wonderful keeper.

Almira—Parentage, Enchantress x Wm. Scott; color, bright pink, like Wm. Scott; size, three to three and one-quarter inches; upright and erect in growth, with good constitution; free bloomer and has a good calyx; easy to propagate. A. F. J. BAUR, Sec'y.

NAME OF CARNATION.

What is the name of the enclosed carnation flower? It resembles Winsor, only the color is darker. A. O.

The carnation bloom forwarded is Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. A. F. J. B.

TAKING THE CHILL FROM WATER

The water we use for watering our greenhouse plants is piped along the surface of the ground from artesian wells 100 yards distant, and when it reaches the houses it is like ice water. Is this injurious to plants in general? If so, can you suggest a method to overcome the difficulty? F. E. W.

Ordinarily the use of water at its normal temperature will not have an injurious effect upon most plants, if it is properly applied, but when below 35 degrees it will pay to take the chill off, for any plants that require a stove temperature. This can be done by storing it in a tank. Or, if the water has a "head" which it is desirable to retain, it can be carried in a coil through a tank filled with water which is warmed artificially.

PENNISETUM.

We would be glad to have you inform us at what time pennisetum seed should be planted. Could it be planted now and carried through the winter in coldframes? What kind of care should it receive? M. G. C.

You will do better by sowing in heat in January than starting the seeds now. P. longistylum, the most popular variety, is not a hardy grass north, although in the southern states it will winter. By starting in January you will get good plants for late spring sales. Another year it will pay you to carry over a number of old plants in a coldframe, or any place where they will not freeze much. Cut the foliage off in February or March and divide the clumps. Start in flats of leaf-mold and sand in a brisk, moist heat and pot off singly as they start to grow. These plants will give better returns than the seedlings. They can go in a coldframe by the early part of April. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Gardenias.

Gardenia flowers in winter bring excellent prices and there is a growing demand for them in the big markets. Often those who are planning on a fine winter crop and have had their hopes raised by a splendid crop of buds are woefully disappointed when the buds begin to fall in showers just before they are ready to open. The best cultivators have trouble of this kind. It is due to an excess of moisture in the benches, rather than dry conditions. Our experience has been that if the soil approaches saturation or sogginess, a heavy loss of buds is sure to follow. A great mistake is usually made in not having sufficient porosity in the soil; anything approaching pastiness is fatal to successful gardenia culture.

A night temperature of 70 degrees should be maintained. When admitting air, avoid anything in the nature of draughts. Let the benches dry out well before watering; then soak them thoroughly. If the soil is porous, it will pass through quickly. If a hot water or steam pipe runs below the benches to warm the soil a little, all the better. To keep the foliage dark green, use soot water once a fortnight. Mealy bug can be kept in check by using a fine spray nozzle on the hose and syringing well twice a week, always choosing sunny days for the operation, to allow of the foliage drying before nightfall. The temperature in the daytime can run up to 80 or 85 degrees with sun heat, and the ventilators should be closed sufficiently early to bottle up a good heat.

Azaleas.

Let the Christmas azaleas have a brisk heat and spray them daily, unless the weather is dark and cold. Many of the plants will show a tendency to grow. Rub out any of these shoots. As the flowers commence to expand, discontinue damping them overhead, and a slightly lower temperature will suit them better. Deutsche Perle needs little forcing for Christmas, and Hexe comes in readily. Other varieties will, however, require a good heat to get them in season.

Lily of the Valley.

The new season's pips are now arriving. After unpacking, soak them well in a tub of water. Do not merely dip them, but let them remain in some time. Any showing the least signs of shriveling, a condition possible where cases have been standing too near the boilers of the steamers, had better be soaked for twenty-four hours to plump them up. Heel outdoors, or in a coldframe, just covering the tips. Let them have one or two good freezings before trying to force them.

The new valley is not, as a rule, a success for Christmas or early forcing. Cold storage pips are better. A brisk, moist bottom heat is essential, with a top heat of 70 to 75 degrees; the bottom heat can be 10 degrees higher than this. In planting the pips any soil will answer; in fact, sand of a rather coarse nature is to be preferred. The pips make no roots while being forced, having sufficient energy stored up to flower satisfactorily. They must be kept dark until the spikes are well drawn up, after which time light can be gradually admitted to allow of some foliage being made. As the flowers open, a rather lower temperature will give them substance.

Antirrhinums.

The bulk of the chrysanthemums are gone at last, and somehow it is a relief to see the stragglers cut and out of the way. It is now possible to give a little more time to antirrhinums, and other crops which are to follow the mums. The earliest lot of snapdragons are now coming into flower. These were benched early in September, and have had a temperature of 46 to 50 degrees at night. They require looking over at least once a week. The flower stalks should be supported and the side shoots rubbed off. If strong flower stems are desired, it will not pay to leave every shoot on the plants. Reduce them to from four to six and allow no more to grow. Restricted in this way, fancy spikes can be had. Where a medium spike is preferred, of course, a larger number can be left; as a rule, the smaller spikes bring but little money.

In fumigating antirrhinums, use anything but hydrocyanic acid gas. They are among the few plants which simply will not stand even a light dose of this fumigant. The leaves are not scorched, but the tops of the shoots hang down limp. These plants are somewhat delicate, and any fumigation must be light. Where they are becoming well established in the benches, a light mulch of well decayed manure will help them wonderfully.

Dutch Butbous Stock.

Look over the bulb stock and give all the flats and pots a thorough watering. Never mind if the soil seems moist on top. It is probably much drier below, and remember that more Dutch bulb failures are due to too dry root conditions than any other cause. If your flats are well drained, the water will pass away readily.

A few of the most forward La Reine tulips, if they are well started, may now go into a darkened case. It is folly to place them in the light, unless you want flowers which just rise above the soil. Trumpet Major narcissi, particularly the French stock, can be had for Christmas. Do not give either these or the tulips bottom heat, like the valley, as they do not like it and will resent it, but draw each of them well up in the dark to give some length to the flower stems. It is too early to start forcing Golden Spur or other narcissi. Leave them where they are until better sprouted. Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths for Christmas should be given three weeks in a night temperature of 60 degrees. The former will come in a little more quickly than the latter, but it is an easy matter to hold them in a cold house for a week or ten days.

Hardy Lilies.

The bulbs of Lilium speciosum, auratum, tigrinum, Batmanniæ and other useful florists' lilies do not arrive until December. Any wanted for pot culture should be got into the soil right away. For outdoor planting be sure to give the bulbs ample depth; eight to nine inches is none too much, and, if you have deep soil, twelve inches will be found better. Let no fresh manure come in contact with them. Place some sharp sand below and above them. Mulch with leaves or strawy manure for the winter.

Always keep lilies of any kind as short a time as possible out of the soil. Once the scales start to shrivel, much of the bulbs' vitality is gone. Probably the most useful of all hardy lilies to the average florist is L. speciosum album; the varieties Melpomene and rubrum are also useful. L. auratum's strong odor is objected to by many for funeral or other work.

Camellias.

There is a pleasing coming again of the once popular camellias, and during the last two or three winters a good number have been sold. It is necessary to use judgment in trying to get these open for Christmas. Anything like hard forcing will assuredly result in a loss of buds. The one time when camellias love heat and moisture is while making their growth. At present a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees at night should not be exceeded.

Genistas.

While it is possible to force genistas into flower for Christmas, they sell much better for Easter. Like camellias, they resent hard forcing, and to have them in the best condition cool culture all the time is best. A batch may be started now in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night and these will come in useful in midwinter. Easter stock should have had its last shearing by this time, and should be held just clear of freezing.

Geraniums

SOME NEW GERANIUMS.

Among geraniums introduced into this country, this season, I would give the first place to Mrs. Annie Vincent. This variety produces immense trusses of bright, pure carmine, shading to white in the upper petals, extremely charming to the eye. The florets are semi-double, two and one-quarter inches in diameter, and are held aloft on rigid stems. Its flowers are enduring. Its constitution is robust and it is easy to propagate.

Luigi Grandi makes a symmetrical plant, of strong growth, and is profuse in blooms. Its enormous trusses are composed of large florets of rare and rich color, being violet carmine shading to red on the upper petals. Its color puts it in a place by itself.

Dr. Danjou is brilliant in color, having deep violet flowers, the upper petals marked white. It has a good habit and makes a magnificent truss.

Eliacin is compact in growth and somewhat dwarf. It appears to have a strong constitution. Its flowers are semi-double. The trusses are large. The color is a bright rose shading to a white center.

Ernest Vernet is a plant of short, stocky growth. The florets and trusses are large. The color is a light red, spotted lilac and veined scarlet, unusually beautiful.

Jean Lamarque makes a desirable addition to our dark red sorts, being darker than S. A. Nutt. It is compact in growth and abundant in bloom.

Geranium Mrs. Annie Vincent.

Atlantis has a robust constitution and bears immense clusters of brilliant red flowers.

The flowers of Virginia have the color of Carnation Enchantress, but with a white center, and are truly enchanting. The plant is easy to propagate and easy to grow. Its foliage and form are good and it is free in bloom.

Red Wing is a variety of our own raising that we have found reliable as a commercial geranium. It is strong and healthy in growth, easy to propagate and an early and continuous bloomer. Its clusters of flowers are large, much above the average, and each floret is large, quite double and yet wide open. Its color is a deep cardinal, bright, almost dazzling. It is not as dark as S. A. Nutt, but it holds its color better. Its clusters do not get black under the sun. Both in the field and in the greenhouse it holds its color and its petals with great tenacity. It makes a better pot plant than S. A. Nutt and we think it will divide the honors with it as a bedder. The last, but not the least, of its good qualities, is that it sells itself.

I would also like to mention two single geraniums of special merit, of recent introduction; i. e., Mme. A. Lacadre and Pamela. The latter is as beautiful as an orchid. F. H. DE WITT.

NAME OF GERANIUM.

Please name the enclosed geranium sample. W. & S.

It is Jacquerie, as near as I can tell from the flowers as received. C.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

In Edinburgh a movement has been on foot to suitably recognize the jubilee of James Grieve, Redbraes Nursery, who completed fifty years' connection with the Edinburgh nursery trade in November. He entered the employment of Dicksons & Co. in 1859 and rose through various stages to the position of general manager, resigning several years ago to commence business with his sons, under the title of James Grieve & Sons. Probably he is more widely known than any other nurseryman in Scotland, and he is recognized as the foremost authority on pansies and violas. He has many friends in the United States, some of whom he assisted and counseled in their young and struggling days.

William King, for the last five years manager and secretary for the old established firm of James Backhouse & Son, Ltd., York, and one of the most promising young men in the trade, has resigned to take up a more lucrative position in connection with the development of the Duff estate, in Scotland, where landscape gardening on an extensive scale will give scope for his able management.

Protheroe & Morris, horticultural auctioneers, London, realized a number of high prices for orchids under the hammer a few days ago. Cypripedium Charlesworthii Bromilowianum went for 140 guineas, as did also a plant of Cypripedium Bromilowæ. Several others were sold at prices varying from 40 guineas to 50 guineas each.

Mansell & Hatcher, Ltd., Rawdon, Yorkshire, whose orchid collectors penetrate into the interior of Burmah, are causing quite a surprise in the horticultural world with the fine bulbs of Lilium sulphureum which their collectors have sent over during the last two years, and another consignment of 5,000 bulbs is on its way. The variety has long been known in England, but has always been scarce, and until this firm's collectors took it in hand bulbs were never seen in such quantities or of such fine quality. The handsome flowers are borne several on a stem, often measuring ten inches in length. They are of a bright sulphur yellow, toning to cream toward the edges, and emit a delicious perfume. Of remarkable substance, they last a long time in perfection. They are popularly known as the lilies of Burmah, and are as easily grown as the Japanese or Bermuda lilies.

Growers of liliums, lily of the valley, eucharis and other choice white flowers for Covent Garden are experiencing a brighter time than usual, as good prices are being made all round, and fortunate are the growers who have supplies to send in.

Geranium Pamela.

Apropos of eucharis blooms, a story reached me lately of a grower who sent consignments to a Covent Garden commission salesman when the ruling prices barely covered freight and commission. Result: He did not send again. On the market rising, the commission man cabled to the grower to send more eucharis, and received a reply to this effect: "The shock received by my plants on learning the low prices returned for the last consignment caused them to cease flowering; they have not recovered from it yet, and I have no flowers to send." MORTON, ILL.—Work on Rudolph Oswald's greenhouse is progressing, the boiler-room and potting house now being completed.

BERLIN, N. H.—Mrs. H. E. Smith & Co. have enlarged and remodeled their greenhouses. Business is increasing and the additional space was much needed.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

IVORY, THE MONEY-MAKER.

After all is said and done, the annual increase in the size of the chrysanthemum novelties does nothing to impair the usefulness of Ivory. If there is any other variety of chrysanthemum which has made more money for the growers than Ivory has made, it is Bonnaffon, but among whites Ivory does so well for all the growers, and sells so well in all the stores, that it is entitled to the place it holds among commercial growers. The accompanying illustration of a house of Ivory is reproduced from a photograph taken in the Rosemere Conservatories, Dorchester, Mass. David Ring was the grower.

SCOTTISH MUM SHOW.

The annual chrysanthemum show under the auspices of the Scottish Horticultural Association was held in Edinburgh, November 18 to 20. With the thermometer registering 18 degrees, curlers and skaters were enjoying themselves on the ice to their heart's content, but the arctic weather conditions had a chilling effect upon exhibitors and exhibits. The show was held, as usual, in the spacious Waverley market, a most convenient site and an ideal show-ground, when the city is not in the grip of winter. There is no provision for artificial heating and the frosty air and icy chill penetrated every corner, and while there might be differences of opinion as to the merits of the exhibits, all were agreed that it was the coldest show they had ever attended. Naturally some of the plants and flowers suffered, but apart from this, it was a great and grand show. The contest for supremacy was as keen as the frost, over 3,000 blooms being entered in the competitive classes. The features of the show were the excellence of the Japanese blooms in the leading classes, the fine decorative vases of singles and the extensive display of bouquets, baskets and other floral work.

The City of Edinburgh cup and £20 for the best fifteen vases of Japanese varieties was won by Alexander Morton, gardener, Cullen House, Cullen, who obtained 139½ points. His varieties were Lady Talbot (10), Lady Conyers (9), Reginald Vallis (9½), Bessie Godfrey (8½), Mrs. A. T. Miller (11), W. G. Mileham (7), Algernon Davis (10), Mme. G. Rivol (8½), Mme. P. Radaelli (10½), Miss Hickling (9½), W. Beadle (10), Victoria and Albert (8), Elsie Fulton (8), Edith Judson (10½), J. H. Silsbury (9½); total, 139½ points. The points are awarded for the following: Form, 3; depth, 3; color, 3; finish, 3.

David Nicoll, Rossie, Forgandenny, was second with 137½ points, and in his collection was found the best bloom in the show, Mrs. A. T. Miller, to which a gold medal was awarded. James Beisant, Castle Huntley, was third.

The Scottish challenge cup for eight vases of Japanese was won by John Finnie, Summerhill, Shandon, with F. S. Vallis (9), Mrs. F. W. Vallis (9½), Lady Talbot (9), Marquise V. Venusta (9½), Bessie Godfrey (9½), Reginald Vallis (9½), Mrs. A. T. Miller (9), J. H. Silsbury (8); total, 73 points; second, L. McLean, Alloa; third, W. Young, Falkland Palace.

Wells & Co., Merstham, were awarded a gold medal for the best novelty in the show, namely, Bessie G. Payne, golden chestnut, with long tubular florets and pure gold reverse, a lovely combination of colors and a flower of fine depth and substance.

Todd & Co., Edinburgh, were at the front with singles, now so popular for cut flower decorations, and the same firm secured leading honors for decorative floral work, with choice arrangements in bouquets, baskets of flowers, etc.

James Glass & Co., Edinburgh, exhibited a large model of the ocean liner Mauretania, worked carefully in colored immortelles, and this was a source of attraction for many of the visitors.

Work of Committees.

At Philadelphia, November 13, Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., exhibited No. 299-2-08, light pink, Japanese. It scored as follows: On the commercial scale—Color, 15; form, 12; fullness, 8; stem, 13; foliage, 11; substance, 13; size, 8; total, 80. On the exhibition scale—Color, 8; stem, 4; foliage, 3; fullness, 13; form, 12; depth, 13; size, 30; total, 83.

At Chicago, November 20, James Livingstone, Lake Geneva, Wis., exhibited No. 109, lemon yellow, anemone. On the commercial scale it scored as follows: Color, 30; form, 15; fullness, 15; stem and foliage, 18; total, 78.

At Cincinnati, November 20, Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., exhibited No. 299-2-08, shell pink, Japanese reflexed. On the exhibition scale it scored as follows: Color, 8; stem, 3; foliage, 3; fullness, 14; form, 12; depth, 14; size, 34; total, 88.

THE SEVERAL SECTIONS.

[A paper by W. H. Waite, gardener to Samuel Untermyer, read before the Horticultural Society of New York.]

There is no need for me to praise the chrysanthemum, for during its six weeks of reign it is supreme. Of all the flowers which we, as florists and gardeners, have to cultivate, there is none showing so many variations in size of bloom, color, habit of growth, etc., as the chrysanthemum. These variations no doubt, together with the fact that its beautiful flowers appear during the waning months of the year, are the secrets of the great popularity of this flower.

There are so many different kinds of chrysanthemums that, in order to study them properly, a division of the genus into sections is necessary. I shall briefly describe these sections, showing examples of each in so far as I have been able to procure them.

KLONDIKE AND DIANA.

It is impossible to show in black and white the attractiveness of a dark brown twig basket filled with Klondike chrysanthemums and well-colored oak foliage.

Klondike is one of the best of the pompon varieties and it has this season enjoyed a much wider use than heretofore. In the hands of a skilled decorator some extremely attractive things can be made with it, and for use on dinner-tables there is nothing in its color that is more useful. Diana, white, is the only variety of the pompons which can claim a greater popularity.

WHITE GRUBWORMS.

Please tell me if you have any remedy for the white grubworm. I have solid beds planted to mums and lettuce at present and they are just full of the pests. I have tried lime, tobacco water, Paris green and bran mixed and have killed a good many, but am not rid of them. I think there is some kind of chemical that I could put in the ground to kill them. If so, please let me know what it is and how I should use it.

When my mums come out I would like to steam the soil well and be sure to get rid of them. Please tell me the best way of doing this, as I have a little steam boiler that I could use. The beds are nine feet wide and 100 feet long and about eight or ten inches deep. E. W.

To clean out the grubworms spoken of, which are undoubtedly the larvæ of the June bug or May beetle and usually hatched in cow manure in the pastures, purchase some carbon bisulphide. It costs about 25 cents per pound-can at retail. Take a pointed stick and bore holes five to six inches deep in your beds, about eighteen inches apart each way. In each hole pour a few drops of the carbon, immediately covering up the hole. Go over the whole bed in this way and you will kill every grub. Do it when the soil is damp, as the fumes of the carbon are then more penetrating. This liquid is explosive, so do not use any naked lights while using it. No injury will result to the plants from its use.

If you are much troubled with these worms, it will certainly pay you to sterilize your soil each season. The largest lettuce growers in the country find that it pays to do this. All weed seeds and larvæ of every kind are destroyed. If you have a small steam boiler and can run a flow and return pipe along each bed, you can easily do the sterilizing yourself. The pipes used should be perforated so as to allow the escape of steam every foot or so. The compost can be mounded up over the pipes so as to allow the heat to be retained longer. Some growers seem to think sterilizing injures the soil, but the majority are of the contrary opinion. C. W.

GOLDEN PRIVET.

The golden privet, Ligustrum ovalifolium aureum, has become popular in England, where there is quite a large demand for it in all sizes, from those in thumb pots to large specimens. The Horticultural Advertiser says it does remarkably well in the suburbs of London. Plants one year established remain evergreen, but those transplanted from the ground lose their leaves the first season. Some growers take them up from the ground and pot them, but these do not prove satisfactory; if potted and plunged in the ground one season, they give little trouble, and even if a few roots come over the tops or through the bottoms of the pots, they may be trimmed off without doing much harm, provided the plants are kept moist both at root and top for a few days.

SOMERSWORTH, N. H.—Business is good at G. S. Ramsburg's. He has been receiving many orders of late from Portland florists.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—It is reported that J. F. Wilcox is planning the addition of about 150,000 feet of glass to his establishment next spring.

HUTCHINSON, KAN.—Geo. M. Schurr reports that Thanksgiving trade was good, with mums pretty well sold out and carnations in good demand, greater than the supply. He says prospects for the Christmas trade are excellent.

Ferns

TROUBLE WITH BOSTONS.

I am sending you herewith some specimens of Boston ferns that are in bad shape. Will you please tell us what is the trouble with these plants and what we must do to bring them into shape?

C. S.

The specimen in question has been received and examined, but owing to the fact that no particulars as to conditions under which the plants are grown, or the treatment, have been given, it is somewhat difficult to diagnose the trouble. The roots of the plant appeared to be in a normal condition, but the fronds were few in number and badly tipped with dead or nearly dead leaflets. The most reasonable supposition is that the fronds have been locally injured by some treatment they have received, either strong fumigation, or dipping in some insecticide.

There is one more possibility as to the injury indicated, namely, a touch of frost would leave a similar mark on the tender tips of the fronds, though one would not expect Boston ferns to be exposed to that, unless the grower is of a careless type. W. H. T.

NEPHROLEPIS MARSHALLI.

At a meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society, London, England, November 9, H. B. May & Sons, of Edmonton, exhibited a new plumose fern that received a first-class certificate and of which the Gardeners' Magazine has the following to say:

"Notwithstanding the fact that many beautiful varieties of Nephrolepis exaltata are now in commerce, it must be conceded that the newcomer, N. Marshalli, is the most beautiful of them all. Whether it becomes as popular for market as some of its predecessors remains to be seen; but it is certain of wide popularity in private gardens. N. Marshalli is a sport from N. exaltata Amerpohlii, and its wide fronds are finely divided and plumed, so that each frond looks like a graceful piece of the most exquisite moss."

The illustration indicates extremely heavy fronds, finely divided.

ASTER INNOCENCE.

In the accompanying illustration are shown a few rows of the new Innocence aster, white, raised by J. W. Jung at Randolph, Wis., who says that during repeated trials it has proved itself to be the earliest aster in cultivation. Instead of running to leaves, the entire energy of the plant seems given to producing from six to eight well developed flowers. They are of the Comet type and the long recurved petals give the flowers an exceedingly graceful effect.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

The Annual Report.

The report of the Society of American Florists for 1909 probably will be out next week, and includes quite a few new features.

The report, as usual, contains the proceedings of the convention in full; all of the discussions, the committee reports and the papers read; all of the reports of the state vice-presidents in full; the sports, the meeting of the American Rose Society, of the Florists' Hail Association and its report; a full list of medals and awards, including those at the National Flower Show; a full list of plants registered, and the usual data heretofore published.

Among the new features of this year's volume is a list of the original organizers and a complete list of the membership at the time of the first convention.

Another new feature is a report by the secretary of what the experiment stations are doing for floriculture, containing a general summary and detailed statements regarding the stations in each state.

The revised rules for the trade exhibition also appear.

The usual list of life and annual members is given, and also a list of pioneer members; that is, those having been members for twenty-five years, as provided at the last convention, and who are, under resolution of the society, especially exempted from further payment of dues.

A new feature is in adding to the membership list after each name the year in which the membership began.

There is also, as usual, a complete list of members by states, and this report is coming more and more into use as a directory and reference book for those desiring to ascertain the addresses of men in the trade.

Another new feature is a tabulation of the increases and decreases in membership by states and also a table of the membership each year. The report shows an increase of over ten per cent in membership during the last year.

There is also a comparison of finances between the year 1907 and the year 1908, as the treasurer's report necessarily each year contains items properly chargeable to the previous and to the following year, and thus does not give an accurate showing in a comparative way.

For the first time in the history of the society the financial reports appear with a certificate of audit by a firm of public accountants, covering not only the mere examination of the reports, but a careful audit of the secretary's books. The balance in the general fund is shown to have increased about $600 in the last two years and the balance in the permanent fund about $1,900 in the same time.

There is also a full report in detail of the National Flower Show, both as to the general features and exhaustively as to the finances.

The interesting discussion which took place as to whether the secretary and the treasurer should be made appointive officers and the directors should become elective is given in full. There is also an interesting description of the new process of color photography.

Another new feature is the detailed report of the Council of Horticulture, setting forth the work accomplished by that association, to which the S. A. F. has contributed funds.

The report is mailed to all members and is not sold except at the full price of membership. The secretary to January 1 is W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill. With the new year he will be succeeded by H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.

KINDLER OF ST. CLOUD.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph taken in one of the greenhouses of the Kindler Floral Co., St. Cloud, Minn. This concern started in business in 1901, taking orders for cut flowers, Frank Kindler manager. Business soon increased so that a start at growing was made, with a greenhouse 22x75. Each year more glass was added until a general line of cut flowers and potted plants could be produced. As is always the case where the growing is done for local retail trade, a great variety of stock must be produced and the grower must have a broad general knowledge of plant needs to make his many classes of stock thrive where no special conditions can be provided for them. The Kindlers keep their place in apple-pie order at all times, believing that there is no better advertising than to have the public visit such an establishment and find, not only good stock, but dry paths and no dirt. Mr. Kindler, who appears in the picture, is a believer in the teachings of William Scott, who once said that "soil is what we have in the benches, dirt what some growers have beneath them."

OBITUARY.

H. F. A. Lange.

Hermann F. A. Lange, the leading florist of Worcester, Mass., died November 24 of nephritis, after an illness of considerable duration.

Mr. Lange was born in Hamburg, Germany, in 1847. He was the son of a florist and before coming to this country had achieved a reputation in the German city, having received a medal from the government because of his services to horticulture. Removing to this country shortly after the Civil war, Mr. Lange located at Worcester and for more than a quarter of a century has been engaged in the greenhouse business there, building up the largest range of glass in his section and achieving a national reputation. He was one of the staunch supporters of the Worcester Horticultural Society and the principal exhibitor at all its flower shows.

Carl Jurgens.

Carl H. Jurgens, well known throughout America as a bulb importer and grower of lilies of the valley, died suddenly in his home, in Newport, R. I., Friday, November 26, of heart failure. He had not been out of his house since the Saturday previous, suffering from a severe cold, but had been able to be about the house, remaining indoors as a precautionary measure. He was suddenly affected that morning and died within a short time.

Carl H. Jurgens was born in Holstein, Germany, February 26, 1844, and was the son of Wulf and Catherine (Horn) Jurgens, his father having also been a native of that province. Mr. Jurgens received his education in the public schools of Holstein and at the age of 16 years began to learn the florists' business at Hamburg. After an apprenticeship of five years in that city he went to Paris and served in the Imperial Gardens of the Tuilleries. From Paris Mr. Jurgens removed to London, where for two and one-half years he was employed in the largest florist's establishment of that metropolis. While in England he was called home for military service, being placed in the Reserves.

After serving the time demanded by his country, he decided to try his fortunes in the United States and arrived in New York in October, 1869. For two years he was engaged with a florist in Astoria, Long Island, and in 1872 removed to Newport and established the business which he has conducted for thirty-seven years. He made a specialty of importing and growing lilies of the valley for the wholesale market. In this he was eminently successful, establishing the leading business of its kind in this country, which made it necessary for him to make a trip to Europe every summer to secure the best pips obtainable for the American market. The business increased steadily and reached such proportions that Mr. Jurgens' annual sales have reached several millions of valley and more than a million other bulbs. He is credited with originating the process of freezing the pips of valley, and keeping them in cold storage to bring into the greenhouses as required, and this he early applied to giganteum and other bulbs. He shipped his stock to Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other markets.

He began in a small way in his garden on Mill street, Providence, and as the business increased he purchased land on the western shore of Easton's pond, north of the waterworks, and there built a larger range of greenhouses, gradually acquiring large tracts of land and erecting additional houses, until the establishment became one of the largest in the country devoted to special flower growing. In addition to lilies of the valley he devoted several houses to the growing of the higher grades of roses, notably American Beauty, and supplied not only local florists but distant markets as well. At certain seasons of the year the Jurgens Beauties were always counted on as sure to be of higher quality than the local supply of other markets. His greenhouses cover from three to four acres and his market for lilies of the valley and roses extends as far south as Palm Beach. He had as many as fifty men at all times in his employ, his bulb-forcing establishment being the second largest in the world.

Carl Jurgens.

Mr. Jurgens married, April 10, 1877, Miss Louise Kuhn, daughter of William F. Kuhn, of Newport, who survives him, together with three children, Katherine, who married F. C. Scheerer, of New York; Louise, who married Charles H. Parker, of Providence, and Carl Jurgens, Jr., who resides at Newport and has been engaged as his father's assistant in the management of the large business.

Mr. Jurgens was a self-made man and achieved his success through his energy, pluck and perseverance, coupled with a shrewd, careful business instinct. This was shown not only in the oversight of his financial affairs, but in the kindly consideration for his employees, which amounted to a personal friendship. Many of his employees had been in his service for a long period of years. His home life was of the happiest character, his affection for his wife and children, and for the latter's children, being unbounded. He took little active interest in public affairs, although he was always on the side of good government and civic betterment and ready to support any movement for the improvement of the city and the advancement of its best interests.

W. H. M.

Miss Anna Cronin.

Miss Anna Cronin, who had been in the flower business at Covington, Ky., for a number of years, died November 22 from ptomaine poisoning, said to have been the result of eating oysters. Her establishment on Madison avenue, between Fourth and Fifth streets, was one of the well known places of Covington, but the home of her childhood was in Cynthiana, Ky., where the remains were taken for burial November 24.

George H. Brown.

George Hay Brown, landscape gardener of public buildings and grounds in Washington, D. C., died at his home in that city last week. Death was due primarily to a cold contracted November 20. Mr. Brown was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1838, and his father was a landscape gardener. The public grounds of the national capital, including those of the White House and the Capitol, were laid out under his direction, and he had charge of the floral decorations at the White House for many of the big social and state affairs of the last few years. He was well known to the trade in Washington.

CROOKSTON, MINN.—Mr. Widman, of the Carnation Store, has removed from the Palace Hotel block to the old Post-office building. His new store has been handsomely redecorated and is one of the finest establishments in the city.

THE GLASS MARKET.

The market for window glass already is responding to the prospect of an early combination of the independent makers of hand blown glass and the prospect is for an almost certain early advance in quotations. The organization of the Imperial Glass Co. is a matter of a large amount of detail, but it is progressing satisfactorily and it appears that early in 1910 the makers of window glass will be in a position to control the output. Practically all the factories using hand labor in blowing glass will be in this new combination, and all the machine glass is in the hands of the American Window Glass Co., which will work in harmony with the new combine. The result will be a possible curtailment of production and a certain withholding of the product from the market except at profitable prices.

Any grower knows that when he has bought 16x18 glass at $2 per box or little more, no manufacturer has been getting rich off such sales. At $2 per box it makes the glass only 4 cents per square foot, delivered many hundreds of miles from the place of manufacture. The fact has been that a good many factories were not in a position to make their own prices, but have been compelled to sell for whatever they could get during the last year or two. As a part of this new combine these factories will be supplied with the means of storing their product against a profitable demand.

Prices have not yet advanced to any special degree, 16x18 having sold recently at low figures for cash in carload lots, but there is already a stiffening tendency and as soon as the combine actually begins to operate prices are pretty sure to go back up the scale to a point where the makers can get some profit. Well informed jobbers in glass say that any greenhouse man who will need quantities in the spring of 1910 will be doing well to buy now, and it is known that some of the large growers who have the capital have bought merely for stock, as a sort of insurance.

THANKSGIVING BUSINESS.

The Thanksgiving business proved to be exceptionally good throughout almost the entire country. The only section from which there is complaint is that part along the Atlantic seaboard, where there was rain of the cold, drizzling, disagreeable character, which keeps people indoors. In practically all other parts of the country the weather was pleasant and the sale of cut flowers greater than ever before at Thanksgiving.

The supply of stock was large, because of the pleasant weather which had prevailed, and the quality of the stock generally excellent. Chrysanthemums were in largest supply where stock is grown by the florists for home trade, and they nearly all cleaned up the season's crop in most satisfying shape. In many cities it was found that the big, fancy mums were slow to move, where the small stock sold well. The reason is that most of the Thanksgiving flowers are for table use and the average flower buyer does not need the decorating grades for a dinner table. Carnations were generally in full crop and sold well. Roses were in lighter supply, but also in somewhat less demand than mums and carnations. Violets appear to have been no more abundant than usual, but in wholesale markets did not realize the prices they have in recent years. Thanksgiving is not a day which calls for high priced flowers. The purchases usually are in small lots for the customer's own use, and after having paid 30 cents a pound for the Thanksgiving turkey the inclination is to go easy on the flowers. Any marked advance in prices only serves to restrict demand.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The carnation growers once more had it demonstrated that Thanksgiving is not a holiday to be compared with Christmas and Easter, but more in the line of Memorial day, when large quantities of stock can be moved if prices are modcrate. The fact is, the effort to secure enhanced values for carnations has proved a failure at Thanksgiving year after year, this season the same as last.

The Thanksgiving market was in every way satisfactory, except that accumulated carnations could not be sold. The buyers would not pay more than moderate prices and insisted on having fresh stock. Some consignments that carried marks of age were left unsold and pulled down averages in a disappointing fashion.

Some special fancy stock brought rather good prices, but the ordinary run of fancy carnations could not be sold above $3, $2 was the popular price for good stock and sales of off grades were made as low as 75 cents, and even 50 cents. Violets also were carried over, but roses cleaned up well and chrysanthemums found a satisfactory market.

On the whole, the Thanksgiving trade was better than it usually is. It came after several days of dark weather, which did much to curtail the crops of those who grow part of their own stock or who get a part of their supplies from their home growers. The result was an excellent shipping demand.

Since Thanksgiving the market has been running down hill. Warm weather increased supply and decreased demand, with the result that practically everything is plentiful and carnations bordering on the condition of oversupply. Buy-

Carnations

Largest Supply of Strictly High-grade Stock

Carnations now are in full crop with us—the same uniformly high quality stock that we have shipped in such large quantities in other years. If you are buying Carnations, send us an order—once tried you will use no other. :: :: :: ::

Killarney

If you and your trade appreciate nice, clean stock of Killarney, you will become a steady buyer once you try our stock. It certainly is fine—a good proportion of the "special" lengths, but mostly "selects" (medium to long), that every retail store can sell in quantity if the customers only see them. We want you to try these now, so we shall be sure of your order for Christmas, when we shall have a big cut of Specials and all other lengths.

BEAUTIES

You can order Beauties of us with the certainty that you are drawing on the best stock in the west. Fine, large heads on all lengths of stem, but mostly medium to long; excellent color, perfect foliage, strong stems—order some and see.

VIOLETS

If you offer your trade our Violets it will increase your sales. Send us an order and you will agree we have "the cream of the Hudson River doubles," also the best fragrant home-grown singles. Try some today.

Green Goods

Use Smilax in your decorations. We can supply it by the hundred or thousand. Always the best ferns in the country. Plenty of Asparagus bunches. All other Greens in large supply.

ers are not yet taking hold of carnations the way they did last season, perhaps because of the several weeks of unusually high prices early in the autumn. The stock now is fine, plentiful and cheap and it ought to move better than it does.

The supply of Beauties has increased, as well as the supply of all other roses. Killarney continues to be the king of the market. Some of the wholesalers say there is more call for Killarney than for all other roses combined, but Richmond is now enjoying better sale. White is plentiful, though Kaiserin has about dropped out.

Violets did better for the few days after Thanksgiving than they did earlier in the week. Evidently some of the growers were so busy picking the turkey bones that they forgot to pick violets. The supply was short Saturday. The quality of most of the shipments reaching this market is superlatively good, but prices are not up to last year.

Chrysanthemums are by no means over. Some of the stock has that ragged, faded look that comes with the end of a hard season, but there still is a large supply of the big, fancy flowers in both white and yellow. For the moment, white seems to have the call. Small mums of really good quality are scarce.

Lilies are abundant and callas are coming in. Romans are now bracketed with Paper Whites. Sweet peas are increasing, but are not yet an important item. Stevia is everywhere. There is a little bouvardia. Cattleyas continue extremely scarce.

The greens market shows little change; business in this department is steady.

The November Business.

The warmest November in the history of the United States Weather Bureau hardly could prove an exceptionally good month for business. It is true that a number of wholesale houses find their sales total a higher figure than in any previous November, but it is due to the much greater quantity of stock handled, a quantity so great that a good aggregate of sales resulted in spite of the low prices that prevailed during most of the month. The second and third weeks of November were marked by severe gluts of roses and mums, and the last week saw carnations accumulate, but there was a spurt just before Thanksgiving that not only went a long way toward making a good total for the month's sales but shows what may be expected as soon as settled seasonable weather permits business to strike a steady gait.

The market must of necessity turn over more stock and more money than ever before, for there has been an extremely large addition to the glass area since last season, but there are two more wholesale houses pushing for business, and competition is the life of trade.

Various Notes.

For a number of years the E. Wienhoeber Co. has sent each of its regular customers an engagement book at the opening of the social season. This year the book was of even higher class than heretofore, the illustration at the opening of each month being in colors, a work of real art. Several were reproductions of photographs taken by the Review. Enclosed with the book when it was sent out was an engraved card inviting attention "to the unusually well selected collection of imported and domestic pottery, glassware and brass goods for use with plants and cut flowers displayed at their store and greenhouses."

John Sterrett, who has been a well known figure in the market for years, now with the Benthey-Coatsworth Co., recently acquired a farm of ten acres in Keystone valley in Florida. Mr. Sterrett served through the Civil war and in the battle of Stone River was shot three times inside of thirty minutes. It is the pension money Uncle Sam has paid him that went into the Florida farm. Mrs. Sterrett is now in Florida looking after the property.

Willie Abrahamson is said to be now located permanently in Denver.

The sympathetic growers at Rhinebeck who have the really good violets, seem to be assisting their less successful brethren to realize the same price per bunch for inferior flowers as the better stock brings. Some of the best growers are bunching with regard to size of bunch rather than to number of flowers in the bunch. The retailers complain and claim a shortage when a bunch contains only forty or eighty violets, instead of fifty or 100, but many of the wholesalers are now billing their violets at so much per bunch, and not at so much per hundred. When the bunches are all of a standard size the man with the best stock does not seem to get as much out of it as he would if his bunches, as well as his flowers, were larger than the other fellow's, because of full count. It is an old idea for the man with small violets

J. A. Mendel, who has two retail stores on West Eighteenth street, has begun the manufacture of wire frames for his own use and to wholesale, securing two of the wire workers of the Chicago Rose Co. and starting business November 29.

Peter Reinberg the other day was offered a car of 16x18 glass at such a low figure that he considered it a good purchase, even if only to put in stock for making repairs. But the chances are it means a few more new houses next spring.

The Florists' Club will have its regular monthly meeting at the Union restaurant December 2.

F. A. Thompson, the head of the Detroit concern which manufactures E. H. Hunt's To-Bak-Ine, has been in town this week on a visit.

Harry Manheim, of the J. A. Budlong staff, celebrated his tenth wedding anniversary November 29.

Hoerber Bros. are now using for their shipments from the greenhouses to the store the corrugated board boxes obtained of Thompson & Norris Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., and Brookville, Ind. These boxes fasten with a tin staple at the corners, which gives a rigidity the users like. They also are made with a special board inside which does not soften up when a little water comes in contact.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. again has its stock of Cardinal rose in good crop. When this variety is in its best shape there is nothing finer in red.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., has spent a week at St. Louis and other cities southwest.

Miss Ida Evert, who sells the stock of her brother, John Evert, in the Flower Growers' Market, says Mr. Evert's chrysanthemums will last another month.

John Sinner, manager of the Flower Growers' Market, says the remodeling of the building will begin early in January. The remodeled structure will have an entrance to the market on both the Randolph street and Wabash avenue sides, which is expected to be a help to the floor, as it will make it a short cut between the stores of Kennicott Bros. Co., Vaughan & Sperry and the Randall Co., just as buyers now go in at one side of the Atlas block and come out on the other.

George Walther is starting his second month as a wholesaler and says he finds the work not nearly so hard as retailing.

Miss Martha C. Gunterberg reports an exceptionally brisk sale for first-class mignonette.

E. C. Amling says he looks for Christmas to make a new record for volume of business in this market.

Bassett & Washburn think well of the Rhea Reid rose. It sells well with them.

Kyle & Foerster have been investigating some new sources of fern supply and say it is interesting to note what different grades some shippers consider good stock. From some of the correspondence it would appear that the Chicago market requires better ferns than are thought necessary at other places.

John Zech says the shipping trade has been coming in spurts since Thanksgiving. November 29 was an unusually busy day with them.

The bowlers did not roll Thanksgiving day.

CLEVELAND.

The J. M. Gasser Co. reports a good Thanksgiving trade, with yellow chrysanthemums in the lead, closely followed by pink and white mums. Stock was above the average this year and finer flowers were never sent out. Prices averaged about the same as in former years.

Violets were not much sought for, though the weather was ideal and general conditions were favorable. Carnations were also a disappointment, as the demand was light, though better stock was never offered. D.

MOLINE, ILL.—Peterson & Eckstam Bros. have opened their new store at 540 Tenth avenue.

GARDNER, MASS.—George E. Tourtellot has completed his greenhouses on Highland avenue. Leroy Oliver, who is to help run the plant this winter, has moved from his home on North Main street into the Graham house on Highland avenue.

The Market.

Trade was heavy for Thanksgiving, with plenty of stock. There was a fine lot of mums and they were cleaned up nicely. The supply from now on will be light, as they are nearly all cut out, except a few of the late varieties. Carnations were in good supply and the demand was heavy as usual, with prices about right. Roses were in fine crop, but moved rather slow. The demand for Beauties was a little light, but the supply was rather short. Violets proved good sellers and were cleaned up early in the day. Pot plants moved rather slowly, as the bulk of the business was done on cut stock and mums had the preference over all. Prices were satisfactory and all the firms are pleased with the business done. It is doubtful if there ever was as much stock to dispose of as there was last week. While all the trade like to see mums come in, they are equally glad, when the season is over, to see them cleaned out of the way to make room for roses, carnations, etc., which always have to take a back seat while mums are holding full sway.

There has been considerable funeral work lately and right at Thanksgiving time it was exceptionally heavy.

Trade is a little quiet this week compared with last, but we all have our thoughts now on the holiday rush, which is only a little way off.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a regular meeting in the Brent building, Tuesday evening, November 23. The dance committee made such a good report on the last dance that it was decided to have another. Thursday night, December 16, was selected as the date. The committee expects to outdo the last one, when there were over eighty couples present. The club, by giving these dances, creates a new interest in the club and brings the members more in touch with one another.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting some fine carnations and roses and will have some late mums that will be good.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

We have passed through one of the best Thanksgiving weeks we have ever had, and the weather was ideal. In the beginning stock was quite plentiful, but Wednesday the demand was heavy and all good stock sold rapidly. Yellow chrysanthemums took the lead, as that is one of the Missouri University's colors. The game of football is played here every Thanksgiving day between the University of Kansas and the University of Missouri. As nearly all the Missouri followers wore a large yellow mum to the game, by Thursday at 9 a. m. the supply was running short and by 5 p. m., after the game was won by Missouri, the demand for more yellow mums increased, but all stock had been exhausted. All other flowers sold well and by Friday nothing good could be found. Some florists were compelled to telegraph to Chicago for mums, as the local growers were out of stock.

Good carnations are still scarce and the demand is heavy and prices are good. Good American Beauties are very scarce in this market. Narcissus and stevia are more plentiful and go to help out on funeral work. There are no Roman hyacinths on the market as yet. There are some fine sweet peas, but not enough to go around. Some fine violets are being brought in by a truck gardener, who has given his attention to this line only the last two seasons. The blooms are large, single, bell-shaped and long stemmed, but we have not yet learned the name.

Various Notes.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. had an immense business and their supply did not nearly go around.

one of our daily papers, that their trade on Thanksgiving day was twenty-five per cent greater than last year.

Miss Lillian Humfeld, whose hands were poisoned by Primula obconica, has been absent from business for about two weeks, but is now able to be at her desk again.

Judging by the large pile of orders we saw packed ready for delivery, at the William L. Rock Flower Co., they must have had a rushing business.

Almost all of the florists in the city were lined up for more stock on Thursday, but could not be supplied.

The W. H. Humfeld Floral Co. reports good business. They were kept busy with several weddings during the week.

Arthur Newell reports trade as being exceptionally good and he could have sold more if he had had more stock.

The Holland bulb and azalea agents are making their appearance again. We had two representatives to call on us last week. They report that they are taking good, large orders. W. H. H.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The Thanksgiving business this year was well up to the standard set by previous years in volume, but the quality of some stock was inferior to what it has been for some time past. This fact, coupled with the large quantities of stock poured into the market, caused a large amount to be moved off at low prices. This was particularly true of roses, chrysanthemums and carnations.

There seems to be a tendency to attach too much importance to this holiday, among growers who are not in the market themselves, with the result that considerable quantities of stock are pickled in anticipation of a tremendous rush of business, which does not, as a rule, materialize.

This year the weather undoubtedly affected the market here to a great extent. There was bright weather up to Tuesday and then a cold, raw temperature and high winds, with rain, which later turned to snow and sleet, the first snow of the season. The snow fell the entire day and night on Wednesday and melted nearly as fast as it fell. About three inches fell, by weather report. If Thursday had been warm, the volume of local business would have been tremendous.

After the flurry incident to the holiday, business settled down to a good, healthy condition, with better grades of stock arriving, in quantities better suited to the demands, and as a consequence bringing steadier prices.

Carnations look better than during the latter part of last week. Chrysanthemums hold out pretty well, but are beginning to show old age, except Nonin and Helen Frick, which are gobbled up on sight. Roses are overstocked in almost every color. Sweet peas are to be had in small quantities.

Various Notes.

The Maryland State Horticultural Society holds its annual exhibition of fruit and flowers December 2 and 3, at the Fifth Regiment Armory. The exhibits are divided into three classes—fruits, vegetables, and flowering and ornamental plants. It is one of the largest exhibitions ever held here. Lectures are given by state experts. Wm. F. Gude, of Washington, will address the evening session on "Practical Floriculture."

Henry Fischer had three fine vases of seedling mums at the last meeting of the Florists' Club. One white variety made an average of eighty-five points. G. A. Lotze had a vase of fine mums, incurved, dark pink of the shade of Amorita, which were awarded a certificate of merit and SALEM, MASS.—C. G. Ward & Co. have opened a store at Somerville, Mass., in the new Arthur block, at the corner of Bristol road and Broadway.

NEW ORLEANS.

Current Comment.

The weather has lately been quite favorable for the working of the private gardens. It is now the time to sow English rye grass seeds for our winter lawns, and every gardener is quite busy at the job. Gardening is a business which has been greatly on the increase here during the last few years, and we think that no other city in the United States employs so many gardeners. Besides, they all seem to do well at the occupation.

The culture of cucumbers as a crop to follow chrysanthemums is practiced by many growers here. In fact, some pay no attention to any other crop. Our bright, sunny days in winter are ideal for the growing of these vegetables under glass, and thus they can be grown in large quantities at a time when they command high prices. J. Shackai, H. Baker, the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., D. Gurtler and H. Doescher are among the most successful growers in this line.

On visiting Mr. Doescher's place, we found him busy rearranging his piping and filling his solid beds with fresh soil from a near-by pasture. His cucumbers were already well advanced in pots and he expects a good return. His field-grown roses are as fine as any around Gentilly avenue, which is one of the richest and highest spots in or about this city. His Boston ferns, of which he makes a specialty, are fast becoming well established after the bad check they received during the September storm.

Abele Bros. have just completed a new sash house, 20x100, to cover a bed of Asparagus plumosus.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was good, particularly when the unfortunate weather conditions are considered. November 24 there was a northeast gale, accompanied by rain, hail and snow, while November 25 was as damp, dreary and cheerless a day as could well be imagined. Had climatic conditions been favorable, it is doubtful if there would have been sufficient flowers to go around. The growers fared better than the retailers. While the latter did a good business, the inclement weather seriously affected it.

Chrysanthemums appeared in large quantities. No high price was made, $3 per dozen being about top notch. Such varieties as Maud Dean, Jeanne Nonin, Dr. Enguehard, Nagoya, Rieman and Bonnaffon were much in evidence. Roses were in goodly numbers, but sales on these were generally satisfactory. The advance was not striking, except in the case of the better grades of Killarney and Beauties. Carnations made $5 for the best, ordinary stock selling at $2 to $3. Enchantress sold just as well as the high colored varieties and was much sought after.

Violets were abundant, selling mostly at 75 cents. Some few went to $1. On these the retailers were heavily overstocked, owing to bad weather. Valley sold well, as did lilies, which were not abundant. There was a moderate supply of Paper Whites and smaller lots of Roman hyacinths. Cattleyas and gardenias made good prices; neither were plentiful.

Among other flowers noted were wallflowers, stevia, snapdragons, mignonette and bouvardia. In green stock there was an active trade. Azaleas, Lorraine begonias, Jerusalem cherries, ferns and palms all had a fair call.

Since Thanksgiving the market has been well cleaned up and prices are holding out satisfactorily. The prospects are bright for good business between now and Christmas.

Various Notes.

Peirce Bros. are handling quantities of well flowered azaleas at their stands in the Park street market.

The schedule committee appointed at the recent S. A. F. committee meeting has been working on the premium list for the spring show of 1911 and has it well advanced.

T. J. Beuwell, the genial representative of the A. H. Hews Co., at the wholesale flower markets, is around again after ten weeks' serious sickness. E. L. Pierce, vice-president of the company, is also able to be at his desk again, much improved. The firm is doing a good fall shipping trade.

Edgar Bros. had an excellent Thanksgiving trade and marketed a fine lot of late chrysanthemums.

Indications are that there will be a good delegation on the Gardeners' and Florists' Club field day to Nashua, N. H., Saturday, December 11. The train leaves North station at 11:30 a. m. Ladies are specially invited.

The death of Carl Jurgens, the noted Newport grower, caused many local expressions of regret. Mr. Jurgens sold a good many of his fine Beauty roses, valley and other flowers through Welch Bros.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report the best Thanksgiving trade they have had and an especially good call for green stock.

J. T. Butterworth is still cutting good Cattleya labiata and has a fine lot of Percivaliana following.

George L. Freeman has been visiting all the local orchid growers during the last few days and reports a big demand. For Odontoglossum crispum he says there is a remarkable call.

Welch Bros. report that but for bad weather the Thanksgiving trade would have broken all records. Beauties, My Maryland, Killarney and Richmond were leaders among roses. The best Beauties made $4 to $5 per dozen. Enchantress was the most sought after carnation. Cattleyas were in much demand, the supply being inadequate. Gardenias sold at $3 to $5 per dozen and are becoming popular. White Bonnaffon and Eaton were leaders in mums. W. N. Craig.

Saxe & Floto, of Waterbury, are on the rocks, or rather built on rock, for as one approaches their big new plant, immense boulders rise up like sentinels. Lilies by the thousands are forced here all the year around to supply the wholesale trade, which is constantly increasing. Mr. Floto pays close attention to the growing end and showed me the new bulb cellar, where bulbs by tens of thousands are ranged, tier above tier. The desirable tulip, Proserpine, promises to be in at Christmas; a first experiment, and if successful, will be a profitable one. Chrysanthemums are largely grown, Intensity being the best red. I also noted this variety doing well with John Macrae, of Providence, R. I., who considers it the best in its class. This is the home of Golden Dome, which has made good wherever grown. Golden Chadwick and Golden Eagle are popular. Mrs. Brock is a late commercial pink, and Eaton is Mr. Floto's favorite white. M.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Thanksgiving was almost spoiled by two days of rain and sleet, the first premonition of winter. Everything was advancing to legitimate values at this season, but the storm interfered and the holiday turned out no better than a good Saturday. The business of Saturday, November 27, was generally satisfactory and the outlook now is cheerful. The best Beauties sold at 35 cents to 40 cents and the best of the other roses at 6 cents to 8 cents. Violets sold at from 75 cents down, and carnations at 4 cents, for the novelties and the selected, down to 1 cent, following the lead of No. 2 roses to this bottom. There were many thousands of violets left over from the holiday that suffered a painful shock and fall. One wholesaler received over fifty boxes of them on one train Wednesday, November 24.

There was some pickling for Thanksgiving. Those who held their Monday and Tuesday cuts for higher prices made the usual mistake. It does not pay to pickle.

Rose stock of all kinds is perfect and the market from now on should consume the whole of it, even though some of the large growers average many thousands daily. There never has been so tremendous a showing of chrysanthemums at this time of the year, and in quality I have never seen anything to compare with them. The enormous shipments have kept the price down, even the best not advancing over $3 per dozen. Stock well worth 25 cents other years has been sold at 10 cents and 12 cents. Thousands of good flowers were closed out at $5 per hundred. It was discouraging while it lasted. Fortunately the growers have had a sure outlet, even in these floods, for the wholesale street was never in better shape to handle stock to the mutual advantage of all concerned.

top figures and have been none too plentiful. Good valley is at a premium.

There were too many carnations for the demand last week and prices fell. At times 2 cents would buy the best in the market. One house had a surplus at one time Thursday of 20,000; 50 cents was top that afternoon for violets. Friday the street men had their fill of the surplus at anything they cared to offer. Bulbous stock is coming in abundantly, narcissi and hyacinths especially.

Sunday was like a day in early May. The present week opens with cold and cloudy weather, but there is no frost and no immediate sign of winter. Prophets are already promising a green Christmas. Plantsmen are getting ready for it, and the plant growers are a unit around New York in community of interest and agreement as to reasonable prices.

Various Notes.

Monday, December 13, the last and most important meeting of the year of the Florists' Club takes place. There will be some interesting exhibits and a farewell demonstration by the caterers. For president the contest has narrowed to Harry Turner, the present incumbent; A. L. Miller, the earnest worker and expert plantsman and carnationist, and Robert Schultz, parliamentarian and the Richmond king. It will be a close contest. W. E. Marshall has withdrawn. Robert Berry and Joseph Manda are the candidates for the vice-presidency, both popular and hard workers for the club's interest. John Young, for secretaryship, has practically no opposition on the basis of "let well enough alone." The present treasurer, W. C. Rickards, or J. K. Allen, the ex-treasurer, will, one or the other, carry the key to the club's strong box, and there will be an interesting contest for places on the board of trustees.

S. Jacobs & Sons report a larger demand from the west and far away from New York in every direction this fall than in any year in their long record, while the local trade exceeds all other seasons.

Knight & Struck recently received a considerable importation of Dendrobium Phalænopsis Schroederianum and say they sold out almost immediately.

Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, are doing a big business in small evergreens for window-boxes and vases this fall. Their shipments of nursery stock go right on daily and the weather seems to have been especially made for the nurserymen this year.

The estate of John Scott, Flatbush, with David McKenzie as manager, has a large stock of plants ready for the holidays, of every popular variety. The large Scottii ferns are especially noteworthy.

The estate of H. Dreyer, at Elmhurst, is making a fine display of Christmas plants and the entire range is a model of neatness under the management of Girard Dreyer. The establishment is reached easily by trolley from Long Island city.

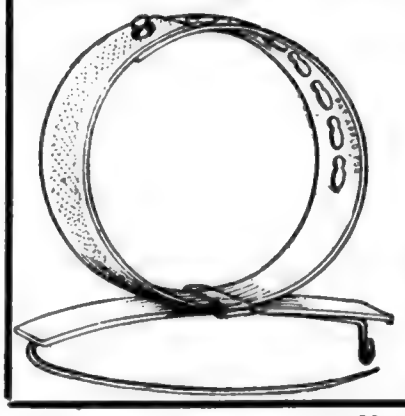
McHutchison & Co. are still receiving large importations from Japan, England, France, Belgium and Holland, covering about every branch of the trade. They are constantly extending the field of their operations.

Large importations of plants are arriving for all the orchid dealers. The good prices now prevailing for the cut flowers has awakened new and general interest in the orchid and demonstrated that the supply will not exceed the demand for any serious length of time. James McManus says the call for cut blooms has been ahead of the supply for several weeks.

The Stumpp & Walter Co. announces that this season, contrary to the usual custom, they will handle no holly or Christmas greens. For some years they have found this department of the enterprise unprofitable and unsatisfactory.

C. C. Trepel has made a big success of his retail enterprise at Bloomingdale's. His sales have quadrupled since he took the helm. Mrs. Trepel has fully recovered from the operation for appendicitis.

Frank Good, formerly with H. Hoffmeir, is making good at J. K. Duer's, on Madison avenue, in novel window decorations daily.



Mr. Peterson, formerly with the Fleischman Floral Co., is now with Warendorff.

At M. A. Bowe's retail store on Broadway last week an elaborate floral football decoration in the window in appropriate colors attracted much attention. Yale and Harvard received equal recognition. The deft, artistic hand of Arthur Merritt was in evidence.

Bowling.

The Astoria Bowling Club held its annual Thanksgiving turkey contest Tuesday evening, November 23. Twenty were present, including several from New York. The club generously threw open the door for all in the prize bowling; one of the contestants from Chappaqua and the other from Borough Park carried home the birds and thus showed their appreciation of hospitality. To give all an equal chance the prizes were offered to the bowlers whose totals were nearest to 150 and 97 in the third game of the evening. The contests were close, but President W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., won his with a total of 151. Messrs. Kessler, Doerhoefer, Secker and Shaw tied in the 97 class and in the roll off the latter won the prize. The high scores of the evening were: Miesem, 209; Donaldson, Sr., 188; Doerhoefer, 181; Donaldson, Jr., 161; Siebrecht, Sr., 158; Lorenz, 155; Siebrecht, Jr., 149; Smith, 147; Jacobson, 144; Holt, 141; Secker, 137; Anderson, 136; Miller, 134; Bleckwen, 135; Kessler, 132; Shaw, 126; Logan, 111; Dorval, 101. Mr. Smith won the elegant cigar box donated by Phil Kessler, who also furnished one of the gobblers, the club placing the other on the altar. Enthusiasm and refreshments were abundant.

Thanksgiving night the Flatbush bowlers held their annual turkey contest. As usual, Mr. Riley won the large bird with a total of 214 and Alfred Zeller removed the medium bird as second prize. The whole club participated.

Saturday, November 27, George H. Blake, of Bonnet & Blake, Brooklyn, won a 21-pound bird.

Captain Berry has suggested a Christmas turkey contest for the New York Bowling Club, December 15. This contest will be open to all members of the Florists' Club and the Astoria, Flatbush, Jersey City and Madison clubs. The contest will begin at Thumm's alleys promptly at 8 p. m. There will be three turkeys if enough entries reach Captain Berry in time to make this possible, one for the high score, one for high average in two games and one in the third game to the score nearest 100, ties to be decided by the roll off of one ball on each alley. The entrance fee will be 50 cents, and Mr. Berry will book entries Monday evening, December 13, at the meeting of the Florists' Club. No one can win more than one turkey. It is possible a smoker may follow the contest.

The Market.

Thanksgiving week gave the florists here a good, stiff trade. Chrysanthemums were in good supply and they sold well and at fair prices. They were the flowers most in demand.

Carnations are slow in getting into the market in proper quality or quantity, but are steadily improving. Paper White narcissi are just making their appearance, and they, with White Romans, will be needed to take the place of mums for funeral work.

Trade conditions in this territory are, in the main, highly satisfactory and promise a good season. All the florists are busy all the time.

Various Notes.

Dugan & Cain have purchased the Fairview Greenhouses and stock and will continue the business under its old name.

Elwood Kline, formerly with Chas. P. Mueller, and his brother, Norval, formerly with Culp & Co., have formed a partnership and opened a flower store in Newton, Kan. They have the best wishes of their friends in the trade and have every prospect of success. W. H. C.

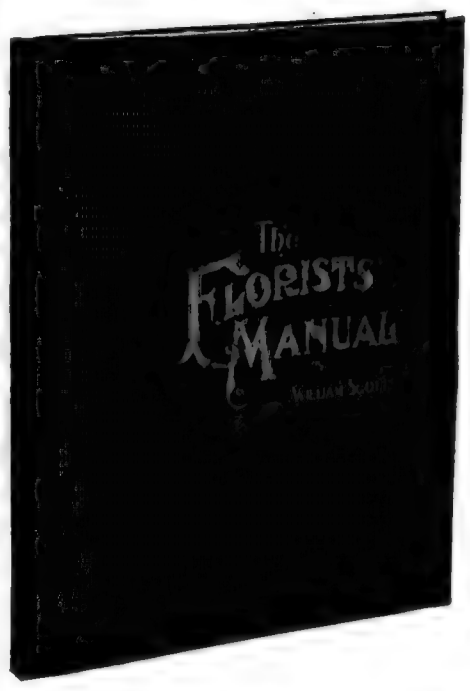
THE VERBENA.

Probably not many growers are aware that the little verbena, which gives so much color and fragrance to the home garden, came originally from our neighbor continent, South America. The scarlet verbena, Melindres, was introduced as early as 1827 from Buenos Ayres. Some years later the Tweedieana, a red verbena, but not so vivid in color as the Melindres, was imported from Brazil. V. teucrioides, a pure white and very fragrant verbena, came to us from Montevideo. A lilac-purple verbena, V. multifida, came from Peru.

The late Robert Buist, Sr., a Philadelphian, was the first to introduce verbena culture into this country. He received seeds from South America of the above named species, and from these seeds have sprung the many varieties now in existence.



It is thought by many growers that the verbena can be grown from year to year from seed. This can be done, it is true, but at a sacrifice, for the true lover of floriculture is anxious to see his labors yield results, and these cannot be perfected in plants produced from seed, except by careful culling, which cannot be done in one season. The choicest varieties are secured by cuttings taken from a select stock of seedlings and rooted in sand.

For more than thirty years the late J. L. Dillon, of Bloomsburg, Pa., made verbena culture one of his specialties, and the same work is now carried on by the J. L. Dillon Estate. Sixty named varieties have been listed by this firm for many years. These have all been obtained from cuttings taken from choice stock and they embrace all the popular colors. Two years ago Miss Wilmott, an English variety, was added to this list, and last year a new variety, produced from seed sown at the Dillon plant, was given the name of Mrs. William H. Taft, in honor of the President's wife; this verbena is a deep blue and very fragrant.

The verbena season is just opening, and from now until the middle of June thousands and thousands of rooted cuttings and plants of the thrifty little verbena will be shipped all over the United States. L. H. D.

Kansas City, Mo.—Alpha Elberfield says that the Thanksgiving day business was undoubtedly stimulated by the notice given the flower business in the Kansas City Star of November 23. The article occupied nearly half a column and quoted retail prices on most of the staple articles in the cut flower line.

Jackson, Miss.—W. J. Brown acted as judge at the annual exhibition of the Crystal Springs Floral Club, at Crystal Springs, and is said to have performed the task in a highly satisfactory way. Mr. Brown's gardens, located in the northern suburbs, contain over 1,500 fine Cochet roses.

SECTIONS OF THE MUM.

so much in this country, as the flowers are not quite large enough to suit the demand here, but is prominent in all exhibitions in England. The flowers have strap-shaped petals, curving regularly inward, and forming, when mature, an even, spherical outline. A good example of this section is the old variety Major Bonnaffon.

Japanese varieties.—This is the section to which belong the large varieties having long, loose petals, which sometimes are intertwined as in the variety Nellie Pockett; and sometimes long and straight, as in F. S. Vallis. All the large varieties go into this section; in fact, the variations are so many that it has been found necessary to subdivide this section into two groups, known as the Japanese incurved and the Japanese reflexed. Good examples of the former are Col. D. Appleton and Merza, and of the Japanese reflexed, Mrs. Knox. Here the petals turn back horizontally and droop toward the stem.

Reflexed.—This section is entirely opposite to the incurved, in that the petals recurve from the center of the flower to its base. Few of this section are grown in this country today.

Anemone varieties.—The flowers in this section have broad, strap-shaped ray petals, which stand out stiffly and horizontally, forming a regular collar to the numerous disc florets of the center. The variety Garza is the most common example of this, and makes a beautiful plant in any form; it is also a splendid cut flower.

Japanese anemones.—This section is similar to the previous one, the centers being much the same. The ray florets show considerable variability, in some being long and drooping, while in others they are curiously twisted.

Pompon varieties.—Here belong the really hardy varieties of the gardens. The heads vary from flat to spherical, having short, erect or reflexed petals, which in some varieties are fringed and toothed. These are most desirable plants and really everybody's flower. There are some beautiful varieties and their names are legion. They are perfectly hardy, easy to cultivate, and should be in every garden.

Pompon anemones.—As the name indicates, this section resembles the anemone section in having the disc florets quilled and the ray florets flat, which are short as in the pompons.

Single-flowered varieties.—This section, in my opinion, contains some of the most beautiful flowers. It is only a few years since we have taken to them in this country, but they are becoming more popular every year. The characteristic of this section is the daisy-like flower, having a single row, or sometimes two or three rows, of ray florets. No single should have more than three rows of such florets. Commercial varieties should have more than one row, for in packing some of them are sure to be bruised or broken and in the forms with a single row this damage makes the flowers worthless; if there are two rows, the flower is not so liable to damage, and if one or two of the ray florets are damaged they can be removed without spoiling the flower. There are now so many beautiful varieties of singles in cultivation that they are really confusing. Perfection does not seem to be reached as yet, for the new ones are better every year. There are great possibilities in the cultivation from seed of the flowers of this section, treating them as half-hardy annuals. A friend of mine procured a packet of seeds last March, sowing the seeds in the greenhouse at the time of starting his other half-hardy annuals. In due time they were transplanted, and when large enough transplanted to the herbaceous border. They grew remarkably well, and from September up to quite recently they were the most beautiful plants in the garden. They were low and bushy, thus not requiring staking, and were a mass of blooms, every one a different color. When these early hardy singles become better known, I predict that they will be the most popular annual grown. They come into flower at the proper time of the year, just when the other annuals and herbaceous plants are on the wane. These single chrysanthemums also make beautiful objects when grown in pots, either as specimens or for cut flowers, and are especially suitable for decoration. I would advise all who are growing these to disbud some of each variety. Some varieties are better when grown in sprays, while others are more attractive when disbudded.

Spidery and fantastic varieties.—The members of this section are merely curiosities. A comparison of the varieties Golden Shower and F. S. Vallis shows the variability and possibilities of the genus.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The volume of business in cut flowers at Thanksgiving was large. Most of the wholesalers and retailers consider it satisfactory, under existing conditions. The weather was warm and bright until just before the holiday, when it changed to cold and stormy, a change that is disastrous for shopping. The demand for violets and fancy chrysanthemums fell off under these adverse weather conditions. The interest displayed in the Thanksgiving day football game was less than usual and the Army-Navy game for the following Saturday was sadly missed. Excepting violets, it is probable that more flowers were sold than in previous years, shipping demand calling for much choice stock. Shipping demand was not affected so much by the weather as was the demand in the local shops. Prices ruled lower than a year ago, fancy chrysanthemums rarely going over $3 a dozen, the bulk of the stock selling at from 75 cents to $2 per dozen.

Fancy double violets brought $1, occasionally a fraction more, and fancy singles 75 cents, with fine stock to be had at 50 cents. Good judges estimate that the double violet consumption for last week was only one-fourth of that a year ago, while singles were in greater supply and demand. This is explained by the tremendous effort of the wholesalers a year ago to divert the Hudson river stream to this port, an effort which was not so noticeable this year. The Hightstown Lady Campbells were more in evidence than Marie Louise, while the storm shortened the crop so that violets were scarce on Saturday.

The chrysanthemum crop for Thanksgiving was the largest ever seen in this market. The buyers were able to obtain what they wanted at fair prices. The quality of the stock offered in most cases was excellent, but, unfortunately, there were quite a lot of flowers that would have had a better chance some days sooner, the outer petals being soft, sometimes brown, a condition that quickly relegated them to the street, as the retailers were able to get enough first-class stock. Pompons did not appear to find much favor with the buyers.

The buoyant flowers on the list were Beauties, which always advance on a holiday; cattleyas, gardenias and valley. Perhaps cattleyas were almost too scarce to make the extraordinary prices paid an index to their favor. Gardenias advanced sharply, while valley brought better average prices under brisk demand.

The ordinary grades of roses sold a little better, at unchanged prices. Fancy grades were in demand ahead of the supply, but with so many chrysanthemums in sight prices advanced little. Carnations were abundant. There was a slight advance on the fancies, with more ordinary stock than the market could take. The other flowers on the list sold moderately well. The general tone was better. There was an improved demand for greens, especially asparagus in bunches. Wild smilax was ordered extensively.

The present week has opened auspiciously, excepting only the weather, which is too warm for the season. Prices have fallen a little since Thanksgiving, notably on carnations and violets. The shipping demand, led by the first german in Baltimore, held this year a week earlier than formerly, is the feature of the market. High grade stock is ordered almost invariably.

The local demand is lighter than the season warrants, but this can hardly continue; the social calendar for the end of the week forbids. White chrysanthemums are in strong supply this week. Poinsettias have come.

Our Floral Artists.

The first week in December is an important time in the shops, for the best flower buyers are shopping and thinking of Christmas and what they can get that is prettiest for their friends. A recent addition to the Review's staff spent a whole afternoon this week studying the floral pictures in the center of the city.

of Twelfth and Chestnut streets contained a huge basket filled to overflowing with cypripediums, the color effect being perfectly carried out by harmony between flower and basket. A better idea may be formed by recalling the basket seen in the picture of Moses in the bullrushes. This show case is a sort of prelude to H. H. Battles's show windows, a few doors south on Twelfth street. One was devoted to pottery of a classic, exclusive type favored by Mr. Battles; the other contained fancy blooms, the variety of form and color sufficient to satisfy the taste of each passerby.

The grand show window in the Bellevue-Stratford was a woodland scene, with huge chrysanthemums, green foliage, logs and mossy banks, a chrysanthemum forest, the coloring in yellow, white and green toned by the natural brown of bark. It was a beautiful conception that did credit to the Habermehl taste.

A large basket of Killarney, Scotch heather and pussy-willows ornamented with a Dresden ribbon was the central figure in Charles Baxter's arrangement in the window of Pennock Bros., the pink and white combining admirably. About the center figure were smaller pink baskets of heather, green baskets of heather and pink carnations, a basket of lavender sweet peas and yellow daisies, and a basket of pink begonias and yellow snapdragon. It was a picture full of richness, expressive of grace and beauty.

Various Notes.

G. C. Personette and Mrs. Personette, Baltimore, Fred H. Kramer, Washington, and George L. Huscroft, Steubenville, O., were among this week's visitors.

F. Herbert Steinmetz has, for the present at least, abandoned his plan of opening a branch store in the residence section of the city.

B. Eschner and Mrs. Eschner returned from their trip to Jamaica November 27.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had a novel combination for the Cornell followers for the Thanksgiving football game with Penn—a white chrysanthemum with a scarlet carnation deftly grafted on the center, thus showing their preference of the Ithacan college. Richmond roses and violets were favored by Pennsylvanians.

Fred Ehret reports an excellent Thanksgiving, barring only the unfavorable weather.

Paul Berkowitz reports the arrival of the steamer Marquette with large invoices of imperial chinaware and Christmas goods for H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

Eugene Weiss and Samuel F. Lilley have been spending their spare moments visiting suburban growers. They report George E. Campbell, at Flourtown, Pa., as in splendid shape for the winter season.

M. Rice & Co. report the arrival of the steamer Arcadia laden with Christmas goods.

Philip Freud has been featuring, as my friend Charles Henry Fox would say, airships in the window of the store of the Henry F. Michell Co. this week. By the way, the company will hold a poultry show in their branch store at No. 518 December 8 to 10. Many growers are lovers of fine fowls. The chief wanted me to put this properly, else the scoffers might say Michell is getting weak, giving up seeds to poultry. But nobody could possibly say that who knows Henry F. Michell.

Alfred M. Campbell has been a prime factor in Bonnaffons.

Mark B. Mills, of the William K. Harris establishment, produces three chrysanthemums to a stem which are of single-stem size.

George W. Carr, Kingston, Pa., was here last week.

Mission No. 1.

Florists' Baskets

Our aim is Artistic Baskets; that is what makes them appeal to discriminating people. Every basket is made by hand, and finished as if our whole reputation depended upon that particular basket. Madison Basketcraft Co 's baskets are designed for use as well as beauty. They are practical, indestructible, made of willow in odd and artistic shapes, and colored in various delicate tones. Greens, gun metal and browns are the best colors.

The Market.

Business last week, with the exception of that for Thanksgiving, showed little improvement over the previous week. The weather continues warm, with no relief in sight. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful, with the exception of mums, only the larger sizes to be had.

From all reports the Thanksgiving business was far better than last year. Chrysanthemums were the popular flower. The medium grades had the call and were entirely cleaned up; many more could have been sold were they to be had. I think the growers make a mistake by growing the larger blooms for Thanksgiving, as they are not suitable for the dinner table. Quantities of the pompon varieties were to be had, but these did not sell as well this season as last.

Various Notes.

John Grande has the automobile fever.

Secretary A. F. J. Baur has completed the premium list for the carnation convention at Pittsburg and is mailing it out this week. Anyone not receiving one can secure same by notifying Mr. Baur.

J. McHutchison, of McHutchison & Co., and G. P. Dobremsyl, with H. F. Darrow, were visitors this week.

John Elsner says that he thought he was through with assessments when they put sewers, sidewalks and improved the street around his place, but now he has received notice of an assessment of $125 on a sewer three miles away. H. L. W.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Thanksgiving has opened the social season of the nation's capital, with the debutante in full swing, and the flower shops are doing some good work.

There were numerous weddings on for November 24 and 25, which called for some choice stock. Shaffer had probably the most elaborate one, the Miles-Noble wedding.

There was quite a scarcity of stock on Thanksgiving, especially in valley, which was never known to be so much in demand. Carnations also were quite scarce and were looked for by every florist.

Roses are bringing better prices, while violets and orchids still hold their own. Chrysanthemums are pretty well cleaned up; there are only a few now and again and they sell readily.

Various Notes.

The windows of Geo. H. Cooke are very attractive, being massed with Lorraine and Farleyense. Mr. Cooke reports business as excellent.

A. Hubbard, of New London, Conn., has accepted a position with Marche & Co. Mr. Marche's Thanksgiving business was quite brisk.

The Washington Florists' Exchange has purchased its stock of ribbons, which will compare favorably with the stock of any supply house in the country. W. F.

TOLEDO, O.—Charles A. Schramm, the florist at 1315 Cherry street, has taken his brother, Bernard G. Schramm, into the business, and the name of the firm will be Schramm Bros. Business, they say, is excellent.

PACIFIC COAST.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The rainy season opened in the third week of November, with two or three nights' good downpour, with sunny days between, and planting of vegetables for the winter market was promptly begun. With the impetus derived from Thanksgiving, business has picked up rapidly and there are the best of prospects for the winter. Chrysanthemums and roses have been leading the market, with violets a close second. Some fine Beauties, Killarneys and My Maryland have been seen.

From the fields, good Kaiserins and white and pink Cochets have been coming in; also Shasta daisies, gladioli, Paper Whites, stocks, calendulas and sweet peas.

Plumosus and smilax are plentiful and bring a fair price. Hardy ferns are much higher here than in the east. There are no single or pompon chrysanthemums to be seen in this market. There is much call for valley, which is scarce. Orchids are plentiful, with good demand. They sell in the stores at $1.50 each.

Quantities of cinerarias are being planted in the open for winter bloom.

Various Notes.

At East Lake park, where the plants are grown for all the city parks, there is much of interest to be seen. In the conservatory, orchids are in fine display, mostly cattleyas. In this house there are some exceptionally fine plants of maidenhair fern.

Frank Lichtenburg and Herbert Wolfskill, formerly of Wolfskill's, who recently started for themselves on Broadway, have opened another store on West Fifth street, which they have named The Florist. The interior is handsomely finished in mission style. There is a large palm room in the rear. They are much pleased with the patronage received thus far.

Morris Goldenson reports an excellent trade for the entire month of November. Recently he had a wedding a little out of the ordinary, where the decorations were quite stiff and conventional. Paper holders were used on the bridal bouquets, which had to be made long and pointed, after the fashion of years ago.

The Redondo Floral Co. was sending out a lot of funeral designs and reports business as good.

The Roth-Reymond-Muller Floral Co. was also very busy making up designs, among them a large shrine emblem. Some pretty corsage bouquets of violets, Cecil Brunner roses and maidenhair were being arranged.

At The Angelus they have been unusually busy with reception and theater orders. They were sending out some good Silver Wedding mums.

H. N. Gage has received a large importation of German baskets, and also a good sized shipment of other supplies from the east.

The Morris & Snow Seed Co. has had a good trade the entire season.

J. W. Wolfskill's window has been attracting much attention, being filled with long-stemmed Beauties in handsome vases, and pots of Whitmani ferns. The other window contained many new violet baskets in gold or purple. S. A. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather for the last week has been rainy. Only for a few hours at a time has it been possible to appear on the streets without an umbrella. This has had rather a depressing effect on the flower-buying public. Funeral work has been extremely active for the last two weeks and has swelled the receipts of the retailers in a substantial manner. Strictly Thanksgiving trade, however, has also been fair. Never within the history of the local business have flowers been so cheap or in such profusion as at this time The warm, moist, rainy weather can be thanked for this, but whether the excess of flowers is of any monetary benefit to the florist is a question that might take some time to answer.

Chrysanthemums have for several weeks been strictly in their prime, but prices have been about twenty-five per cent less than those of last year. The finest Bonnaffons can be bought at $4 per hundred, and from this price down to $2 for flowers somewhat smaller and shorter stemmed. The best outside whites are a shade higher in price, but at no time during the season have the flowers been as high in price as they were one year ago. The effect of this large influx of chrysanthemums has been to lower the prices on other stock. Carnations which should bring at least $4 per hundred can be bought for from $2 to $3, and many at even lower prices. The remark has been made by some of the dealers that the quality of the flowers is not up to that of earlier in the season. This is a point well taken, for it must be admitted that the excessively warm weather preceding the present warm rain had the effect of inducing the recently planted carnations to make quantities of flower buds on rather weak stems. These have now come into blooming, and a heavy cutting of light, long-stemmed stock is the result. With the disappearance of the present warm spell, we may expect larger flowers and heavier stems. This, to a certain extent, holds true on the roses as well. Brides and Maids have done nobly as far as quantity is concerned, but the quality has not been up to that expected at this time.

Beauties have been unusually backward; the writer has seen but few flowers of this popular variety during the last few months, and none of these were strictly first-class.

Valley is in good supply and quality. The several weeks of frosty weather induced many of the growers to overforce their pips and much weak-stemmed stock was the result, but this has been entirely overcome and the flowers produced now are really good.

Quite a few growers have turned their attention to the culture of sweet peas under glass, and we have been treated this year, more than ever before, with a supply of this flower early in the winter.

California red berries have been brought by tons into town during the last ten days. The Italian green goods men seem to have a monopoly of this branch of the trade. The price has gradually lowered from $65 to $40 per ton, delivered in San Francisco and vicinity, until at the latter figure the retailer can now purchase first quality berries. These prices have proven a boon to the street hucksters, and many thousands of pounds have been retailed on street corners at 10 cents per bunch.

The favorable weather has caused violets to bloom in enormous quantities. An effort was made early last week by the Italian growers to keep the prices well up, but, owing to the vast quantities brought into town, 50 cents per dozen bunches has been all that it was necessary for the retailers to pay to secure their stock. Should we be treated to a few frosty nights in the near future, these prices will quickly increase, but if the rain continues violets will be more plentiful than ever.

Narcissi are being brought into town in small quantities, and this is the only bulbous stock that we have at present. Other kinds of outside flowers, with the exception of coreopsis and stocks, have disappeared for the season. Maidenhair and asparagus are slightly scarcer and smilax is more plentiful. A few poinsettias were brought into town, but there was little demand for them. Primulas in flower, celestial peppers, ferns in pots and pans, and various house palms have all moved well for Thanksgiving presents. Huckleberry and wild ferns and grasses are in abundant supply and assist materially in swelling the retailers' receipts.

Various Notes.

The Piedmont Seed & Floral Co. has moved its store from the Central Bank building, Oakland, to Eleventh street, near Washington street, in the same town.

Several new dealers have made their appearance with green goods among the local dealers. There promises to be quite a competition in this line in the near future.

Rolleri & Co. have moved their violet growing plant from Ocean View to Elmhurst, Cal. They have planted about five acres with Princess of Wales.

The Christmas tree men have made their appearance in town and are trying to interest the retailers in handling trees for the holidays.

George E. Smith is on a flying trip to Los Angeles and vicinity. He will be absent from town about one week.

Hayashi & Co., of Elmhurst, have just finished installing a fifty horse-power boiler, to heat their range of glass recently erected.

F. A. Miller, one of San Francisco's pioneer florists, is now located at Fruitvale, Cal. Mr. Miller will make a specialty of collecting native California tree seeds. G.

RESEEDING LAWN.

We have a large lawn located on a hillside, which dried out in spots last summer on account of dryness and which is now covered with a thick growth of vines and weeds. Should it be plowed under or spaded? What is the best lawn seed to use for it? Would one-half white clover and one-half lawn seed make a good lawn and would spring be a good time to do it in? Are wood ashes a good lawn fertilizer? F. W. H.

The early part of September would have been an excellent time to spade or plow over the bare spots spoken of. Unless they are of a considerable size, spading will probably be the neatest method to adopt. Clean off the weeds thoroughly, or bury them deeply. It will be of little use sowing seed now. Better wait until frost leaves the ground early in April. Some thoroughly decayed old manure can be advantageously worked into the soil which is to be seeded. Fall is to be preferred to spring for lawn seeding, as often severe droughts come early in summer and grasses started in fall are better able to withstand them.

White clover is an excellent drought resister, but you must not use as large a proportion as one-half, or you will smother out all your grasses. As your land is probably rather high and dry, I would use Kentucky blue grass freely. Let it form one-half of your seed. Some short bottom grasses, like Rhode Island bent and sheep's fescue, should be used, but small quantities only of timothy and red top, which succeed better in moist soil. I would recommend this mixture for an acre: Twenty pounds of Kentucky blue grass, four pounds of sheep's fescue, six pounds of Rhode Island bent, three pounds of red top (fancy seed), three pounds of timothy, two pounds of white clover and two pounds of creeping fescue.

Wood ashes are a good but not complete lawn fertilizer. Use some fine bone with them. It is a good plan to change the class of fertilizer each year on lawns. One year bone and ashes, then sheep or well decayed cow manure and a third year some special lawn preparation of a high grade character. C. W.

PRICE OF OLD GREENHOUSE.

I have a chance to buy a greenhouse containing about 4,000 square feet of glass, but would have to move it. What would be cosidered a reasonable price for it? Everything is in good shape at present. The glass is about 14x18, laid fourteen inches between the sashbars.

G. W. F.

The value of the greenhouse will depend largely upon the material and character of its construction, the date of its erection and the care it has received. If fairly up-to-date and in good condition it would be safe to allow, for the house proper, what the same amount of new glass would cost (after allowing ten per cent for breakage), reckoning that the value of the sashbars, sashes and other parts that could be used would be enough to pay for tearing the house down.

The boiler, piping, ventilating machinery and other iron work, if in good condition, could be taken at one-half its first cost.

AUBURN, N. Y.—Dobbs & Son say that stock was not equal to the demand for Thanksgiving.

SAVANNAH, GA.—Improvements costing about $10,000 have been completed at the greenhouses of John Wolf, on Anderson street. His increased business made necessary the addition of four houses, each 27x150.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business was a pleasant surprise to the Dayton florists. From the general viewpoint, things looked rather discouraging the first of last week, but as the week wore on and Thanksgiving drew nearer trade commenced to boom and stock disappeared. Customers seemed to wait until the last minute before making their purchases in the way of cut flowers. So, after all, Thanksgiving trade this season was the best it has been in years. Besides the regular Thanksgiving orders, there was quite a demand for funeral work and also flowers for Thanksgiving weddings.

The chrysanthemum season is nearing its close. Many of the growers practically cut the last ones for Thanksgiving, while among the few that still hang on there seems to be but little choice. Roses and carnations are quite abundant now, including plenty of first-class stock.

The old proverb, "All's well that ends well," may be practically applied to the condition of trade which prevailed throughout the month of November. Up to the last ten days business was spasmodic, some days being good, while the next would be just the reverse, but Thanksgiving brought with it an exceptionally good trade, making the month of November a good month after all.

Not a word of complaint can be offered regarding the weather throughout the month of November, for it has been ideal. Fine, bright weather has prevailed and its effect on crops has been wonderful. It is feared, however, by some of the florists that these bright days will bring their Christmas Beauty crop in a little too early.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE first Hollander of the season, selling the 1910 bulb crop, has been reported from Sedalia, Mo.

AT Philadelphia it is said that the bean situation is the occasion of as much concern as the shortage of peas.

WITH the catalogues going to press, the fact that many European seeds will not arrive before late January begins to assume importance.

THE canners' publicity campaign appears to have consisted of a page advertisement in the November magazines; there is nothing doing in the December issues.

C. P. BRASLAN has donated a quantity of sweet pea seed to the chamber of commerce at San Jose, Cal., for the purposes of the floral festival to be held there next spring.

THE government seed shop has its catalogue out—in the shape of local notices that congressmen will be glad to hear from those who want a New Year's remembrance.

THE eastern seed houses have now got pretty well cleaned up on Dutch bulbs, and orders are still coming in. The boat from Holland last week landed nearly 100 cases, shipped on reorders.

A. H. GOODWIN, vice-president of The W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, will sail on the Cunarder Saxonia from New York December 4, to join Mrs. Goodwin in Italy and spend the winter months in the Riviera.

THE market for bouquet green at Chicago this week is around $7 to $8 per case. The supply is undeniably light and it is said that one house holds the larger part of the quantity now available. When green gets above a certain figure the demand is curtailed and small lots aggregating considerable quantities are drawn to market, so the situation is one that is full of interest.

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $51,623; peas, $3,101, and beans, $2,472.

FREE SEEDS ARE PURE SEEDS.

In his annual report, made public December 1, Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson has the following to say of free seeds and pure seeds:

"The distribution of seeds and plants on congressional order was continued during the past year along the same general lines as previously. Owing to the higher price of vegetable seeds, the quotas assigned to each member of congress were slightly smaller than in former years. The packeting, assembling and mailing of the vegetable and flower seeds were carried out satisfactorily under contract, as formerly. Particular attention has been devoted to the development of improved methods of cleaning the seed obtained for congressional distribution, and its quality has been greatly improved thereby.

"Another line of work connected with the seed distribution which should be mentioned is the effort to bring about the home production of Dutch bulbs in sufficient quantity to build up a new industry. There are sections of the Pacific coast region which seem well suited to the production of these bulbs, and experiments are under way to determine whether their cultivation can be carried out on a successful commercial basis.

"The seed-testing laboratories of the department have continued their efforts in the interest of pure seed for the farmer. Three branch laboratories are now in operation, in coöperation with the experiment stations of Nebraska, Missouri and Oregon. At these laboratories, as well as at the main laboratory in Washington, many hundreds of samples of seed submitted by farmers and seedsmen are being tested for the presence of adulterants, as well as for purity and germination, and the results of these tests reported.

"In accordance with the authority granted by congress, samples of seed of forage crops have been collected and examined, purchases being made of those showing signs of adulteration. This work has been conducted along lines followed in the past, the names of firms whose seeds are found to be adulterated being published. It is very gratifying to state that the practice of seed adulteration has in this manner been practically stopped, save in the cases of orchard grass and Kentucky bluegrass, and quite materially reduced even in these cases.

"An educational movement for the purpose of encouraging greater interest in good seed has been carried on by means of lectures and lantern-slide demonstrations at farmers' institutes, several weeks having been spent in this work. During the past year opportunities have been afforded persons interested in pure seed work to study seeds and approved methods of seed testing in the main laboratory at Washington. Representatives from several prominent seed houses preparing to do their own seed testing were among the number, and as a result several have purchased apparatus preparatory to fitting up laboratories in their own establishments. Hundreds of authentic samples of common weed and economic seeds, put up in vials labeled with their common and scientific names and packed in herbarium trays, have been distributed, to be used for reference, thus enabling individuals to become familiar with the more common economic seeds and their impurities.

"The results of the year's work in testing some 1,200 so-called distinct varieties of vegetables have shown that in a great many cases seedsmen send out under varying varietal names stocks whose only difference is the degree to which they are uniformly of the same varietal character, and that the use of different varietal names to distinguish what are in reality simply different grades or strains of the same sort is a very common practice of even our best and most reliable seed firms."

PAPER WHITES FOR CHRISTMAS.

What time should Paper White narcissi be brought into the greenhouse to have them in bloom for Christmas?

J. W. S.

About three weeks in a temperature of 60 degrees at night will suffice for your Paper Whites. If you have not this heat at command, allow a month. They can easily be held a few days in a cold house. C. W.

NAMES OF HARDY ASTERS.

I am sending you two native hardy asters. Please name them for me. The larger flower has a brown center and grows on a stiffer stalk, three and one-half feet high; the flowers are violet rose in color. The stalk of the smaller flower is slender, grows about three and one-half feet and droops like the white multiflora. H. H. K.

Both plants are of the same species, Aster grandiflorus (Linnæus). Hardy asters vary much in both foliage and color, but the pappus, involucre and the minutely hispid foliage and stalks show in this case one species. C.

Pana, Ill.—R. O. Henderson, of the Pana Greenhouses, will build some additions to his range, on West Third street.

Dunkirk, Ind.—From Leon G. Barbier comes the pleasant announcement that the stork visited his home November 22 and left a fine eight-pound girl.

Forcing Gladiolus

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladiolus are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose.

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $3.25 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosey crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs, 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

Gladiolus, Colvillei and Nanus (type).

Plant some of these among your carnations; they will come in handy at any time.

Peach Blossom. The most beautiful of all the Colvillei type of Gladiolus; the color is a lovely soft pink, on the order of the Killarney rose. $0.90 per 100; $8.75 per 1000.

Blushing Bride. Flowers are large, pure white, with delicate pink spot. Useful for early forcing. $0.75 per 100; $6.00 per 1000.

The Bride (Colvillei alba). This lovely white miniature Gladiolus makes a useful cut flower for early Spring use; will stand forcing. $0.65 per 100; $5.00 per 1000.

Ackermanii. Salmon-orange, with white blotches, edged scarlet; very pretty. $0.75 per 100; $6.50 per 1000.

LILY OF THE VALLEY FOR PROMPT DELIVERY

EXPOSITION GRADE. This is an extra fancy grade of Berlin crowns. There are never enough of them to supply the demand. Out of Mr. Reimschneider's entire growing, he usually has only 50,000 to 75,000 of this grade, which is evidence of the care with which they are selected. In cases of 800 crowns, at $13.00 per case.

PERFECTION GRADE. This is a true Berlin, extra selected, 3-year-old straight, long, clean crown, with long, fibrous roots. Under proper treatment, they force out with tall racemes, bearing the maximum number of large bells, free from decay at the bottom. The foliage is ample but not too abundant. In cases of 1000 pips, at $14.00 per case.

HOLSATIA GRADE. These are suitable for later forcing, or for cold storage purposes, and are highly recommended to seedsmen. Very fine selected 3-year-old Hamburg Pips, very heavy roots, extra strong growth. Will hold over well in cold storage and produce good flowers the following fall. In cases of 2000 pips, at $25.00 per case; per 1000, $13.50.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Cucumbers firm, lettuce dragging and lower in price, mushrooms more plentiful. Cucumbers, 50c to 85c doz.; head lettuce, 35c to $1 per strap of 3 doz.; mushrooms, 30c to 50c lb.; tomatoes, 10c to 20c lb.; mint, 30c to 40c doz. bunches.

SICKLY CUCUMBER PLANTS.

Could you kindly tell us what is the trouble with our cucumber plants, and what treatment to give them to make them grow? They are in a new house, in six inches of new soil on raised benches. The house was not completed until late and the seed was planted November 1, in the benches. The soil is three-quarters pasture soil and one-quarter cow manure. The pile was made in the fall of 1908 and forked over once. The temperature has run from 60 to 65 degrees nights and from 75 to 90 degrees days, according to the brightness.

As to the trouble, after they have been up a little over two weeks, or when they put on the fourth leaf, the edges of the leaves begin to turn as though they had been burned, then turn white and wither. They do not seem to have any life in them. The roots look good and healthy. We do not think that it is the soil, as we have a house of carnations in the same soil and they are doing fine. There has been no sudden drop in temperature and they have been run rather on the dry side. The only way that we can account for their acting so is they were started late and the shortness of the days. We would be very grateful for any information on the subject.

E. L. J.

Of all plants, I know of none more surely ruined by being stunted, checked, or crippled when young, than the cucumber. Your plants are unquestionably worthless, no matter what the cause. You will be wasting time and money to leave them in the benches. Pull them out and start some more at once, or those sick ones will worry you gray-haired before you realize that they will not pay for the fuel used to heat them.

Your soil is excellent for carnations or roses, but for cucumbers you should spread a thick coat of manure on top and spade it under before replanting. It matters little whether it is fresh or rotted, but I prefer fresh, short stable manure. There is little chance of getting too much manure on for cucumbers, and few growers use half enough.

Your temperature varies too much; too cool at night and too hot daytimes. Night temperature should not go below 65 degrees; 68 degrees is ideal, but anywhere between 65 and 70 degrees is good. Day temperature should not go above 85 degrees; 75 to 85 degrees is about right, depending on sunlight. The thermometer must be shaded, to protect it from the sunshine.

Your trouble was not caused by starting the plants at this season. I have started fine crops recently, but they are more difficult to get started now than in the spring.

As to what caused the leaves to wither and burn in this case, I could not say. It may have been caused by too strong fumigating, or by having the tiny plants too wet, so they did not make sufficient roots; or so dry that plenty of roots could not keep them from burning in the strong sunlight.

Here are some important points to follow in starting the new crop:

Plant the seeds in loose soil in seed boxes or flats, cover thinly, water lightly and place a pane of glass over each box; then set them where there is a warm bottom heat from pipes close underneath. When sprouted, in about three days, remove the glass, and as soon as the seed leaves spread out, lift them carefully and put them in pots a little deeper down than they were. Use soft, loose, rich soil and press gently. Place them on a bench in the brightest, warmest place you have. Water them well at time of potting, but do not keep them too wet afterwards. In eighteen to twenty-one days they will be ready to plant in the beds, already prepared. Soak them when planted out, but be careful afterwards to keep it plenty moist, but not too muddy wet. Spray the vines and walks lightly

No Grower of Vegetables under glass can afford to do without the Wittbold system of

Watering

—because with it a boy can do as much as two men can do in a whole day with the hose—and do it better.

The system is equally valuable outdoors, and for many other crops besides vegetables—wherever you need water.

about twice a day to keep the atmosphere moist.

The critical time in the life of a cucumber plant is for five weeks following the day the seed is planted. Then and there is where the success of the crop is hinged, and there is the chance for the grower to exercise his skill.

If you wish to coax this crop along while attempting to start another, you might put on a thin coat of manure for feed and water the beds well occasionally. Run your night temperature up to 70 degrees. Weak manure water would be better than manure as a top-dressing just now. Look out for insects. But I regret I cannot extend encouragement.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THE present season has been one of the best in years because of the long period of uninterrupted planting. The fall season is steadily growing in importance.

DREER'S field of phloxes, beside the railroad tracks at Riverton, N. J., each season makes a call for stock that is heard in nurseries all over the country.

M. J. VAN LEEUWEN, manager of the Continental Nurseries, Franklin, Mass., says the fall trade not only has been excellent, but above expectations. This is the firm which recently registered with the S. A. F. the variegated form of Berberis Thunbergii named Silver Beauty.

WM. WARNER HARPER, of the Andorra Nurseries, Philadelphia, sailed from New York for Cuba on the steamer Havana November 27, and was mistaken for Dr. Cook, the Arctic explorer, who left New York incognito the same day. The nurseryman had to establish his identity in order to escape the interviewers.

THE Inter-Mountain Nursery Co., of Brigham, Utah, has filed amendments to its articles of incorporation, reducing the capital stock from $100,000 to $50,000, and increasing the number of directors from three to five. F. T. Troxell is president and E. M. Tyson is secretary of the company.

NEED FEDERAL INSPECTION.

In his thirteenth annual report as secretary of agriculture, made public December 1, James Wilson says:

"In January, 1909, the authorities of the state of New York informed the Department that the brown-tail moth had been found in that state in shipments of seedlings received from Angers, France. Later it was learned also that the winter nests of this pernicious moth had been found in Ohio, on seedlings imported from the same French locality. By arrangement with the Treasury Department and the principal railroads, the department was then promptly notified of the final destination of all cases of plants received, and was thus enabled to notify state inspectors or other competent persons near the destinations. Notices of nearly 800 shipments, divided among thirty-five states, were thus sent out. In fifteen of these states nests of the brown-tail moth were found. Proper inspection was probably had in all cases, and it is likely that this concerted effort to prevent a new introduction of the brown-tail moth was for the time successful.

"Under our present laws, however, these shipments might easily have been overlooked, and the considerable expenditures which for several years we have been making in the warfare against the brown-tail moth would then have been to no purpose. Moreover, unless additional legislation is secured, we are in constant danger of such introduction of pernicious insects from abroad. We can not depend upon the inspection systems of foreign countries. These may be rigid in one country and lax in another, or in any country there may come a period of laxity during which insect pests destined for this country may escape detection. Neither can we depend upon the law now on the federal statute books which prohibits transportation companies from 'knowingly' bringing into this country, or carrying from state to state, any insect which is 'notoriously injurious.' Although this law also forbids the conveyance of 'notoriously injurious' insects in the mails, it is nevertheless insufficient, and there is, besides, no provision for its enforcement.

"What we need is a federal statute which shall not only forbid the importation or interstate transportation of injurious insects in all stages, with adequate penalties for its violation, but also provide for a thorough system of inspection and quarantine, at ports of entry, for nursery stock and other materials on which such insects may be imported, as well as a sufficient means of control of interstate transportation of such materials. Such an inspection, in conjunction with the admirable systems now in existence in the states, would provide the country with a reasonable degree of protection against additional introductions of insect pests."

EDWARD S. OSBORNE.

Edward S. Osborne, secretary and treasurer of the Charlton Nursery Co., was born in Rochester, N. Y., April 10, 1871. His first experience in the nursery business was at the age of 9 years, when he worked during Easter vacation for Glen Bros., of that city, on the packing yard, running out tags. After that he worked each season, both spring and fall, for the same firm, until he finished public school at the age of 14.

He then went into the office of Chase Bros. Co., in the fall of 1885, and continued there till 1890, when he accepted a position with Smith, Perkins & Co., one of the wholesale grocery firms of the city. After a year and a half in that business, he entered the employ of R. D. Luetchford & Co., nurserymen, and remained there until September, 1898, when he began work for Ellwanger & Barry.

He was connected with the last-mentioned firm till May, 1899, and then he organized the Charlton Nursery Co., at that time a copartnership between J. M. Charlton and himself. In 1902 the company was incorporated under the same name.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Smiles wreathed the countenance of practically every florist, be he grower, wholesaler or retailer, when asked about business last week. For the season of the year Providence never experienced a better trade. It was not alone because of an unusual number of funerals, weddings, receptions and other large affairs; it was the constant and almost general demand for cut flowers for the house that made the week an exceptional one.

There was a good stock of everything on hand, but practically everybody was cleaned out, notwithstanding the drizzling weather that visited this vicinity for several days. Prices held well, without any advance. Mums were in the lead, but roses, carnations and violets came in for generous recognition. A noticeable feature was the call for decorative plants in pots, which is unusual here at this season.

Funeral work has kept everybody hustling. Not that there has been an unusual number of funerals, but the prominence of the persons who have died has caused an extraordinary call for large and expensive pieces. It is safe to say that during the last week the florists have averaged from twenty to a hundred or more designs ranging in prices from $2 to $25 and in some cases higher.

Providence was almost metropolitan last week, for not often are four debutantes so successfully launched on the social sea in a single week. A large reception and dance was given to introduce the debutantes on Thanksgiving eve, and then there were a number of informal dinner parties, while more than fifty weddings added to the festivities of the week. These functions made inordinate demands upon the florists.

Various Notes.

John F. Wood, the well known Westminster street florist, was married in Worcester, Mass., November 18, to Miss Ruth Irene French, of this city.

Joseph Kopelman has had the interior of his store on Washington street painted in white enamel and newly wired and arranged for electric fixtures.

Charles H. Hunt has his new greenhouse on Burnside street nearly completed. He will use it for a palm house this winter.

Charles F. Coon, custodian of Wilcox park, Westerly, who has been seriously ill for more than a month, suffered a relapse last week, but is reported as having rallied and once more on the road to recovery. W. H. M.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT TO CARNATION GROWERS

At the earnest solicitation of a large number of commercial and private growers, the Cottage Gardens Company has decided to disseminate this year the two famous Carnations

two varieties which are well known to all the leading growers of the country. 4 years' test in the New York market has demonstrated their popularity and good staying qualities. For the past 3 years we have been growing from 15,000 to 25,000 of each, during which time they have always commanded the highest market prices, and at no time has the supply been equal to the demand.

On the exhibition table they have taken the highest honors, and we believe it is safe to say these two carnations stand without an equal.

INVITATION

We extend a cordial invitation to all those interested to visit our establishment, where they will have an opportunity to see them growing and compare their good points with other standard varieties grown under the same conditions.

MRS. C. W. WARD

MRS. C. W. WARD is a perfectly formed flower with full center; color, deep pink, several shades lighter than Lawson, deeper than Winsor; having strong, erect stems 24 to 36 inches in length. A vigorous, healthy grower and has never shown disease of any kind.

A very early and free bloomer, producing fine flowers as early as September 1st, which bring from 25 to 50 per cent more than any other variety on the market.

The keeping qualities of this variety are remarkable. Several shipments of blooms sent to Europe reached their destinations in perfect condition, and wherever exhibited it has always been the last to show signs of wilting.

ALMA WARD

This beautiful Carnation is pure white except during dark weather, when it shows delicate splashings of pink similar to the Cattleya Orchid, increasing its popularity.

ALMA WARD is the largest and most fragrant Carnation ever grown, producing perfect flowers, 3½ to 4½ inches in diameter, on strong, erect stems 36 to 42 inches in length.

This most remarkable variety takes the same place among Carnations as the American Beauty Rose among Roses, and has, during the past 4 years, been awarded numerous prizes, including the following:

DENVER.

The Market.

The extra demand for flowers for Thanksgiving day increased the sales of a good many of the florists from ten to twenty-five per cent. The shipping demand was also increased, giving an activity to the business which has not been equaled for a good many weeks. The supply was not equal to the demand, as the growers were not cutting as much as usual just at the time when the stock was most wanted.

Chrysanthemums had been pretty well cut out for many days before the holiday; in fact, no yellow mums were to be had on the day they were most called for. Carnations were also scarce and prices advanced about one-third; even then not enough could be had. All kinds of roses were scarce, pink ones particularly so, as well as Beauties. Richmond also has come to the front as a favorite, but was not plentiful enough to supply the demand on that day. Violets were particularly shy, the price going up accordingly. Taking it all in all, the trade was good and the market was practically cleaned up.

Stevia and Paper Whites are now arriving in sufficient quantities to help out materially.

Various Notes.

The charity ball on Tuesday evening of last week was practically the beginning of the social season, and many flowers were used, both for the ball and the preceding dinners. The decorations at El Jebel Temple were done this year, as also for several years, by the Park Floral Co., B. E. Gillis doing the work in his usual artistic manner.

The next meeting of the Colorado Florists' Club will be held on Thursday evening, December 9, at T. M. A. hall.

E. S. K.

DAVENPORT, IA.

Emil Boehm, park superintendent, entertained the Tri-City Florists' Association on the evening of November 18. The discussion was on "Christmas Baskets." Messrs. Anderson and Ewoldt had a display of carnation blooms, which John T. Temple, one of the judges of the Chicago and St. Louis displays, pronounced as fine as any exhibited at those shows. The club will hold a chrysanthemum show in January. Mr. Boehm furnished a fine luncheon.

ADMIRATION

This carnation we offer to the trade as being one of the finest Carnations of any color that we know of up to date. Being a beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Winona, having that beautiful satin finish, always showing up well either in natural or artificial light. Plants benched in August are now coming into full crop, carrying from 10 to 20 buds. We have been cutting since September 10th. As a money maker you will find no equal.

The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, excellent form well built up in the center, with the petals so arranged as to make it stand the general requirements of a good fancy commercial variety. A grand keeper and shipper.

The habit is ideal, upright with no surplus grass and every shoot going into flower. Its freedom and earliness make it nearly the ideal carnation. The calyx is very tough and seldom bursts. Can be handled with great success either from the field or grown inside all summer. No one has to be an expert to handle this variety. It scored 86 points at the American Carnation Society meeting at Indianapolis, January 27 to 28, 1909.

Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.
250 at 1000 rate.

Sangamo

Brilliant, glistening pink. Winner wherever shown: Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee. The greatest bloomer and fastest grower of any. Flowers perfect, stems long and stiff.

Why You Should Grow SANGAMO

1st.—It will give you more blooms in a season than any other variety. The fastest grower we have ever seen. 2nd.—It is the best color of anything in this class, Winsor, Rose-pink Enchantress or any other. 3rd—The blooms are well formed nicely rounded out in the center, and do not fade. 4th.—The flower stands well above the calyx, making it impossible to split. 5th.—It comes early with long stems that are always stiff, holding the flower gracefully. 6th The entire stock is clean and healthy. The cuttings root easily and the plants lift from the field and establish themselves without a set-back. 7th.—Not only an exhibition variety, but the best bread and butter Carnation for any florist to grow. Let us pay your coal bill for you.

Rooted cuttings guaranteed. January delivery, 100, $12; 1000, $100.

Miami Queen

In dissemination of this new carnation, the introducer feels confident it excels all similar varieties in the following respects:

It has a strong constitution and will thrive with ordinary culture.

The color is a grand cerise pink and very double, shows up fine under artificial light.

The blooming qualities are of the best, commencing in early Fall and continuing throughout the season

During the dark days of Winter, this carnation, having a strong calyx, does not split to any extent, like other pinks.

The form is ideal, the flower being from 3 inches to 4 inches; the plant compact, with no surplus grass: the stem is long and graceful; keeping qualities are excellent; a good shipper; and we fell confident that this is one of the best commercial carnations sent out in years; we have given it five years' trial, and it is better this year than ever.

We are booking orders for January, 1910, delivery, at $10.00 per 100; $85.00 per 1000. Orders filled in strict rotation. For sale by

DETROIT.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business caught the Detroit retailers napping. We experienced a small Christmas rush, with no one prepared, consequently most of the stores were completely cleaned out. In former years the demand for violets was not near that of this year. The weather on Thanksgiving day and for several days previous was fine, it being much like the beautiful days in spring. Chrysanthemums are thinning out; the smaller varieties, which were so popular, are about done for. This market will afford mums until about Christmas, but only a few kinds will be available.

The stock and quality of roses is all that can be desired. The only thing lacking, when compared with some of the Chicago stock, is length of stems, not but that they are long enough for all ordinary purposes, but Killarney and Richmond, on stems as long as Beauties, we do not often see. Carnations are well equal to the demand now, with those of the Lawson shade almost too plentiful. Much green is being used for decorating and in bouquet work.

Various Notes.

Prof. L. R. Taft, of the Michigan Agricultural College, spent several days in Detroit recently in the interest of the U. S. government. He was inspecting azaleas, lilacs and other imported stock for signs of the brown tail moth, which has even the San Jose scale backed off the board, when it comes to doing damage.

Theo. Damerow has been doing well all fall, but now comes his harvest. He still has untouched about 15,000 Jerome Jones mums, which will bring good prices.

Michael Bloy should be termed the cyclamen and begonia specialist of the Detroit market. Not only does Mr. Bloy grow these plants by the thousand, but he grows as fine plants as were ever seen here. He has at present about 2,500 cyclamen and perhaps half as many Lorraine, all one mass of flowers.

The Simonds Heating & Specialty Co. reports an unusually busy season. Their vacuum system is meeting with great favor among the florists. H. S.

DES MOINES, IA.

The Market.

Business was good last week, with quite a lot of funeral work. All the stores report a good Thanksgiving trade, about twenty-five per cent over last year. Many of the stores could have done more business had they anticipated the large demand, especially on chrysanthemums. Mums are almost a thing of the past, with the growers here, as Thanksgiving used up all the available supply. Carnations and roses are coming in more abundantly now.

Various Notes.

We have two new flower stores that opened last week; one, the Des Moines Floral Co., at Sixth and Locust streets, with a nice store next to the corner; the other, a flower stand opened up by Walter Grosvenor in the Grand department store, and ought to do a good cash business with such a good location.

The Iowa Seed Co. had a handsome window display last week, consisting of a large cornucopia of fruit, vegetables and flowers, which attracted a great deal of attention.

The Iowa corn show opens this week, in our new Coliseum building, just finished, and from all indications will be a great show. J. S. Wilson Floral Co. and the Iowa Seed Co. will make displays, as will also the M. J. Wragg Nursery Co. BOOSTER.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

All the florists report a satisfactory Thanksgiving trade. Violets and mums were the leaders on the market.

Although these bright, warm days are bringing out the stock fast, there seems to be ready sale for most of it.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Winterich, of Defiance, spent Sunday in the city.

Mr. Bieberich, of Huntington, was in the city last week, and said that the firm, Bieberich & Diffendorfer, had just opened their new store.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey decorated the new Masonic cathedral for the dedication, also the Lutheran and Hope hospitals for the graduation exercises.

Select Ferns For Fine Store Trade

We offer a grand lot of exceptionally well-grown plants of the different varieties of NEPHROLEPIS, which will be found one of the best selling and most profitable plants that florists can handle.

Our stock is in unusually fine shape, and we will guarantee it will please the most exacting, as it is exceptionally good value at the prices quoted.

IMPROVED ELEGANTISSIMA. The finest of all this type. It was introduced by us in 1905. This form of Elegantissima has been greately improved, and shows no tendency to revert to the Boston, making it the most valuable fern of this type. Strong plants, 4-inch pots, $3.00 per dozen; 6-inch, $6.00 to $9.00 per dozen, according to size; 8-inch, $12.00 to $18.00 per dozen, according to size.

SUPERBISSIMA. Introduced by us in 1908. A very unique and distinct novelty. Its distinguishing characteristics are its dark green foliage and dense growth. Fronds are very heavily imbricated, making them very dense and compact. Strong plants, 4-inch pots, $3.00 per dozen; 6-inch, $6.00 to $9.00 per dozen, according to size; 8-inch, $12.00 to $18.00 per dozen, according to size.

BOSTONIENSIS, PIERSONI, WHITMANI, SCOTTII. Extra fine plants, 6-inch pots, $6.00 per dozen; 8-inch pans, $12.00 per dozen.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was quite satisfactory and stock of all kinds averaged better than in former years. Chrysanthemums, carnations and roses were in heavy demand, with a good supply. All of the retail stores report an increase over last year, and they ascribe it to the fine weather.

Shipping business has been good and local trade is picking up all along the line. Several large weddings and receptions, with quite a lot of funeral work, kept the retailers busy, but as flowers of all kinds have been plentiful they had no trouble in securing desirable stock.

Thanksgiving finished up the chrysanthemum season. Callas and Harrisii lilies are coming in regularly now and find a ready sale. Violets are in good demand. Of lily of the valley there is hardly enough to go around.

Various Notes.

Standholders at the Sixth street flower market report a good business.

The Walnut Hill Floral Bazaar had a highly creditable show window decoration last week. About 500 choice blooms of chrysanthemums were staged, with a front row of Gloire de Lorraine. On both sides of the big window were handsome baskets of orchids and roses, with ribbon used to good advantage.

William Murphy's commission house is handling a new red seedling carnation from C. C. Murphy's place. The flower is large and bold. The color is not quite so bright as Beacon, but judging from the cut that is coming in, it must surely be a bread-winner. The store men call for it, claiming it to be the best keeper among the reds.

William Dilger, superintendent of parks, Detroit, Mich., was a caller last week.

A. H. Horning has returned home after spending a week with the old folks at Toledo, O., where he attended his sister's wedding.

Albert McCullough spent a month down in Florida and came back with a large sack of wild ducks. H. Schwarz.

Prepare for the Holidays

A View of one of Godfrey Aschmann's Gloire de Lorraine Houses, taken Nov. 18, 1909.

Have Lorraines to Beat the Band. Enough for All

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Have a whole house full of them in 6 in. sizes, in first-class condition, ready to bloom now and for the holidays. Our experiments in the past in raising and cultivating this early Christmas plant put us in the foreground and now we will be able to deliver them in a much improved condition, with flowers much brighter in color and hardier, standing shipping well. Everybody seeing them, even enemies, must admire them. They are cracker-jacks; 7-in. pots, $1.25 to $1.50; 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00. The 75c and $1.00 sizes are almost as big as 8-in.; 3-in. pots, 12c to 15c.

Made-up Plants, 8-in. pans, with 3 3-in. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in center, edged with Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, or assorted dish ferns, very attractive. Sell on sight, 60c per pan.

Begonia Flambeau, 4-in., 15c; 5¼-in., 20c.

Begonias. New improved Erfordii and Gracilis, 5¼-in., $2.50 per doz.

TESTIMONY FROM MICHELL.

I personally visited Mr. Aschmann's greenhouses September 21, 1909, and found that the Araucarias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Boston, Whitmani, Scottii, Amerpohlii, Todeaoides ferns, Rubber Plants, Kentias and Arecas are indeed A No. 1. Have never seen any better plants. The Gloire de Lorraine begonias in 6-in. pots are a perfect wonder, bushy and clean. Have never seen his greenhouses filled with plants as good as they are now.

Christmas Azalea Indica

in bloom for Christmas, in fine condition, already forced for Christmas Trade. All now showing color, with open flowers and are placed in cold houses ready for shipment.

Remember for Christmas forcing we have to select the finest, strongest and healthiest plants. Weak, delinquent plants will not force successfully for Christmas. We have the following varieties for Xmas: Mme. Petrick, the best, new, earliest, double-pink variety in existence—never fails to bloom—very scarce and hard to get in Europe; Deutsche Perle (double white) and Vervaeneana (double rose variegated), a well known standard variety; John Llewelyn, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

In Easter varieties, in larger sizes, we have Bernard Andre alba (white), Niobe (white), Helene Thelemann (rose), Empress of India, Apollo (red), De Schryveriana (double variegated), Dr. Moore (pink), Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Louise Van Houtte (double large red), Simon Mardner, Vervaeneana, $1.25, $1.50 $2.00, to $2.50 each. In smaller sizes we have Simon Mardner, Van der Cruyssen, Niobe, Empress of India, Deutsche Perle, Vervaeneana, De Schryveriana, 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25.

Ferns. Nephrolepis Todeaoides and Boston, 5, 5½ and 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c, 50c Whitmani, 7-in., as big as a wash-tub, 75c to $1.00. Boston, Scottii and Todeaoides, 7-in., 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each; as big as a washtub.

Ferns, Scottii, 6-in., 50c to 60c; 7-in., 75c; 7-in., as big as a bushel basket, $1.00.

Ferns, Wilsoni, bushy, 3 ferns in a 6-in. pan, 25c and 35c per pan.

Ferns, Wimsetti and Victoriae (silver leaf fern), 3 plants in a 6-in. pan, very attractive, 30c per pan.

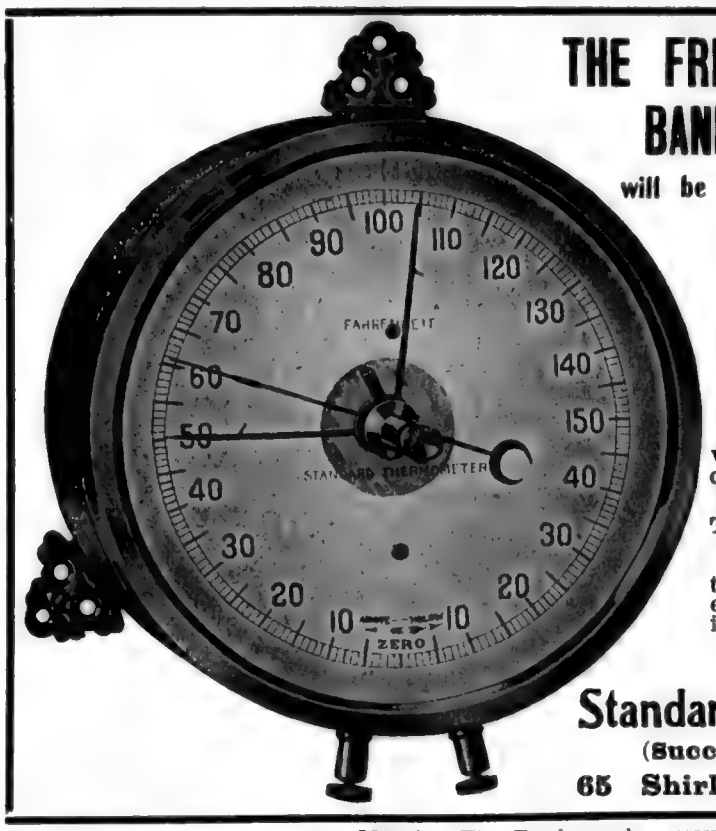
READING, PA.—C. W. Beears, formerly of 235 North Ninth street, has opened a new store at 206 North Ninth street.

PRINCETON, IND.—W. J. Ritterskamp has transferred land and buildings valued at $7,500, located on the north side of the city, to the Princeton Gardens, the concern whose reorganization and incorporation was recently announced in the REVIEW. The incorporators are William J. Ritterskamp, Mrs. Louis A. Ritterskamp and James T. Hannan, who also constitute the board of directors for the first year. Mr. Hannan has been employed as florist at the gardens for a number of years and is an expert in his line of work.

IN THE SOUTH.

New Orleans appears to be a splendid field for growing orchids, said Charles Eble in his report as vice-president for Louisiana for the S. A. F. One of our enterprising growers here has a fine stock, and his mode of growing seems to be very simple. Houses are arranged for movable sash, which are taken off in summer and replaced by laths. Some varieties are planted in beds of broken granite; and I am informed that imported plants can be established in half the time required elsewhere, and blooms can be produced much cheaper. He expects to have thousands to cut this winter and spring, and I feel that this will become a paying proposition.

Cocos plumosa is being extensively grown by many florists now for decorative use, and they make character leaf in two years. I noticed several large ones here in open ground that were planted some eight years ago, and have become hardy. Phoenix Roebelenii is a great palm for our section, and easily grown in open ground, and I believe they will stand our winter with others. Fine specimens can be grown out of doors within two seasons, and as a decorative tub palm it is unexcelled.



Much uphill work is experienced by our retail florists, from the fact that there are no wholesale establishments here, and often an unnecessary supply has to be kept in stock. Another disadvantage is that private gardens in season are in full bloom, with fairly good flowers. At Easter time, which is our spring season when outdoor stock is in full bloom, I have seen fine blooming azaleas, spiræas, roses and hydrangeas sold for less than cost of forcing.

Our best season is usually from November 1 to end of April, with graduations and weddings in June.

Considering all the trying conditions in this section, I can say that all experienced and energetic florists, seedsmen, nurserymen and truckmen of our city and state, who have their business at heart, have made wonderful advancement in the past year, and I can report trade twenty-five per cent better this year.

BUDDLEIA VARIABILIS.

The old Buddleia variabilis of gardens was at one time considered to be a decorative plant of exceptional merit, but since Messrs. Veitch, through the agency of their collector, E. H. Wilson, succeeded in introducing several improved forms, it is looked on as little better than a weed. The variety Veitchianus is a remarkable plant, producing inflorescences a couple of feet long of rosy-lilac flowers, but magnifica is even better than that, for the flowers are richer in color, and, if anything, the inflorescences are larger. It also has the advantage of flowering a fortnight later. In August, four years ago, the floral committee of the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain thought so highly of it that it was unanimously awarded a first-class certificate. A writer in the Gardeners' Magazine says that to obtain the most satisfactory results from this and other forms of B. variabilis, rich loamy soil should be provided, and the plants be cut hard back each spring, so that young, strong shoots are obtained each year. An annual top-dressing of rich manure is also helpful. It is a mistake to keep the same plants for many years, as the best results are obtained from moderately young specimens.

Greenhouse Heating.

HEAT FROM HOT SPRING.

I should like to have a question answered in your valuable columns, and that is this: Is natural hot water suitable for heating greenhouses? Here, in south-central Oregon, we have springs of boiling hot mineral water. The water is sulphurous and contains some lime. What would be the best way of getting the water to flow through the pipes? The flow is enough to fill about a 3-inch or 4-inch pipe under pressure. B. B.

There is no reason why boiling hot water from springs cannot be used for heating greenhouses. If the water can be made to rise four or five feet above the surface, or if the house can be located that distance below the level of the spring, it will only be necessary to arrange a system of continuous pipes through which the water can flow. If this cannot be secured, it will be found cheaper to elevate the water, by means of a small gasoline pump, than to purchase fuel for heating the water. A fairly rapid flow may be necessary, to prevent the mineral matter from depositing in the pipes.

OIL FOR FUEL.

Will you please tell me at what price fuel oil would have to be bought in order to use it with economy, when lump coal can be bought at $3.40 per ton, in the bin? Of what is the so-called fuel oil composed — I mean the kind lately inquired about in the Review? I want to use some in a hot water boiler, and heat the house to a temperature of 50 degrees in zero weather. The boiler is of the horizontal type. Where can I procure a burner for it? I am located in Iowa.

G. W. F.

The term "fuel oil" is generally applied to crude petroleum. This, of course, varies considerably in its composition and fuel value, but 100 gallons of oil will generally give as much heat as one ton of lump coal. There are very few sections, outside of the oil belt, where oil will be found as cheap as soft coal, al-

HEAT FOR A FERN HOUSE.

We have a carnation house 21x100, heated by hot water. We wish to change it to a fern house, after puttying and lapping the glass. It is heated by two 4-inch flows and ten 1½-inch returns, five on each side. There is a board wall four feet high on each side. The height from the ground to the ridge pole is ten and one-half feet. We are now just able to keep the temperature at 60 degrees with the ventilators closed. What additional piping will be required for zero weather? We are located in Utah.

F. E. W.

The piping described should be sufficient to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in zero weather. If 65 degrees is desired, it will be well to add four or five 2-inch pipes. If 60 degrees will answer, the addition of three 2-inch pipes will prove sufficient.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I have several greenhouses, measuring seven feet to the gutter and comprising a total of 77,240 cubic feet of space, from floor to ridge. I am heating this with one horizontal tubular boiler, fourteen feet by forty-eight inches, and containing twenty-seven 4-inch flues. The grate surface is 4x4 feet. There is a good brick stack, with splendid draft. I aim to carry ten pounds or less.

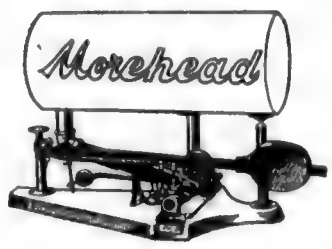
I have added to my range two new houses that contain 62,200 cubic feet of space. These are built with concrete side walls and will be as tight as putty, glass and brains can make them. The total exposed glass surface of the whole range, including the ends, one side and the roof, will be about 18,000 square feet. Can I safely heat this to an average of 56 degrees with the one boiler, in this Missouri climate?

W. J. B.

From the dimensions given, the boiler can be safely rated at forty to forty-two horse-power. At the outside figure, 2,800 to 3,000 feet of radiation would be required. There should be no difficulty, therefore, in heating the houses in question, so far as the size of the boiler is concerned.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.



Business last week was good, with the supply of flowers none too plentiful. Carnations are rather scarce just now; they are retailing at 75 cents per dozen. Roses sell at $1.50 and $2 per dozen, retail. Mums are still in the market; $1.50 and $2 per dozen, retail, are the prices. Violets sell at $1.50 per hundred blooms. Paper Whites are now to be seen; these retail at 50 cents per dozen. A few Roman hyacinths are also coming in.

Everyone reports a fair Thanksgiving trade. Flowers were in good demand. A rain storm, coming a day or two before Thanksgiving day, gave trade a little setback.

Various Notes.

E. H. Chamberlain had a good trade on Thanksgiving day. He reports a good demand for flowers on Friday, the day after, when the annual social hop of the season was held among the four hundred. Roses and violets were in good demand. Mr. Chamberlain put out about 3,200 violet blooms. He is showing some nice white Bonnaffon mums.

R. H. Woodhouse has a grand show for Christmas, in begonias, cyclamen and other flowering plants. His place is in fine shape.

Wm. P. Peirce is cutting some nice mums at his Elm street place.

Wm. H. Davenport is having a special sale of cocos palms and small Whitmani ferns, the former at 25 cents each and the latter at 10 cents each. W. L.

CURRENT JOTTINGS.

J. W. Adams & Co., of Springfield, Mass., find the sale of the Wizard brand of sheep manure so large that they have built a cement storage-shed, especially to enable them to handle it by the carload. They have also added to the greenhouse plant.

L. D. Robinson, Jr., of Springfield, Mass., has the building fever, and in the near future he may be seen locating on a farm, since that is the cheapest thing just now in the real estate line and he is cramped for room.

Mark Aitken, of Springfield, Mass., will start building immediately after Easter and has plans for 100,000 feet from Lord & Burnham, with possibilities for 1,000,000 feet.

William Schlatter & Son, of Springfield, Mass., are satisfied to remain where they are. They have just finished two Lord & Burnham houses, which complete a square. I noted a batch of Harrisii, from the same case, part of which had been started outside and part under the bench. Those started inside have made a much more satisfactory growth.

Wedding decorations have kept E. W. Clark, of New London, Conn., extra busy of late and have called for the best stock. A few good funeral orders have cleared up surplus blooms. Thanksgiving sales are satisfactory. M.

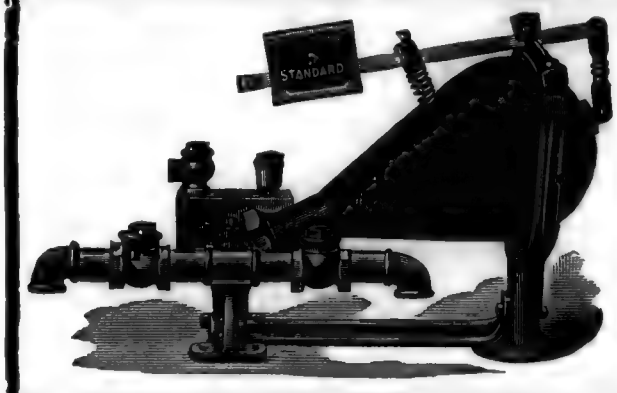
ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Thanksgiving week was a busy one for the florists and we hear nothing but good reports from all over the city. From these reports we can safely say that it was one of the best Thanksgivings the trade has had. There were a number of weddings, small and large, which used up considerable stock of all kinds. The weather was fine and warm. What we need, from now on, is colder weather to stimulate the business.

There will be a large number of debutantes in society this month, who will hold large receptions, and these should keep the store men busy up to Christmas. The supply of stock last week was large and equal to the demand, on almost everything except violets, which have suffered greatly from the warm spell. California violets brought $1 per hundred.

Mums are nearing the end, although quite a few are still coming in. Carnations are now at their height and the blooms are of fine quality, bringing top prices of $4 per hundred. Lily of the valley has a big demand of late, with hardly enough coming in to meet the call. Beauties sold well last week, in all grades, but the medium stems had the best call. Other roses also sold well, with top price at $8 per hundred. Some extra fine Killarney and White Killarney brought $10 per hundred. Smilax and all other greens have a good demand.



Various Notes.

Louis A. Gieger, formerly employed in various local retail stores, has opened up the old stand of the Maryland Floral Co., at Maryland and Euclid avenues.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was extremely satisfying this year, as there was a good supply of stock on the market, and the people bought more extensively of cut flowers and plants than in former years. Chrysanthemums are scarce but American Beauties are a more notable shortage. Violets, double and single, are in fair supply. Roses and carnations are good.

Various Notes.

R. A. Latham had the best Thanksgiving sales ever experienced in former years. Wm. Desmond is now with him, greatly improved in health.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is making a fine showing of 6-inch cyclamen. They have a fine stock of poinsettias in line for Easter, also a large variety of azaleas. M. E. M.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Commenting upon the healthy appearance of a house of Enchantress, John Coombs, of Hartford, Conn., sagely replied, "They cost $1 per plant and should be up to the mark." In other words, the house, 54x200, complete with boilers, cost exactly $10,000 and contains 10,000 plants. It is one of Hitchings' finest structures and, with the splendid location, Mr. Coombs may be pardoned for being proud of the latest addition to his large plant. There are eight benches. I noted a batch of Lilium Harrisii coming in for Christmas, showing but little disease. If other growers are as successful, it looks as though cold storage giganteum will not be so popular for early flowering. No special pains were taken and the stock looks good.

Theo. Standt, of Rockville, Conn., is planning to enlarge his plant to enable him to supply his increasing shipping trade. He is favorably located.

John Mackenzie, superintendent of the William Maxwell estate, of Rockville, is planting extensively, intending to have one of the finest collections of outdoor stock in the state.

Otto Keser, of Portland, Conn., has under way the largest planting contract it has been his fortune to handle for some time. The weather has been favorable and has materially assisted in making this a banner season for outdoor work. He has a fine stock indoors for holiday trade.

William A. Dawson, of Willimantic, Conn., is a firm believer in early planting of carnations inside, especially after the dry season just experienced.

Stephen Quinn, of Brookline, Mass., says that since the auto craze struck this town, with the continued warm weather, the combination has lessened the number of functions requiring flowers. A cold snap is earnestly hoped for by all the craft.

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business, up to a short time before Thanksgiving, was not any too brisk, but for Thanksgiving business took quite a jump and from reports it was the best yet. This, no doubt, can be attributed to the following causes: First, that times are improving, and, second, the results of our recent grand flower show, which already has made its effects felt. The supply, Sunday and Monday previous to Thanksgiving, was limited, due to a good many growers holding on to stock, anticipating heavy returns in due time; but in some cases it was a poor speculation. However, taken all in all, stock cleaned up well by Thursday morning.

Mum receipts were heavy, but they moved well. Roses were plentiful. Beauties and violets were mainly called for, and in carnations the call was for Enchantress and red. There were more white than other colors; thus they did not command the higher price. Colored stock sold from 3 to 4 cents, while the best roses realized 8 cents.

Various Notes.

At the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. they report a satisfactory volume of business for Thanksgiving in the cut flower line, while pot plants sold in limited quantities only.

When the writer called on Wm. Zimmermann, he was busy making a funeral design in the form of a traveling bag. He said that Thanksgiving trade was the best since he had been in business.

Robert Zepnick, who can speak for the south side, said that business was fine, that they had a nice batch of middle-sized pot chrysanthemums and they sold out completely for Thanksgiving, and that means they will grow more another season.

The call at the Wisconsin Floral Co. was mainly for cut mums and violets. They reported that trade is gradually improving. The mild weather of the last few days gave them a good chance to display some stock on the outside of their show window.

C. C. Pollworth returned from his annual hunting trip with a prize buck, and states that he enjoyed the change immensely and as he left on the last evening of the flower show, it was like the calm after the storm.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. had a banner business in Beauties and violets for the Thanksgiving trade.

The regular monthly club meeting takes place December 2, and as officers for the ensuing year are to be elected, it no doubt will be largely attended. The executive committee of the recent flower show will also make its final report.

E. O.

BEATRICE, NEB.—The Dole Floral Co. has moved into its new building on Ella street. The opening of the new place was celebrated with a mum show, which attracted large crowds.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

This week is starting out with a slight shortage of flowers. Chrysanthemums are about cleaned up, and for some reason roses and carnations are not so plentiful.

Thanksgiving was all that was expected of it, as it is usually only a little better than a good Saturday. The retailers report the results as fair. Some ran ahead and others behind last year. All agree, however, in saying that there were more sales, but that the sales were smaller. The wholesale houses make better reports, stating that stock generally cleaned up at fair prices, though prices did not advance on anything. It was what might be called a comfortable Thanksgiving trade, with enough stock to give every one anything that was asked for and not much wasted. From a wholesale standpoint, it was the best for several years.

Among the growers, mums are about done and carnations are beginning to come better. Roses will likely be a short cut for some time, probably until the holidays. Lilies, Paper Whites and mignonette are coming to the front; also sweet peas, which do not seem to be very attractive at this time.

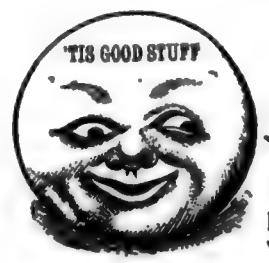
Various Notes.

E. C. Ludwig, of the north side, Pittsburg, reports having had an old-time Thanksgiving business. He says that good, fresh stock and reasonable prices are what are wanted every holiday, and as he does not jump his prices, even though his profits might be less, he keeps his people coming regularly and the balance is always on the right side.

It is not long since autos were considered mostly ornaments for advertising purposes, but now they are an actual necessity for up-to-date florists and several more will be here in a few days, when about all of our retailers will be equipped.

A trolley car struck a wagon belonging to Miss E. B. Maxwell, Wilkinsburg, Pa., and the driver was quite seriously injured. The young man who took his place was also injured the following day by falling out of the wagon.

Mrs. Jacob Elicker, Homestead, Pa., has been confined to bed for several weeks and is still quite ill.



Hoo-Hoo.

Appleton, Wis.—Boelter & Zuehlke, of the Riverside Greenhouses, devoted more space than usual to chrysanthemums this year, on account of the increasing demand for these flowers. The firm had an especially fine and complete display of the mums for Thanksgiving.

Four New Semi-iron Houses Built for Robt. Craig, Norwood, Pa.

What Our Semi-iron House Is

Next to the Iron Frame house it is the best. In truth it practically has an iron frame, for the Posts, Eave Plate, Bar Clasps, Purlins, Columns, Foot Pieces and the Giant Arch are all Iron, and these, as you know, are the important structural parts of a house. High grade iron only and best of expert selected cypress goes into houses. Dollar for dollar value—it's a house that can't be beat.

THE MOST EXASPERATING MOMENT that you had last year was when you opened up your Christmas shipments. The stock was not what you expected; the roses were stale, ice-box stock and the carnations had been left on the plants days too long. You need fresh flowers for Christmas more than at any other time We will have a large quantity of fresh flowers.

We don't ship stale flowers at Christmas or any other time.

We don't charge top prices for second-grade stock.

We don't take orders for a lot of flowers that we cannot deliver.

We Do give better satisfaction at Holiday Time than any other wholesaler and our customers will tell you so.

Send in your orders at once.

BLOOMING PLANTS

For Nebraska, Kansas, Texas and All Points West

The West now requires good stock, but it also produces it.

DENVER IS THE PLACE TO BUY YOUR CHRISTMAS PLANTS

Compare our prices and our express rates with your present source of supply and then do a little figuring. Express rates on plants from Denver are, to Omaha, Hastings, Lincoln, Kansas City and Wichita, $2.80; Oklahoma City and Fort Worth, $3.60; Dallas, $4.00; Galveston, $5.20; Salt Lake, $3.20; Butte, $4.80; Boise, $6.00. Is there a chance for you to save something on this item? We are sure our prices are money savers.

Cyclamen. 4, 5, 6 and 7-inch. 30c, 40c, 60c and $1.25.

The foliage on all of these is grand, mostly variegated. The 4-inch show one or more open flowers and a mass of buds. The larger sizes are nicely in bloom and we are certain no finer lot were ever offered for sale by any one in this country. Pretty strong talk, but we mean just that.

Lorraine Begonias. 4, 5, 6 and 7-inch. 35c, 50, 75c and $1.00.

These are away ahead of the average commercial offerings and are decided bargains at the prices quoted. They are coming nicely into bloom at a temperature of 52 degrees, nights, and that means well hardened stock that will give your customers good service.

Poinsettias. 5 and 6-inch. 50c and 75c.

Foliage good, bracts of medium size and color grand.

Primula Obconica. 4, 5 and 6-inch. 15c, 25c and 40c.

These are just coming into bloom and will be fine for Christmas. The most durable blooming plant you can offer to your customers.

Boston Ferns. 5, 6 and 7-inch. 40c, 60c and $1.00.

Whitmani Ferns. 5 and 6-inch. 50c and 75c.

Ferns are all first-class, pot-grown stock.

In answer to inquiries made after Christmas a year ago we received but one complaint. One Texas man said: "Plants arrived in perfect condition. Azaleas and Cyclamen as fine a lot as I ever received and not bruised in shipping." New Mexico reported: "Stock we received and prices, plus transportation, compared very favorably with shipments from other cities. Large Cyclamen were especially fine. Wish all growers would pack as well." This is from Kansas: "Plants compared favorably with any others we ever bought."

Prices quoted above are for cash with order, unless you have already made definite arrangements with us for credit.

It is not sufficient to name references and ask us to ship immediately, for we want time to investigate. Send cash with your first order and give your references. We can then be ready to decide as to credit when you are ready to order again.

Goods will be shipped C. O. D. if desired when one-half cash is sent with the order.

We have until now relied exclusively upon correspondence to sell our goods and this advertisement is run as an experiment.

It will only appear this once, as we expect it to sell us out clean, so if you want any of these plants you had

Admiration

This Carnation we offer to the trade as being one of the finest Carnations of any color that we know of up to date. Being a beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Winona, having that beautiful satin finish, always showing up well either in natural or artificial light. Plants benched in August are now coming into full crop, carrying from 10 to 20 buds. We have been cutting since September 10. As a money maker you will find no equal. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, excellent form, well built up in the center, with the petals so arranged as to make it stand the general requirements of a good fancy commercial variety. A grand keeper and shipper.

The habit is ideal, upright, with no surplus grass and every shoot going into flower. Its freedom and earliness make it nearly the ideal Carnation. The calyx is very tough and seldom bursts. Can be handled with great success either from the field or grown inside all summer. No one has to be an expert to handle this variety. It scored 86 points at the American Carnation Society meeting at Indianapolis, January 27 to 28, 1909.

Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. 250 at 1000 rate

Send for catalogue of all other new and standard varieties of carnations. We are always pleased to have visitors come and inspect our stock and varieties

COMMON SENSE IN DESIGNING.

A Use for the Loose Style.

Common sense must be used in our making up. We need all the looseness that is necessary to give a careless grace, but none of the looseness that looks like slovenly work. Effective looseness demands not only room, but judicious use of the flowers.

The difference in designs must be respected; we should keep within their general outlines, and although they are artificial, they can be made the setting of the natural gem itself, which is a flower or foliage.

In such pieces as the sickle or the Odd Fellows' three links, one must be satisfied with pleasing effects in color, as the blending of several shades, the contrast of two or three, or the simple dignity of one, and must not hide the meaning of the design by long stemming.

There is room for loose work with small flowers, such as Romans, valley, violets, daisies, etc., in the average small design, as bits of relief in clusters of two or three of odd lengths among roses, carnations and larger blooms, or as a part of the whole piece. Care must be taken, however, to avoid the top-heavy look in standing pieces, caused by filling the upper part with the heavier lilies, mums or roses.

Sprays should be loose, but well made, so as not to fall apart. Often a customer wishes to spend, say, less than $5 and would like a piece. Unless he seems to have a decided preference for the piece, you may without much effort persuade him to have a spray instead. This, ... you have something with fair stems on hand, will give a better show for the money than the piece will, while if you have short stuff only, it would be better to put it into the design.

Misuse of the Loose Style.

It is unfortunate that the so-called loose style has been, and is still, so much used merely to satisfy a demand for large, showy pieces at a low price. Anyone having no real love for the work is constantly keeping down the standard of floral designing. Money should be one among other considerations and not the only thought; then there would be a well established trade among a loyal and increasing number of flower lovers, instead of bitter competition, cut prices and too often insolvency.

If you are not sending attractive work from your place of business, it would pay you to learn the art, or to hire someone that has the ability to make up things that make people ask where they came from. Sometimes it seems as though it would be a good thing to have a school for florists' designing, where the trade could be thoroughly studied, and where natural taste could be guided and developed in those who would take up the profession. There are undoubtedly hundreds of overworked men and women who would be really better off in every way if they would spend most of their time in managing their business, instead of attempting the unhappy combination of managing and making up, when the latter could be better done by an able designer. Then some of the designers might be willing to spend a few weeks at different places for the sake of wider experience and travel, giving others a chance to learn or to take a needed vacation. However, there is a great abundance of good help in our trade discussions. The photographer is another excellent help for the designer.

VIOLET SYLVESTER.

NOVELTIES IN POTTERY.

In the better grade of flower stores there has been a constant development of the business through the use of novelties in pottery and similar articles in conection with cut flowers and plants. In the leading stores this feature has been worked up to the point where a number maintain special, richly appointed rooms for the display of articles of pottery, glassware, brass, baskets, pot covers, window-boxes and similar requisites. Wherever a line of these articles has been attractively shown it has been found that they aided the sale of plants and cut flowers and at the same time afforded the florist a profit equal to his usual margin on the regular stock.

The accompanying illustration serves to give an idea of the character of one of the better grade of novelties and is from a photograph made in the display room at C. A. Samuelson's new store in Chicago. It is Copenhagen ware, which he imported direct. The coloring is exquisite, being in an unusual shade of blue. Each of the shapes is out of the ordinary and combines a figure reproducing a living object. Note the lifelike earnestness with which the dog and child are regarding the pinch-bug on the dish in the center. Uncle Sam exacts a duty of sixty per cent on this class of imported pottery, so that it is of necessity that high prices are asked, but the fact that these pieces sell at from $5 to $15 each does not interfere with their sale when shown to the right people.

A SPOKANE STORE.

Eastern florists, as a rule, do not appreciate the extent to which the business has developed in the far northwest, where rich, metropolitan communities have sprung to life these last few years to call for the best that the art of the florist can provide. As pictures often speak louder than words, the accompanying illustrations will give the untraveled an idea of what is now required in a first-class flower store in the Pacific coast states. This is the new store of the Spokane Florist Co., Spokane, Wash., photographed on the day of its recent opening.

The store is equipped with mirrors on both sides, with a large one in the entrance and in the rear of the window, overhead. On the opening day there were shown a Thanksgiving table, a mantel decoration and a number of specimen designs and basket arrangements, besides vases of fine specimen chrysanthemums, of which the most prominent were Maud Dean, Madonna, Chadwick, Eaton and Golden Wedding. Among the roses most used were Beauties, Kate Moulton and Richmond. The Thanksgiving decoration was done in apples, ears of corn, sprays of wheat, smilax and Eaton mums. Candles and yellow chiffon bows completed the scheme. The mantel decoration was done in the same chrysanthemums, with their long stems in graceful vases. A decorated gilt mirror was especially good. The decoration was a group of three gilded magnolia wreaths hung over one of the upper corners, with a large spray of huckleberry.

Wm. G. Dobbs, proprietor of the business conducted as Dobbs & Son, Auburn, N. Y., stands in the accompanying illustration showing two of the designs recently turned out in his establishment. These designs are of interest as showing the character of work the average florist in a small city is called on to do time after time, though in this case the size of the pieces was greater than usual.

AVERAGE PRICES.

I want to make an average price for standard varieties of carnations and violets to a prospective retail customer for the season. Can you suggest a reasonable figure? J. M.

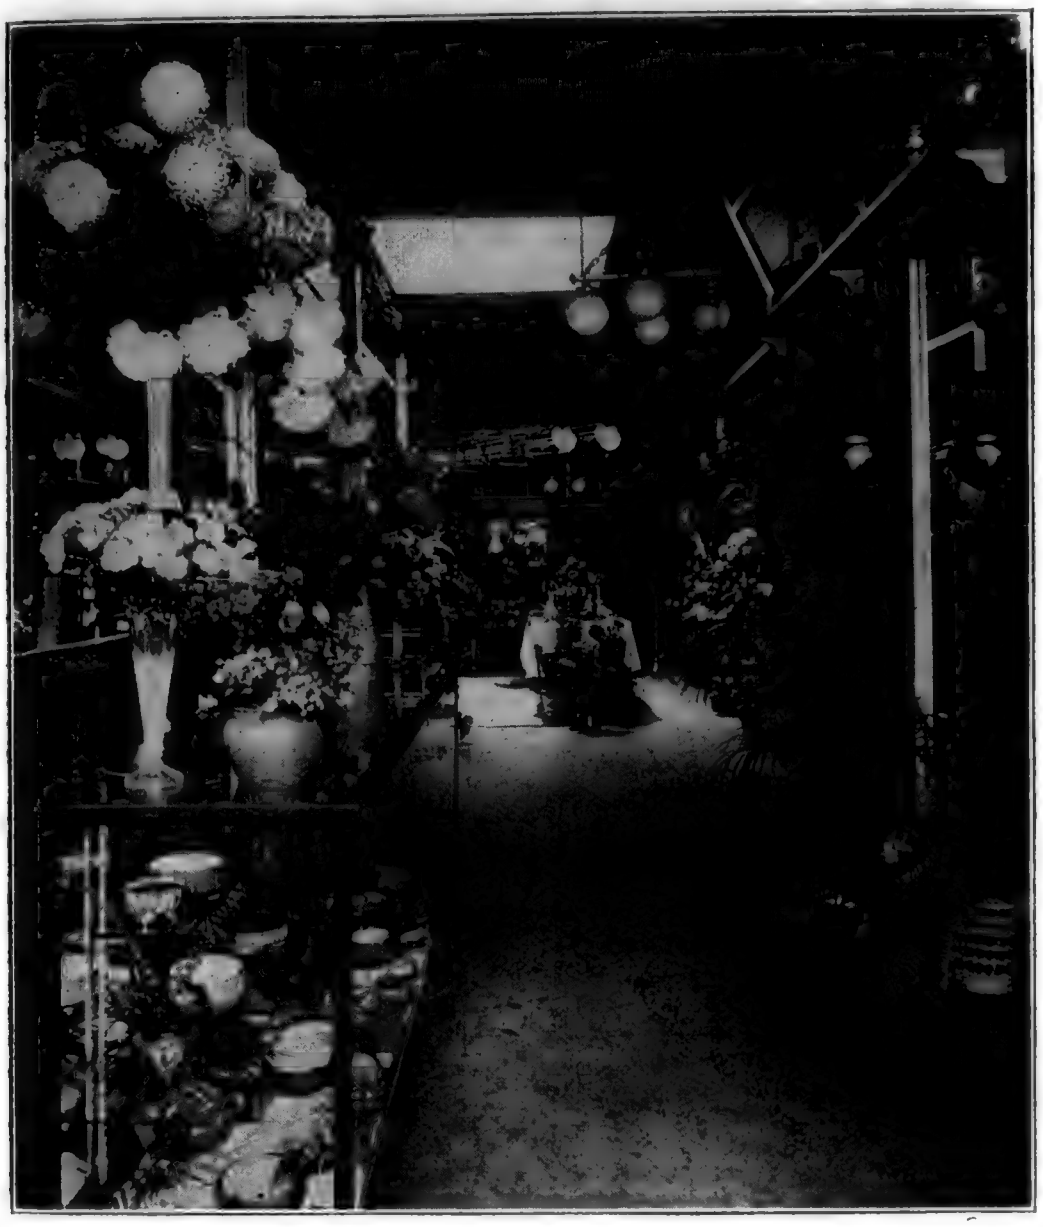
If this question is correctly read, this stock is to be sold at retail. In that case it should not be difficult to set a price for the season. Most retailers maintain fairly uniform prices, regardless of the fluctuations of wholesale prices, so that all one has to do is to name about his usual retail price. He may not make much at holiday time, but he will average up in spring.

If the all-season price is to be established between grower and retailer, that is another matter. In such a case many factors would enter, but the grade of stock would be the chief consideration. Where one grower's carnations might be worth a 4 cent average, another's would not bring half that.

SALE OF COMPOST.

In the Review of November 18, page 12, F. A. Forbes inquires about the selling of compost in small quantities for potting house plants. In reply to his question, I might say that it all depends upon the size of the city and the mode of procuring the ingredients of the compost. Our firm is located in a town of about 10,000 inhabitants and our soil costs nothing except for the hauling. At first we sold it at 15 cents per bushel, later at 20 cents and at present we get 25 cents. This, however, only pays for the trouble of delivering it, but as the people have better results from their plants with our compost than with their own, they are encouraged to buy more plants. Thus the accommodation pays. C. F. C.

SMILAX AND PLUMOSUS.



Will you kindly give me some advice on growing smilax and Asparagus plumosus for sprays? When and how should they be started, and when planted to bed or bench? How much manure should be used at planting time, and how much and how often thereafter? What kind of manure or phosphate is preferable? When and how long should the plants have a rest? When should they be syringed, if at all? Do you shade in summer, and if so, what do you use and when do you put it on? Does smilax grow faster if syringed every few days? Any other information you can give me will be thankfully received. B. J. P.

The solid bed system is the one most used for the culture of both smilax and Asparagus plumosus, but with this difference, namely, that many growers prefer to replant smilax each year, or at most to run it for two seasons and then replant, while Asparagus plumosus may be grown for eight or ten years from the one planting, provided the bed is deep enough and the compost rich enough to bear the strain of production for so long a period.

Smilax is grown from seed sown in January or February, shifted on into 3-inch pots as the young plants need it, and planted out about 8x10 inches apart in the bed in July. A temperature of 60 degrees at night is required to keep the plants in growing condition, and the soil should be composed of four parts of good loam to one part of old cow manure. A depth of six to eight inches of this compost is required in the bed.

Thorough syringing should be given to both smilax and asparagus on every bright day, in order to keep down thrips and red spider, and at times it may be necessary to give a dusting with insect powder in order to destroy caterpillars.

Asparagus plants should be good, strong stock from 4-inch pots at the time of planting, and should be planted in a greater depth of soil than the smilax. Some growers make the beds two feet deep and give a liberal coating of manure in the bottom, over the drainage material, the latter being composed of brickbats, cinders or stone. A similar compost to that suggested for smilax will answer well, and after the plants get well established and are growing strongly, a mulching of an inch or so of manure will be beneficial.

The only rest required for these plants is in the form of less water for a short time after the crop has been cut, the quantity of water to be increased again as the plants push up another growth. Ventilate according to the weather, giving fresh air as frequently and as freely as the temperature will permit.

Shading is required during the summer for both these crops, and a good preparation for the purpose is a mixture of whiting, white lead and kerosene, to be applied with a brush. This preparation stands a good deal of rain, but comes off readily with frost.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

A notable Scottish gardener has passed away in the person of David Thomson, V. M. H. Among the REVIEW'S wide circle of readers there must be many who knew him, and probably some who received part of their early training under his tuition during the period that he acted as head gardener, from 1868 to 1897, to the Duke of Buccleuch at Drumlaurig. Mr. Thomson had been living in retirement since 1897 and died at the age of 86. His only son, D. W. Thomson, is a popular member of the trade in Edinburgh, where he carries on an extensive seed and nursery business. When gardener at Archerfield, East Lothian, prior to going to Drumlaurig, the late David Thomson introduced the now widely known East Lothian stock. For several years he was editor of a Scottish publication entitled The Gardener, and he was the author of several works on gardening. On the occasion of his retirement from Drumlaurig, seventy-six of his old foremen presented him with an illuminated address, enclosed in a silver casket. At various times he was the recipient of the Niell prize, the Veitchian medal and the Victoria medal of honor, and he was generally recognized as a representative gardener of the Victorian era.

On the death of the late William Bull, the business of William Bull & Sons, London, England, was continued by his two sons, William and Edward. Owing to the ill health of the first named, the partnership has been dissolved by mutual consent and the business will now be continued under the same title by Edward Bull.

M. C. Allwood, carnation specialist with Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, has introduced a new carnation support of original and distinctive design.

William King, for the last five years the energetic and popular manager and secretary of the old established firm of James Backhouse & Sons, Ltd., York, who have constructed some of the largest rock gardens in Europe, has accepted an appointment as managing secretary to a syndicate which has purchased the Duff House, estate of the Duke of Fife, Scotland.

The gooseberry disease, Sphærotheca mors-uvæ, has now made its appearance on the gooseberry plantations in the Stettin district of Germany. The disease was first known in Germany in 1905, and was believed to have come from Russia.

HARD WATER FOR FERNS.

I should like to ask if a hard water containing calcium, iron and other minerals would have a tendency to injure the fronds or the growth of ferns.

A. J. H.

Speaking in general terms, soft water, such as rain water, is preferable for fern growing, but the extent of the injury from hard water would depend largely upon the proportion of mineral matter contained therein. A strongly alkaline water is liable to injure both roots and fronds.

MILDEW ON ROSES.

Can you help us out of the problem of mildew on roses? We have had mildew constantly for two months. We paint half the hot water feed pipes with sulphur and water three times a week and we have tried the patent mildew machines, with but little effect. We run the night temperature from 55 to 60 degrees, and the day temperature from 75 to 80 degrees. We syringe on all bright days. The varieties are Bride, Maid, Richmond and Chatenay. J. T.

Mildew at this season should not be seen in a greenhouse, as it is easy to keep it from germinating.

No amount of sulphuring will subdue mildew if conditions are maintained which are favorable to the germination of the spores and their subsequent growth. Keep the temperature at 56 to 58 degrees at night, with air on if possible. Keep the atmosphere as dry as can be done with safety to the plants. The minimum day temperature should be 60 degrees; the maximum, 75 degrees. Mix the sulphur with air-slaked lime in the proportion of one part of lime to two of sulphur. Make it of the consistency of paint and apply twice a week.

In addition, use the Peerless sulphur blower once a week. Select a bright day for this and close the ventilators when applying, allowing the temperature to run up to 90 degrees for a short time. Mildew cannot possibly exist under these conditions. Ribes.

OLD RICHMOND ROSE PLANTS.

Will you please tell us the best method of making old Richmond roses, that have been carried over two or three years, break strong canes from the base? Our Richmonds seem to be growing a lot of small top flowers, and are not breaking as they should. A. G. L.

Had this correspondent given some information regarding the treatment his roses have been receiving, with a statement as to whether they are on table or solid benches, I would be in a better position to advise him.

By bending the old branches to a right angle about six inches above the ground and tying them to keep them in place, the dormant eyes at the base of the stem would be encouraged to break. As soon as these break, give the beds a light mulch of rich material, such as one part cow manure and two parts rich loam, or one part pulverized sheep manure and three parts loam, with a sprinkling of bone added in each case.

Give the beds a thorough soaking. Keep the night temperature at 58 degrees, with the day temperature at a minimum of 65 degrees and a maximum of 75 degrees. Feed with liquid manure once a week after the eyes break.

HILL'S NEW ROSE.

The latest American rose to attract attention in Europe is another of the novelties of the E. G. Hill Co. The name is Panama. This novelty is not claimed to be a forcer, but is lauded as an outdoor variety. Last January plants were sent for trial in the Jardin Bagatelle, Paris, where the variety Rhea Reid made so fine a showing when these trials were instituted. Panama was second in the Bagatelle trials of this year, falling only one point behind the variety Arthur Goodwin, in spite of the late start the plants had. European observers say it will stand high in the list next year, after the plants have become thoroughly established.

GRUBWORMS IN ROSE BENCHES.

Can you give us a remedy for grubworms in rose benches? The worms are about an inch and a half long and an inch in circumference. They work all through the soil, making it very loose, and as a consequence the roses are dropping their foliage. We have tried lime water and other things, but without any good results. T. L. M.

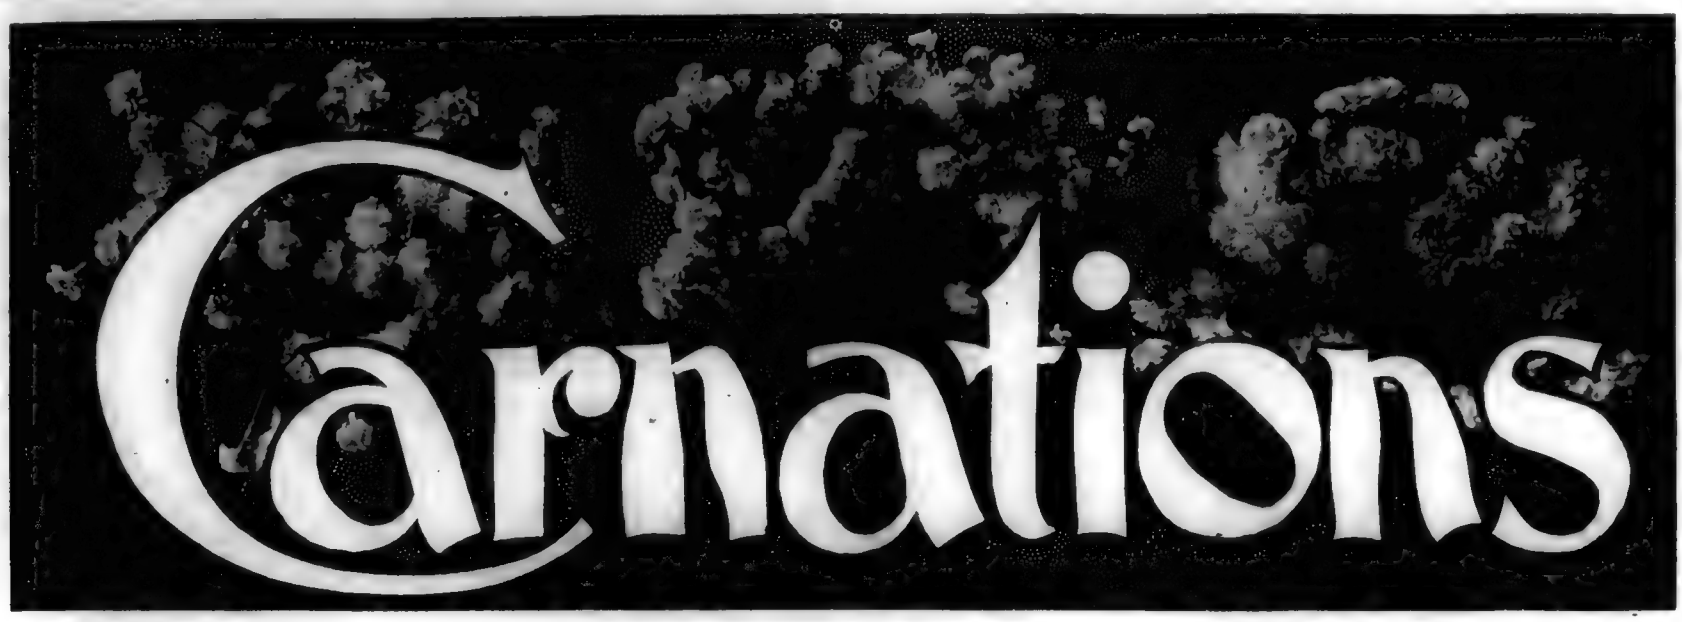
These grubworms are hard to exterminate after they have got into a bench. Sometimes, for want of their natural food, grass roots, they are quite destructive to young rose plants.

The most effectual method of getting rid of them is by digging them up and hand picking. As they are larvæ, they will not increase in numbers and so they can, with patience and perseverance, be finally cleaned out. They can be killed by using the bisulphide of carbon in strong doses, but as this is an explosive, it might result in doing more damage than even the grubs will do. Ribes.

RAMBLERS MAKE POOR GROWTH.

Under separate cover I send you two cuttings from my hardy Crimson Rambler rose bushes. I should like to know the trouble with them, as they have not done well since I planted them out. I have them on the south side of my house, in a sunny place. E. T. O.

Each of the samples received would indicate that your plants are making a feeble growth. The most likely cause for this is poverty of the soil. Ramblers of all kinds make vigorous growth if given good soil to grow in. Another point to remember with ramblers is to entirely cut out each season the wood which has flowered and depend upon the shoots which start from the bottom for the succeeding year's flowering. You do not state whether or not your plants are in grass. If so, they will not grow nearly so satisfactorily as when the soil can be cultivated about them. If the shoots fairly indicate the strength of your plants, I would advise you to start with fresh plants, either now or in early spring, and if you afford them a liberal root run in good soil, they can hardly fail to make strong growths. C. W.



Bolivar, N. Y.—A. C. Rickerson, of Bradford, N. Y., has purchased three acres of land on North Main street and will erect three greenhouses, each 20x100 feet.

Holdrege, Neb.—The Davidson Floral Co. has nearly completed its new greenhouse, 39x100, and is putting in all solid beds of concrete. There was a gain of about thirty per cent in the Thanksgiving business, as compared with a year ago, and the indications are good for the coming year.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Preparation for Propagation.

Severe freezing weather and the holiday rush will soon be upon us, but before their arrival everything should be in readiness to take up the work of propagation soon after the new year. The propagating house should receive a thorough cleaning, especially the bench, which, after the removal of old sand and a faithful washing with broom and hose, will require a generous coat of hot lime wash.

Any needed repairs will now demand immediate attention, that there may be no delay in getting a batch of cuttings under way when they are in proper condition.

The Sand.

We prefer storing the sand in an unheated building or leaving it in a pile outside, protected from storms, until a few days before it is needed, when it is brought in and spread evenly, to a depth of about three inches, over the brick bottom of the propagating bench.

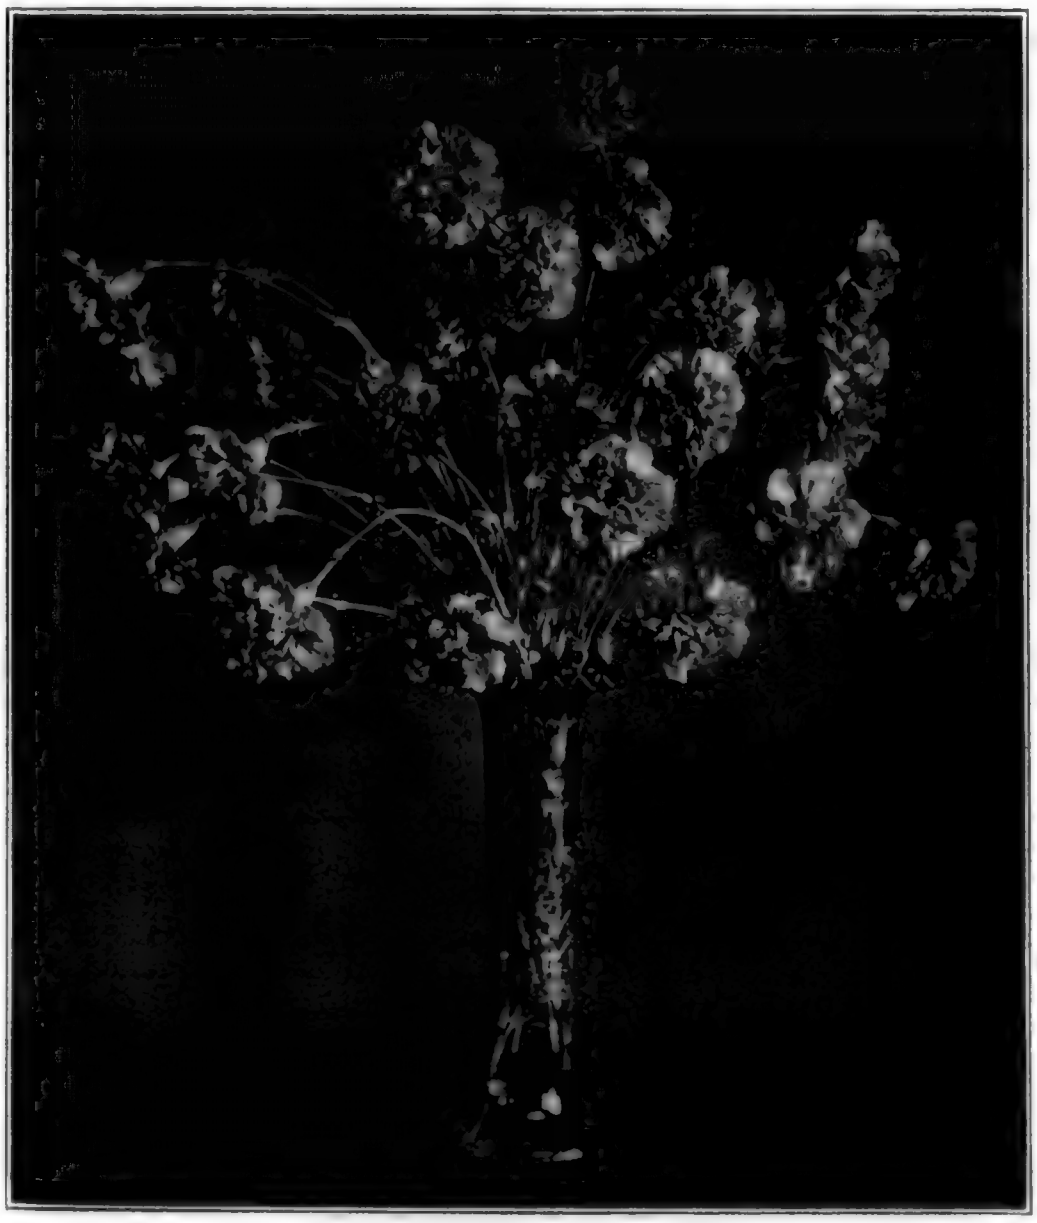
Recently considerable attention has been given to sterilization, and while there is no doubt that disease germs, if present in the propagating sand, can be destroyed by this means, it seems to me to require, with the average grower, an expenditure of too much labor and expense on a doubtful precaution. Rooted cutting specialists, or large growers who supply stock to the trade, are in a position to conduct this operation on a large scale, thus reducing the cost per thousand cuttings, and then the knowledge that the cuttings were rooted in sand so treated might influence sales.

The Soil.

The question of the soil into which the cuttings, as taken from the sand, are to be potted, is one which vitally concerns every grower. Many a promising batch has been seriously handicapped by not having had a fair chance at the outset, and this is surprising when we think how simple in nature and how easy of preparation such soil is.

Plain rotted sod, containing no manure or fertilizer of any kind, has proven to be the ideal medium in which to start young stock. A sufficient quantity should be conveniently located outside, and protection should be given against rain, snow or too deep penetration of frost. Brought in a week or so before using, that it may acquire the inside temperature, this soil cannot fail to suit the young plants.

The Pots.



If the supply of small pots is low, now is a good time to have a new lot come along, a good size being 2-inch or 2¼-inch, but let them be all one size.

Old pots are in every way equal to new ones, provided they are clean outside as well as inside, but I must again insist that they do not comprise a multitude of sizes; no one can expect even growth in a batch of young plants placed in various sizes of pots.

CARNATION MRS. WARD.

At the Washington convention of the American Carnation Society, in 1908, the two most striking features of the exhibition were the varieties Alma Ward and Mrs. C. W. Ward, exhibited by the Cottage Gardens Co., and which have been grown extensively at the Queens establishment the last three years. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a vase of Mrs. Ward. It is a large flower, well formed, in color deep pink, lighter than Lawson and deeper than Winsor. As shown at the recent exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York, it captured the sweepstakes silver medal for the best vase of 100 blooms in the show and Mr. Ward con-

PYFER'S PURCHASE.

Henry Eichholz, of Waynesboro, Pa., sends the following item under date of December 4:

"A. T. Pyfer, manager of the Chicago Carnation Co., has purchased the entire stock of the Lawson colored sport, Washington. The price to be paid is said to be $20,000."

Referring to the same subject, Mr. Pyfer wrote December 7:

"We suppose you have already learned of the fact that we purchased the stock of the dark pink sport of Enchantress from Mr. Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa., which he has registered as Washington. The color is nearer the shade of Lawson than any variety we know of. He has 3,000 plants of the variety growing at his place, and quite a number of cuttings already propagated. The stock is all extremely robust and healthy, and every indication is we have a carnation that has been looked forward to for a great many years. As we stated before, the color is as near Lawson as any variety we know of, although when the flower gets old it does not show any blue. Otherwise it is identical with Enchantress. He has tested the keeping qualities along with Enchantress and other varieties growing on his place, and finds it to be even better than Enchantress. Mr. Burki, at Pittsburg, is also growing a few plants of it, and it is showing up remarkably well with him, and he thinks a great deal of it."

FERNS AND FERN DISHES.

Every florist who is dealing with the public is frequently called upon to fill and supply fern dishes, and much ingenuity is being shown by up-to-date florists in the artistic arrangement and design of these popular articles. An attractive fern dish is often a better advertisement for the florist than almost anything else he sends out, because it is one of the staple articles that sells day after day and is always in use. In connection with the filling of fern dishes, most florists find it profitable to keep a good assortment of the dishes themselves, as many customers, seeing a neat dish with a proper filling of ferns, would buy; whereas, if they had to buy the dish separately, they would not bother with it. Among the newer dishes on the market are some exceedingly pretty ones called Dellwood ware, an illustration of which is given. They are manufactured by the Gold Furniture Co., of Chicago. The line is a large one and includes a variety of shapes and sizes. Among their special features is a double pan, one to contain the soil and the other a drip pan, just below. They are both easily removed from the main dish by little ring handles on each side. The vase is a composition molded in decorative form on wood and is light and strong. A stock of dishes is of double value to the florist handling them; first, from the profit derived from the dish itself, and second, from the aid it gives in boosting the sale of ferns.

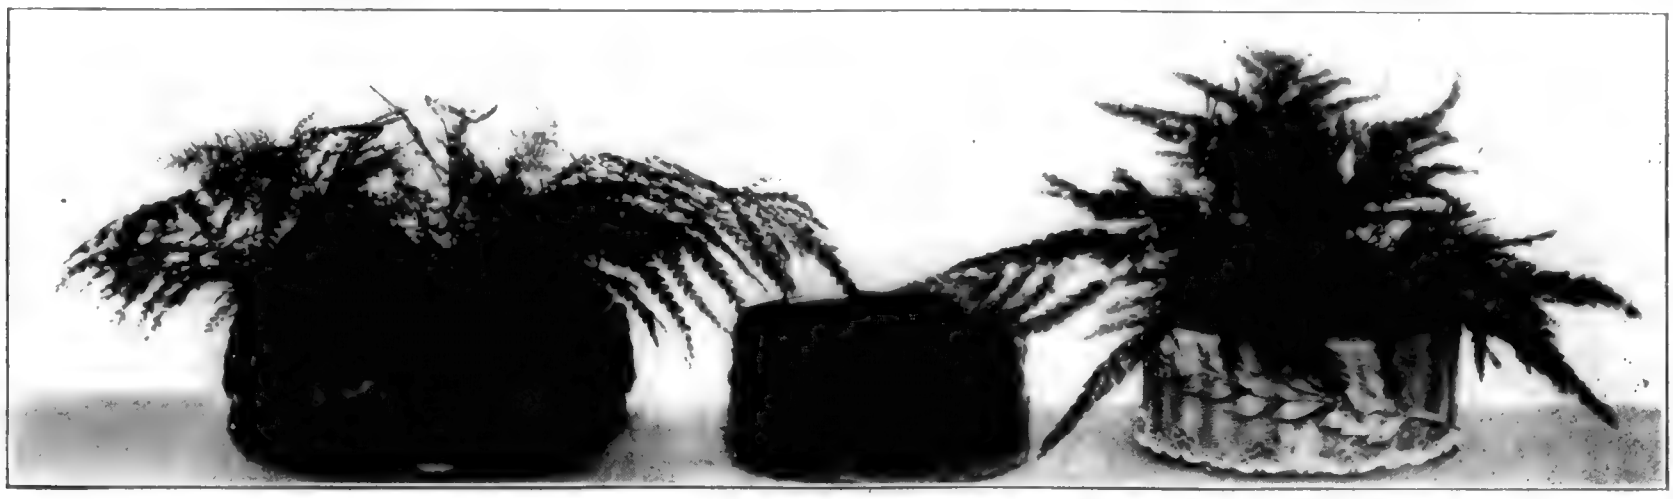
ORCHIDS

ORCHID JOTTINGS.

Cattleyas.

The orchid houses during the months of autumn are always attractive. The scarcity of bloom, which always exists just prior to the flowering of Cattleya labiata, has passed and there will be cattleyas and other orchids in abundance for some time to come. What a wonderful blank we would have in the autumn without C. labiata! Harking back but a few years, it was practically unknown. Its rediscovery in quantity was the greatest orchid find in a decade. It could be wished that all cattleyas would grow and flower as freely as C. labiata. When we see sheaths carrying four to seven flowers each, standing up boldly, we can hardly suppress a sigh of regret that the later Trianæs will not prove so prolific.

While in flower the labiatas should have the cool end of the house, where they are well shaded, and the atmosphere should be kept drier. Watering of these and all other cattleyas must then be done with greater care, always choosing early morning on a bright day for the work. October this year was bright and warm and more moisture at the roots is necessary under such conditions.



It is a mistake to remove all shading from cattleyas and lælias too early, but it is well to considerably reduce it. The dark green plants produced under heavy shade are beautiful to look upon, but do not flower as satisfactorily as those which are exposed to more sun, even though their foliage may look much paler by comparison. Cattleyas want plenty of fresh air and the house should never be closed tight at this season of the year. Even in winter some bottom ventilation can be afforded on all but the coldest days.

Just as soon as the labiatas pass out of flower, is the time to repot. Good osmunda fern fiber, with the fine particles shaken out, is an excellent potting medium, one which is porous and remains sweet. All orchids should be firmly potted. Such as shake in the baskets and pots will never thrive. Pots and pans, on the whole, are preferable to baskets for cattleyas, provided they have ample drainage, but many growers produce marvelously fine plants in baskets.

Odontoglossums.

The baby orchid, Odontoglossum grande, is attractive and interesting in its season. It grows well in shallow pans hung well up to the light in a cool house. A winter temperature of 50 to 52 degrees is about right. Strong bulbs will carry a dozen or more flowers each and these last in good condition for three weeks.

The last summer was rather trying for Odontoglossum crispum. It is doubtful if we will ever make much of a success with this superb orchid in America, owing to our hot summers. In the future, with artificial means of cooling houses in the hot months, we may be able to grow it better, but in the meantime it is a rather uphill battle. All the odontoglossums should now get plenty of sun. No further shading should be necessary until the middle of March. Potting may still be done but October is the best month in the year for overhauling the bulk of the crispum and Pescatorei section. Fern fiber, with a little moss, makes a suitable compost. Where small shell snails are numerous, it is better to cut out the moss, as the snails will simply destroy every flower spike, unless they are jealously guarded.

A temperature of 55 degrees at night is better than one lower for odontoglossums. If we are ever to succeed with these plants we must gradually accustom them to higher winter temperatures; 48 to 50 degrees should be the absolute minimum. The idea of giving them 40 degrees at night in winter is absurd. Plants kept warmer suffer less when we get our summer heat waves. A common mistake has been to give too low winter temperatures to many cool orchids. By carrying them 5 to 8 degrees warmer, experience has proved that they come through the summer far better.

Cypripediums and Miltonias.

Cypripedium insigne is now in its best season and, while an old variety, it will not be ousted as a popular market variety for many a day. It does not seem to make much difference whether the plants are grown cool or warm in summer; one seems to bloom as early as the other. The cooler plants, however, always appear more rugged. It is easy to advance or retard these cypripediums, according to when the flowers are wanted, but as they will keep fresh for twelve weeks on the plants there would seem to be no special need of holding them back. These terrestrial orchids must not be kept dry at the roots at any time. The supply of water as the winter advances should, however, be reduced, and it is too early to remove all the shading. Pale-leaved cypripediums do not look well. Plants wanted for Christmas sales should have the spikes well developed by this date. Keep the atmosphere moister than in the case of cattleyas.

Miltonia vexillaria should have been overhauled and potted some time ago. If the plants can have sufficient sun to give the leaves a reddish or bronzy hue, they will flower better the following summer. Watering must be carefully attended to. Better keep the plants on the dry side for some time. Any soakings at the root at this stage of growth will be disastrous. An airy house kept about 55 degrees at night, with 10 to 15 degrees advance in the daytime, will suit M. vexillaria. The variety Rœzlii succeeds better in a warm house, the cool end of the cypripedium house evidently being to its liking.

Dendrobiums and Oncidiums.

Dendrobium nobile, D. Wardianum and many hybrids now have their pseudobulbs completed and well plumped up. Such plants should now be moved to a cooler and airier house, where they will have only a light shade. Reduce the water supply by degrees, not too suddenly. A spraying over about noon on warm days will help to kep them plump. Cooler and drier treatment should be continued until the flower nodes are well advanced.

Autumn is the season when Oncidium varicosum Rogersii makes a glorious showing, with its gracefully drooping, many branched spikes of golden flowers. This is so inexpensive and easily cultivated that any florist can grow it. Shallow pans or small pots, four inches to five inches in diameter, make good receptacles. Baskets are sometimes used, but the roots are under better control in pots or pans. A good compost is one of fern root, sphagnum moss and a little lumpy charcoal. While in flower give the plants a rather cool, shady location and do not leave the spikes on too long, as it exhausts the plants' vitality severely.

IN THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Washington is recognized as a city with great floral possibilities. The entertainments, official and private, are given on a scale rarely attempted even in the largest cities in the country. The leading shops conceive and execute creations in floral art requiring the greatest skill; flowers of quality, flowers in quantity are freely used—yet Washington has until recently depended largely on other markets for flowers during the social season. The reasons for this dependence are clear: The market is dead from May until November. The growers, among them several of the principal retailers, supply all the flowers needed during those seven months at prices that forbid outside competition. During the social season the demand presents extraordinary difficulties, requiring tact and judgment on the part of those who are catering to the most critical floral taste.

With a view to improving conditions, the Washington retailers have several times tried to start enterprising young men in the wholesale business, believing that the time had come when a good wholesale cut flower house would prosper. Nothing permanent, excepting a small market which existed for many years, came of these efforts until last March, when the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, opened a branch house at 1212 New York avenue. The place is attractively fitted up, the order and cleanliness prevailing showing that the Washington house standard is equal to the best in the country. On the left as you enter from the street level are the telephones and icebox; on the right the ribbon case and drawers of cycas leaves, wheat sheaves and immortelles; in the center the sorting tables, in the rear the manager's desk. William J. Moore, who has a life study of the grading and selling of cut flowers, is manager. Mr. Moore pointed out some excellent local stock from nearby growers and said that he wanted to make it worth while for the growers near Washington to send the company their flowers. Whatever the neighborhood could not supply would be brought from a distance, Mr. Moore said. The Washington retailers should have a good assortment of fine flowers.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

FAILURE WITH MRS. JONES.

During the last season we have grown two houses of mums, such varieties as Pacific, Golden Glow, Ivory, Dean, Bonnaffon, Amorita, Eaton, Chadwick, Nonin, Jones and others. Every variety turned out fine, producing large single-stemmed blooms, with the exception of the Jones, yellow and white. They reached a height of three feet, with fine green foliage, but no flower measured over three inches across. All my mums were planted between June 15 and June 25, in raised benches, in five inches of good fresh soil, planted eight inches apart each way and carried to single stems. What is the cause of the Jones turning out so poor, when all other varieties under the same treatment turned out so fine?

When should Nonin be planted to produce a nice crop for Christmas? How much soil should be used, and how far apart planted? What other varieties of mums can be had in for Christmas day?

Which are the best for mums, ground or raised benches? H. J. H.

I see no reason for the failure with Jones except that the soil is lacking in some constituent that it requires. I must confess that I have been unable to grow good flowers of this variety myself, and have not grown any of it for some years. About the only remedy I can see is for you to grow something else.

Nonin, if planted in July, can be held back for Christmas by being kept as cool as possible in early fall, and taking the last bud. The conditions under which I have grown the other varieties is five inches of soil and seven or eight inches apart, and this is the same way in which I grow Nonin.

Other varieties that are brought into market for Christmas day are Bonnaffon, Nagoya, J. Rosette and W. T. Brock.

The question of which is best for chrysanthemums, ground or raised benches, is something almost every grower figures out for himself, since different conditions have considerable to do with it. To my mind, raised benches are far superior and I would never plant a solid bed. In a raised bench, the roots are absolutely under control and the plants can be set to better advantage.

MUMS IN UNHEATED HOUSES.

The Review has referred to the success of Joseph E. Bonsall, of Ohio, in growing chrysanthemums in unheated houses. Will Mr. Bonsall please tell us what varieties of mums he grows in that way, for early blooms? Are such flowers of good enough quality for funeral work? Does he protect the blooms with cloth, or how is it done? Will he also please tell us how he keeps his chrysanthemum plants over till spring without artificial heat, and whether he grows any outdoor flowers for cutting in the summer time in the open ground? F. C. P.

Replying to F. C. P.'s inquiry, I find that there is little danger of injury to mum blooms in my unheated greenhouses, unless the mercury falls below 28 degrees outdoors, as the warmth of the soil carries the inside temperature from 8 to 10 degrees higher for one or two nights. By reference to my records I see that, in this part of Ohio, we usually get cold enough weather to freeze inside about the first week in November. This year we cut Kaiserin roses, and some late mums developed from side buds, November 23, which is unusually late.

Any variety of mum which, in heated houses, will finish the crop by October 25, can be safely grown, in this locality, in unheated houses. This will include Bergmann, Monrovia, October Frost, Polly Rose, etc., though on some occasions I have had Polly Rose nipped before the crop was all off. I find that, owing to cool nights during October, the crop is a few days later in finishing than in heated houses. The point to be determined, in deciding what sorts can be grown in this way, is at what time a killing frost may be expected.

As to the quality of the flowers, they are fully as fine as when grown in heated houses.

I do not use any cloth protection, but treat them just as I would in heated houses.

As to carrying over stock plants, I simply cut off the old tops and let the plants stand where they bloomed. I find that they are not injured in the least, though they freeze quite hard. The ground, however, seldom freezes so hard that it cannot be broken with the fingers. At one time last winter, when the glass was covered by about four inches of snow, which does not melt quickly unless the sun shines, the thermometer outside was near zero for three days and nights, and inside did not fall below 30 degrees.

As to growing outdoor flowers, I grow asters and some other things, but being strictly a wholesale grower, I am not compelled to have a supply at all seasons, as I would if I had a retail trade.

CHOOSE A SOUTH EXPOSURE.

We expect to build a range of even-span houses for cut flowers. We have an option on a tract of land with an east slope and another with a south slope. Will experienced growers kindly state which would give more satisfactory results, houses running east and west with a south slope or running north and south with an east slope? M. B. C.

The south exposure is certainly best. The houses should, for almost any crop, run east and west, as this aspect is favorable to getting the best results during the short days of winter, when sunshine is at a minimum. Ribes.

SHRUBS FOR EASTER FLOWERING

I received from Holland the following plants, which I want to force for Easter: Azalea mollis, pot grown lilacs, staphylea, Deutzia Lemoinei and gracilis, Wistaria Sinensis and Prunus triloba. Will any of these, except Azalea mollis, require pruning? J. M.

You must not prune any of the shrubs named, as you will only cut away flowering wood and thus ruin them. Allow the deutzias and staphyleas eight weeks and the wistarias, Prunus triloba and lilacs six weeks in an average night temperature of 55 degrees, and you will have them in good season. C.

THE POLICY OF PRICES

FOX FEARS 'TIS FOLLY.

[The address of Charles Henry Fox before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, December 7, 1909.]

My subject to-night will be: "The Follies of 1908, Will They Be Repeated in 1909-10?"

It is highly probable that this title has an air of familiarity about it, for I believe it is a billboard term, but nevertheless this negative subject that I have chosen may help us as florists; I would rather say, brother florists.

After all, gentlemen, we are one and the same, and the names we are known by, growers, wholesalers and retailers, are terms designating the little corner we fill in the great game. You and I are neither independent nor dependent, but we are inter-dependent. The one who says he is independent commits the worst folly of 1909, and I hope you will not find him in 1910.

The Oft Committed Folly.

Primarily a folly is the act of a fool. In order to succeed and advance our business we must not be fools. No one would commit the folly of selling old stuff for fresh these days. No grower would purposely leave his carnation range closed up at night, when he should carry an abundance of air and a pipe; yet there is the folly of cutting the crop, shipping it the next day to the wholesaler, who in turn sells it to the retailer the next day, or the next, as if they just came in; and the retailer in turn sells to his customer as they just came in; and the customer comes back the next day to complain that they were not fresh! Were they? Do we depend on each other? No one will question that. Are the follies of one the follies of all? This subject truly concerns all of us; we are a cosmic whole; what affects one affects the other, directly and indirectly. We do not know where it stops.

Life is but a change and we as florists must change with it. What was O. K. five years ago will not go today. Our customers are changing; they demand more, better goods, better service, intelligent service. I think I have a fine side light on this subject.

What are gifts, anyway? What can flowers be used for? Why are not more of them used at Christmas and on every occasion?

What We Sell.

Someone has said flowers are "frozen music." Now, there is hurdy-gurdy music and grand opera music. Each has its use, but be careful you do not supply the hurdy-gurdy kind to a grand opera customer.

We sell impressions, sentiment and sympathy.

Flowers properly used can form any expression you desire and will reach the sternest business man as well as the most cultured and refined woman.

Every birthday should be garlanded with flowers.

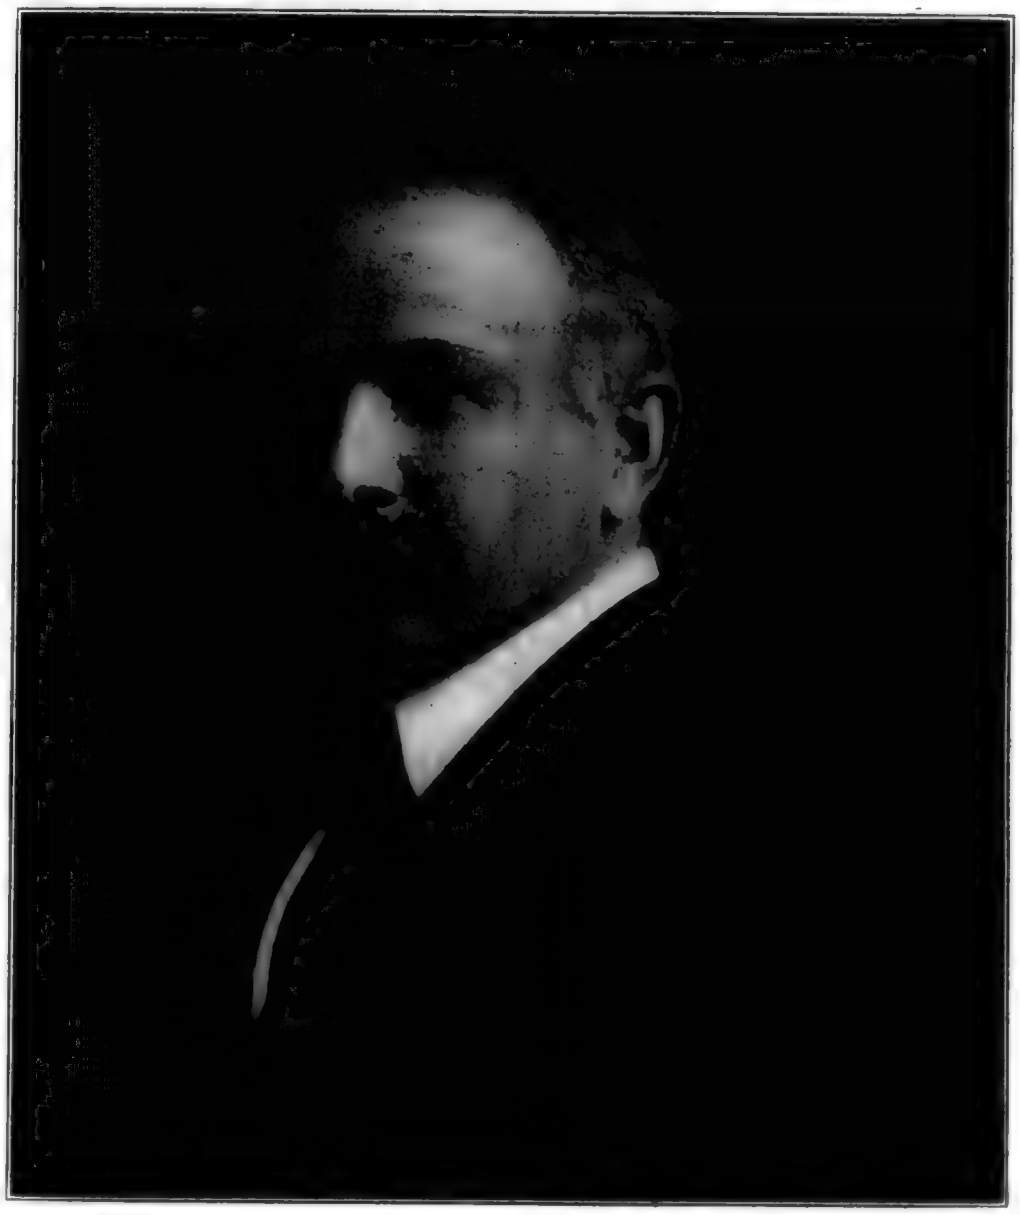
Every anniversary should be honored with flowers.

Married folks, as well as single, should remember St. Valentine's day and send flowers.

A Thanksgiving table looks a hundred per cent better if flowers are used on it.

But these sales cannot be encouraged as long as the public considers flowers extravagant and almost as a prohibitive luxury. We must get rid of these impressions, and the time to do it is when they want flowers. Have you ever stopped to think of the wonderful possibilities of the business we represent? Into what the business can be developed? What we must do to correct errors in order to develop?

The Greatest Error.



One of the greatest of the errors is the extortionate prices at Christmas. No matter how good or how poor a season we have had, or what the outlook for the midwinter and early spring social season may be, it is "Wait for Christmas." Lay back, store the stuff, salt it down, and unload to your customer at the highest possible price. Catch the dubs that want flowers for Christmas and soak them good and hard. You think they have to have them, but they don't.

They are ready at this holiday time to spend their money for gifts. All fall you have led them along from cosmos and dahlias to chrysanthemums, violets and orchids. You sold these at a profit and pleased your customers, the wholesaler and yourself. You have spent money, lots of money, in advertising to bring the buyers to your store, but now with your 300 per cent advance you undermine the good you have done all fall; undermine all your advertising, all your catering.

The Result.

All your good ideas are wasted energy. Instead of leading up to Christmas and seizing the psychological moment to persuade your customers to buy flowers for Christmas gifts, and use flowers in connection with all other gifts, you turn on the cold water spigot and give them a chill that they do not get over for three or four weeks, with your extortionate prices.

And for what, gentlemen? One day. This one day ruins a whole month's business. You can not wipe it out of people's minds. They will not go near a flower shop unless absolutely compelled to. When you turn on this cold water spigot they do not get over it in three or four weeks, or a year. They may get over the chill, but the effects of the high prices at Christmas show themselves throughout the year, and you lower their vitality as buyers of flowers. And when you turn it on again at the next flower season, be it Christmas, Easter or Thanksgiving, you gradually give them consumption and they leave you altogether.

Why, it is a yearly occurrence that for a week before, and three or four weeks after, Christmas the first remark a customer will make will be: "Flowers are awfully high now, are they not?" It comes before you have had a chance to say anything, showing what is uppermost in their thoughts. Now, if the ones that come into your store think that way, what must the thousands that pass by think? You know it is the thinkery that does the work, and on this account they resolve to buy gloves, confectionery, jewelry, etc., and so we florists lose thousands of dollars' worth of sales.

Do these other merchants advance their prices because their customers want their goods? Not on your life! They are too clever. They have spent good money all season advertising and building up trade and they are not going to detract from that valuable asset, the customers, that they have psychologized into buying their wares, just because there is an increased demand.

I have heard florists actually say, directly to the customer who is complaining of the awful advance of 300 per cent: "Well, flowers are very expensive at Christmas, and we have a great demand for them, and they are very scarce." Then your customer immediately thinks to himself: "Well, it does not have to be flowers; I am not going to be buffaloed that way. Why not send candy at 80 cents a pound for the best, or why not jewelry at the same price as at any other time of the year, and it will keep, too, while flowers would be gone in a few days anyway."

So they go and spend their money elsewhere.

Aside from this we not only lose the sale, but the confidence and respect of the customer as well, because you will see flowers for sale the next day on the street at every corner at one-third or less than you ask. Violets for which you yesterday asked $1.50 or $2 per bunch (and, by the way, violets never are worth $1.50 and $2; I mean a bunch of fifty) the next day after Christmas will be poked under your nose for 50 cents a bunch. Now, if they are so scarce as you told your customer, how is it that there are so many on the street the next day?

Gentlemen, put yourselves in the position of the retail customer and note the impression you get. Could you have confidence and respect for a business man who tried to charge you three times the fair price just because he thinks you must have the goods?

The Retailer's Responsibility.

Now, though the retailer has much expense at this rush season, although he must employ extra help at high prices and he has extra delivery expense, and he has extra wrapping expense to protect from frost (he must make good anything that is frozen), yet all this does not account for the exceedingly high prices asked by him.

What is the reason?

It is the worn-out system of trying to crowd out of one day's business the profit which should be spread over a month. We would make this profit and more, too, if prices were at a slight advance, say 50 per cent. Then all these flowers would be sold at a fair price. There would not be any to sell to the street man the next day. The grower would be sure of his profit, without the risk of anything being left over. The commission man would be happier, for if anyone has his trouble it is he; he is between the devil and the deep sea, trying to please his storemen and his growers. You can go to any commission man a week before Christmas and he is afraid to tell you the price for fear he is too low. How are we going to sell under these conditions?

Drop the follies of 1908.

Let us be sane and make a play for the biggest end of this Christmas shopping, turn the tide our way, and explode this idea the public has that flowers are awfully extravagant at Christmas. Remember we are component parts. What affects the retailer affects the wholesaler, and in turn the grower. We will all benefit by this business building and, with confidence restored, we will get a great deal that the fellow in other lines is now getting.

Now, after all that is said and done, about the follies of 1908 and exorbitant prices at Christmas, I must not be construed as an advocate of cheap prices or cheap work. If anything, we have the reputation as one of the highest priced in town, but there is a vast difference between a square deal and get-what-you-can plan.

THE DOBBS NEW RANGE.

Dobbs & Son have started a new range on the opposite side of the street from their old plant at Auburn, N. Y., where they have purchased several acres of fine land. A late start only allowed of the erection of one house 42x150, and a large concrete block boiler house and office last season. They have also erected a large dwelling on the new tract. The present house is exclusively for carnations. The new greenhouse is King construction. Trade is unusually good; even with the added space they have not been able to meet the demand, so a further early addition to the new place is to be expected.

Burnside, Conn.—W. H. Atkins, on Larrabee street, uses the greater part of his greenhouse space for the growing of carnations and sweet peas, for which he finds an excellent market in Hartford. His carnations this year are in fine condition.

A House 32x220 Feet Devoted Entirely to Cyclamen by Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia.

CYCLAMEN AT CRAIG'S.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph made November 30 at the establishment of Robert Craig Co., Forty-ninth and Market streets, Philadelphia. It shows a house 32x220 devoted to cyclamens. The illustration will serve to give an idea of the size of the stock.

When the Craig Co. takes up a specialty it is grown in quantity, and the illustration will serve to give some idea of the quantities in which the cyclamen is handled as a Christmas specialty, but gives little indication of the perfection of the plants. It is said that Craig's cyclamens never were finer than this season.

Other photographs accompanying this one, which unfortunately the large holiday demands upon space made it impossible to reproduce, show a house of poinsettias also in fine shape, and some specimen plants of crotons, Lorraine begonias and some of the ferns largely grown at Craig's. These are Scottii, Todeaoides and Amerpohlii. The Lonsdale type of Lorraine begonias is in favor at Craig's. Crotons are probably more largely grown in this establishment than in any other in the United States. The variety Edwin Lonsdale is one of the best. It is said that Craig's propagates 5,000 crotons per month.

HOLIDAY PLANTS IN CHICAGO.

A canvass of the largest growers of plants in and about Chicago reveals the fact that on some lines there is an abundance, while in others there is a scarcity and on still others a fair supply only.

Azaleas and poinsettias, the two Christmas leaders, are the most abundant, perhaps, and this fact alone is sufficient to warrant predicting a good trade in plants for the holidays. It also means a most decided help in material for decorating florists' windows and giving the desired holiday air to the houses devoted to selling plants and flowers, either wholesale or retail. Upon these two Christmas plants so much of the sale of other plants depends that their condition at this time is an all-important factor.

When the azalea stock was received from Belgium last fall, its condition was not promising and there was every appearance of difficulties ahead for the grower. So fast did the buds develop, however, that with mild heat many plants were in bloom for Thanksgiving and they will require little, if any, forcing to get plenty of the early varieties in readiness for the holidays.

Poinsettias also will be plentiful and in excellent condition. While it is always hard to foresee how many any man's trade will demand, it is expected there will be enough to go around, though it is taking long chances to put off orders till late. It is a conservative estimate to place the supply fifty per cent ahead of last year, but the demand for poinsettias is also steadily increasing.

Cyclamens are certainly in fine condition, but the number ready for Christmas is only fair. Chicago growers are giving special attention to this plant and grow only the best strains, as it is not a case of how many, but of how fine a plant with how beautiful a bloom they can produce. The colors are certainly charming.

Primula obconica seems to be in fair supply also. This plant has hardly enough color to suit the public generally at this season, though many prefer it for its dainty appearance.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, that beautiful but fragile holiday plant, is not found in such quantities on the florists' benches as is desirable. It is a beautiful plant for this season and sells well for the home trade, but is not one of the best shippers, as it breaks too easily. Unless stock is secured early, many are bound to be disappointed, for the quantity is quite limited.

Berried plants are in fair supply. There is a good stock of Christmas peppers in all sizes. Solanums, or Jerusalem cherries, are only in fair supply. Ardisias and aucubas will be limited, though the local demand never runs heavy and probably the supply will be sufficient. Stock of Pandanus Veitchii is to be found in quantity, especially in the small and medium sizes, rich pot plants being especially abundant. They are well colored and make attractive plants.

Among the fancy leaved plants are Dracæna Massangeana and fragrans, good stock and plentiful. Dracæna terminalis is also abundant and usually well colored.

A splendid stock of the ever favorite Bostons and Whitmani, also palms, araucarias and other green plants, are to be had in splendid condition, and a good green plant is bound to sell at any season of the year. JAS. G. HANCOCK.

ROCKLAND, ME.—Charles T. Spear, the Middle street florist, has opened a store on Main street, near the corner of Elm street.

DENVER, COLO.—The Scott & Martin Floral Co. has been incorporated, with a capital of $2,000, by Irene S. Scott, Harry D. Martin and J. E. Robinson.

JACKSON, MISS.—W. J. Brown, whose fine rose gardens were recently referred to in the REVIEW, is planning to build a range of greenhouses on the large tract of ground which he owns in the outskirts of town. He will also increase the area devoted to the growing of outdoor stock especially roses, and will use his best efforts to build up a large general trade. Mr. Brown is deputy clerk of the Supreme Court.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Rambler Roses.

It may seem a long cry ahead to Easter, but even though we have not yet reached Christmas it must be borne in mind that only three months separate the latter festival and the Easter of 1910. It is now time to start rambler roses if you want to be sure of having them on time. When Easter comes about the middle of April there is no necessity for starting the plants thus early, but March 27 is an unusually early date and it is well to get plants started in good season. The wood on all ramblers now is, or should be, well matured, especially in the case of stock grown all summer in pots and kept on the dry side for the last six weeks, and should quickly respond to moderate forcing. Plants potted in the late fall start less quickly and should be given a cool house at first, 45 degrees at night being ample.

Give stock grown in pots through the summer a liberal top-dressing. Cut out all weak and useless wood and twist the shoots around in order to get as many breaks as possible. Syringe freely until the plants break; then give them an advance of 5 degrees in temperature. We like to bring our ramblers along in a heat not exceeding 55 degrees at night at any stage of their growth, if possible. Grown in this way they are stockier and more floriferous, and the flowers have a better color than when subjected to the sweating process. The pink ramblers should be allowed eight or ten days more time than the crimson ramblers.

Bedding Geraniums.

Now that chrysanthemum benches are cleared, it is possible to pot over any young geranium stock rooted in the propagating benches, or now in flats of sand. Pots two inches in diameter will suffice for the first potting. Use loam and sand, and if you can give the little plants a place where a trifle of bottom heat comes through the benches, they will establish themselves surprisingly fast in the little pots. Soak well after potting; then water moderately, to avoid losing plants by damping off. Plants rooted in 2-inch pots in the fall will now be in need of a shift. All the plants may not require it, but look over them and put the strongest in 3-inch pots. The balance may be all right in the smaller pots until the new year. When you wish to carry your young stock in the bench or flats some time longer, give them just sufficient water to prevent shriveling and a light, cool, freely ventilated house.

Lilium Candidum.

Lilium candidum is less of a commercial flower than its merits would seem to warrant. While it may be rather ungainly as a pot plant, well grown spikes of it are superior to any longiflorums. Where candidums are wanted for Easter, the plants, which up to this time should have been kept mainly outdoors and subjected to several freezings, should be placed in a house kept at 45 to 48 degrees at night. L. candidum is spoiled by hard forcing, and if it can be flowered in a house averaging 52 degrees at night, the flowers will be much finer than if grown in 10 degrees more heat.

Berried Plants.

Celestial or Christmas peppers should now have the fruits well colored. We have always failed to see any great beauty in these plants, believing the Jerusalem cherry to be a far more desirable pot plant, but at present they seem to be having a miniature boom. If the fruit is insufficiently ripened, let the plants have a warm house and all possible sunshine. Berried solanums are generally in first-class shape for Christmas and will be better if kept in a cool house. Ardisia crenulata is a deservedly popular plant for Christmas, for in order to sell it, it is only necessary to have the fruit ripe. Some growers, unfortunately, hold it too cool, with the result that the berries are not half ripe for the holidays. Push any laggard plants along now in a warm house.

Small Ferns.

The average country florist depends, as a rule, on the big fern specialists for his supplies of little ferns for the holidays. This stock should have been procured before now, but if the matter has been overlooked they should be ordered at once. Let them have a moist house, where there is a genial atmosphere with no drying heat. Do not make the mistake of buying too many varieties of small ferns; half a dozen are sufficient. In addition to the uses they are put to in filling special fern dishes, almost any of them come in handy for planting in pans of poinsettias or among dracænas and other colored-leaved tropical plants.

Calceolarias.

Now that we are getting steadily cool weather, the calceolarias are making rapid growth and must be frequently given a fresh stand on the benches. Do not allow them to become at all potbound before giving them their final shift, or they will give unsatisfactory results. Never coddle them. They delight in a cool, airy house; one which has a damp, clammy feeling suits them to perfection. We like to leave some ventilation on the roof on all but the coldest nights, and on all bright days we give the foliage a light spraying over. Be ever on the watch for green aphis, the arch enemy of the calceolaria. You cannot kill all by spraying, as they get under the lower

POINSETTIAS BLEEDING.

Will you kindly tell me the proper and best way of cutting and keeping poinsettias? I have had four years' experience growing poinsettias. To keep them from bleeding when cutting I scald the ends in hot water. I also have burnt them on hot irons, but do not have satisfactory results in keeping them. The blooms keep well, but the foliage drops off. S. G.

Your plan of either scalding or searing the ends of the poinsettia shoots as soon as cut is excellent. I find that treated thus the bracts keep fresh much longer. A mistake often made is to ship them away to customers as soon as they are cut and scalded. They should be placed in barrels or tubs of cold water for twenty-four hours, immersing the stems almost their full length. It is better not to place them in as low a temperature when cut as you would carnations or roses; 45 degrees at night will be all right.

Poinsettia foliage will not keep as well as the flower bracts, but the deep plunging you will find is a great benefit and will quite materially assist in keeping the leaves and flowers fresh. C. W.

DAHLIAS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

I want to grow dahlias for cut flowers for Memorial day. Should I purchase clumps, single tubers or plants? What varieties would be best for cut flowers? I intend to grow them in solid beds. Please give cultural instructions, as I have never grown dahlias under glass. I live in the state of Kansas. M. H.

You will be unable to procure growing plants sufficiently early to flower them for Memorial day. It will be necessary to purchase either clumps or single tubers; the latter are generally sold. It would be well for you to secure these without delay, for in your state they ought to be started into growth not later than the middle of January. Lay the dry tubers on a spare bench in a moderately warm house, spreading a layer of moss below them. If there is some bottom heat and an atmospheric temperature of 60 degrees, it will suit them. Damp lightly until they start to break. As soon as they are well started into growth and making roots, plant them in the solid beds you speak of. Dahlias like a moderately rich soil.

Allow the plants two feet apart each way and only allow a single stem to grow on each. Support each of these with a stout stake. Look over them once a week and do any necessary tying. You will find a single stem far preferable to allowing several shoots to grow on each plant. An average winter night temperature of 50 degrees is sufficient. This can be increased towards spring, but always air freely. In fumigating use caution, as heavy doses burn the foliage. When growing vigorously abundant water supplies are needed. As flowers appear spread some decayed manure on the surface or use liquid manure once a week.

A select list of dahlias suitable for indoor culture is as follows:

Double quilled show—A. D. Livoni, fine clear pink; Yellow Livoni, bright yellow; Grand Duke Alexis, ivory white tinged with rose on ends of petals; Charles Lavier, deep yellow.

Deep pompon—White Lady, pure white; Sunshine, scarlet; Eleganta, soft pink.

The cactus dahlias, while very handsome, fail to produce stems of any considerable length and are thus less desirable than other sorts named for commercial work. If you desire to grow a few, one or two good varieties are: Countess of Lonsdale, salmon tinted apricot; Florence M. Stredwick, pure white; Kriemhilde, soft pink shading to white; Standard Bearer, rich scarlet.

The fancy single and other types are not as useful for cutting as those we have named. The single varieties bloom profusely and, if you can sell the flowers near home, may be worthy of a trial. Three good sorts are: Scarlet Century, Pink Century and White Century. C. W.

BUDS ON SHORT SWEET PEAS.

Our sweet peas are about two feet high and are sending out a great many buds. Should we pick them off until the plants are bigger, or should we allow them to come to blossom now? We are growing them to ship. H. W. W.

By the time those buds come into bloom you will likely find a ready sale for them. If the plants appear sturdy, the height need make no difference as to whether you should allow them to come into bloom. A. F. J. B.

OBITUARY.

John Rodenhurst.

John Rodenhurst, employed as chrysanthemum grower for the Hoyt Bros. Co., at Spokane, Wash., died recently at St. Luke's hospital, in Spokane, at the age of 25 years. His death was due to typhoid fever. He was of English birth and had formerly worked on the estate of the Duke of Warwick. Later he worked for J. Gammage & Sons, of London, Ont., and on both private and commercial places in Portland and Seattle.

Raymond Moore.

Raymond Moore, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Moore, of New Haven, Conn., died November 28, at his home, 94 Lake place. He was a little less than 19 years of age. His illness, which continued for only a few days, was a complication of heart and stomach troubles. Since leaving school he had been employed at his father's store on Chapel street.

Henry Kohankie.

Henry Kohankie, of Painesville, O., prominent Lake county nurseryman and senior partner in the firm of Henry Kohankie & Son, was suddenly taken ill while in Cleveland, Wednesday evening, November 24, and passed away a few hours later. Death was probably due to an acute attack of peritonitis or intestinal obstruction, from which Mr. Kohankie had been suffering for several years.

Mr. Kohankie had been in Cleveland with his men for several days, planting trees on the Schofield place. With him, at the time of his death, was John Murphy, of Call's Nursery, Perry.

When Mr. Kohankie was stricken, Dr. Paulin, a local physician, was sent for. Mr. Kohankie did not seem to think there was anything serious the matter with him and did not tell the physician that he had suffered similar attacks before. However, he was in great pain and as the case looked serious, a friend telephoned to Painesville and notified Mrs. Kohankie and their son, Henry.

They reached the bedside of the sick man just before midnight and he passed away shortly after 1 o'clock. He was conscious up to within a short time before his death and did not seem to have the least thought that it was his last illness.

The remains were brought to Painesville before 12 o'clock Thanksgiving day and the funeral was held Sunday, December 5.

Henry Kohankie was 56 years of age and an experienced and highly successful nurseryman. For thirty-five years he was in the employ of the Storrs & Harrison Co. and in 1900 he branched out for himself and, taking his son as a partner, started the extensive nurseries now bearing his name.

Henry Kohankie had a host of friends and was highly respected in the community over which his sad death has cast a gloom.

A wife and one son, Henry Kohankie, Jr., survive.

Andrew Irwin.

Andrew Irwin, aged 75 years, died November 28, after an illness of twelve weeks. He was a veteran of the Civil war and a lifelong employee of the Pennsylvania railroad. Mr. Irwin was not connected with the trade, but was the father of Mrs. Albert M. Herr, of Lancaster, Pa., the treasurer of the Ladies' Society of American Florists.

August Grande.

August Grande, a familiar figure about the flower market at Indianapolis, Ind., died at his home, two miles west of that city, November 28. Mr. Grande's death was a surprise to his many friends here, as he was an unusually robust man. The immediate cause of his death was heart trouble, although he had been ailing a little since last July. Mr. Grande was born in Salevia, Germany, in 1862 and came to this country in 1881. He leaves a widow and three children; also a brother, John Grande.

John Seligman.

John Seligman, the wholesale florist of New York, who had been seriously ill for many months, died suddenly Saturday, November 27, from Bright's disease. He leaves a wife and child. Joseph J. Levy was his partner and together they built up a good trade and excellent reputation. Mr. Seligman was cut down in his early manhood, being only 37 years of age. His first engagement was with Michael Hart, then in the wholesale business and now with Charles Millang. He remained with Mr. Hart until he commenced business on his own account some six or seven years ago. Mr. Levy will continue the business.

GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.—A new greenhouse has been completed at F. S. Pearson's Edgewood farm and a hot water heating system has been installed.

BENTON HARBOR, MICH.—Miss Elizabeth Carlson, whose store was formerly located on Pipestone street, has now opened her new quarters at 119 East Main street, where she has a nice stock of flowers.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
THE REVIEW brings results.

THE velvet poinsettia gives every indication of running the natural article a close race this month, and it has endurance on its side.

DON'T substitute on your wholesale plant orders, except with permission; give the customer what he orders or send his money back.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE legal department of the city of Worcester, Mass., has decided that growing flowers is not "manufacturing," and that florists are not entitled to the special water rate given factories.

THIS issue of the REVIEW is NOT a special edition—it is all in the day's work—but it contains 100 pages, not to mention Mr. Heacock's little contribution in colors, and constitutes a rather more plainly visible evidence than any other how wonderfully the commercial side of floriculture has developed these last few years.

IT IS THE PLACE.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

You can stop my advertisement, as I have enough orders to dispose of our surplus stock. The Review certainly is the place for advertising, as it brings quick results.—R. W. Whitehead, Hammond, La., December 4, 1909.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The coming rose show is gaining attention in various ways. John Cook, of Baltimore, Md., sends on a prize of $15 for the best fifty My Maryland roses. Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., say, "We would like to offer a prize of $25 for the best vase of Mrs. Jardine rose." The Conard & Jones Co. says, "We offer a prize of $4 for the best pot grown rose, American Pillar, and also a $4 prize for the best six sprays of the new rose, American Pillar." Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, $5 for the best six plants in bloom of the Harry Kirk rose, and $3 for the second prize for the same. Peter Henderson & Co., New York city, for the best vase of roses, not less than twenty-five or more than fifty blooms, one or more varieties, arranged for effect, accessories in other flowers, foliage and also ribbon permitted; exhibitors may supply their own vase for this prize; first prize, $15; second, $10. The Dingee & Conard Co., for the best pot grown new rose, Charles Dingee, first prize, $4; second, $2; for the best blooms of the new rose, Charles Dingee, first prize, $4, and second prize, $2. His Honor the Mayor of Detroit offers a prize of $100 for the exhibit of pot grown roses.

The Horticultural Society of New York, under whose auspices this show is to be held, in the American Museum of Natural History, Seventy-seventh street and Central Park West, is desirous of having so fine an exhibit that the splendid quarters offered to the rosarians of America for their exhibit in the greatest flower-consuming city in the world will be a success in both quality and attendance. BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business ran down hill steadily last week until Friday, December 3, when it started on the up grade, and it has been going up ever since. Sunday, December 5, was a dark, disagreeable day, Monday was the coldest day of the season to date, and Tuesday brought a blizzard. The result has been a decided curtailment of supply, a consequent stiffening in prices, with a sharp advance in one or two lines, and an assumption of normal winter conditions. As is almost always the case in bad weather, the demand fell off through the operation of the same causes that reduced the supply, but this will not be for long. The market now is looking forward to a run of good, lively, winter business. The chrysanthemums are about out of the way. There are a few stragglers left, but the mum season is practically over, not only in Chicago, but in the towns to which Chicago ships the most flowers, and this condition marks the real opening of the winter season.

There were plenty of Beauties last week, but the demand was so good that prices worked upward, and this week, with slightly reduced supplies, the Beauty market is entitled to be called strong. The soft weather at the end of November and the beginning of December made soft roses, and quality of the average stock has been nothing to brag about, but the arrival of real winter is expected to work a quick improvement. Some excellent Richmond are in the market and are selling well. The Killarney also are in good shape, and White Killarney is easily the best white rose, Kaiserin being now practically over for this season. Now and then there is a buyer who wants nothing but Maid and Bride, but Killarney and Richmond are the best selling varieties. Several houses say the call for My Maryland is extremely light and that this variety must be brought personally to the attention of the buyers in order to effect its sale.

With the passing of the chrysanthemums, though a few still remain, the carnation has enjoyed an increased demand and prices have gone back up the scale. There still is a wide range in value. The stock of some growers is bringing first-class prices, while others are complaining of low returns. The difference is in the quality of the goods, but the producer of the stock the buyers do not favor cannot see where he falls down. Enchantress now is in full midwinter form, and Victory also is giving a good crop. It appears the proportion of Enchantress being grown is not so large as a year ago, and the proportion of white is larger.

Violets did first-rate up to the arrival of the blizzard. The receipts of the Hudson river stock are not so large as they were a year ago, doubtless due to the fact that the Rhinebeck growers are pushing out for new markets, but the quality of the stock never was better than it is at present. The retail stores that have the trade for good violets are doing a fine business. It is reported one local retailer has placed an order in one house for 50,000 violets for Christmas delivery.

Paper Whites were a glut last week and prices went down to where the returns only paid for the bulbs. This week they are doing slightly better, though the supply continues large. Easter lilies are in steady supply, but only moderate request. Receipts of callas increase slowly. There was a little skirmish for valley early this week. It frequently happens that Monday or Tuesday valley is closely cleaned up, while later in the week there is an abundance. Sweet peas are increasing in supply and improving in quality. They soon will become an important factor in the market, for literally millions will be offered for sale in the first few months of the new year. Cattleyas are an extremely scarce item; Christmas prices were asked last week, but this week there are a few more in the market.

There is little change in the market for greens. Asparagus strings are becoming slightly more plentiful and smilax a little less plentiful. Boxwood is selling better. Ferns have gone up to $2 per thousand.

The Christmas Prospects.

The prospect for Christmas is beginning to be a theme for discussion. Everybody agrees that the demand will be large and that the supply will depend entirely upon the weather; pleasant weather means a good cut in practically every line, with sunless weather working a reduction in proportion to its continuance. The impression seems to be that the supply of Beauties will be large, with other roses in good quantity. Carnations look to be equal to the demand, with an excellent supply of violets and other stock.

One or two houses with specialties report that they already have booked a most satisfactory number of orders, but in general the buyers have made little inquiry for stock, seeming to be satisfied that the supply will be large and that they will have no difficulty in filling their wants.

Orders booked have been taken at the usual Christmas rates.

Club Meeting.

At its meeting at the Union restaurant December 2 the Horticultural Society of Chicago notified the Florists' Club that a committee had been appointed to confer with the club's committee looking to a closer coöperation of the two organizations in the 1910 flower show. The Horticultural Society's committee consists of W. N. Rudd, Carl Cropp, J. B. Deamud, E. Wienhoeber, August Poehlmann and F. B. Carpenter, all but the latter being also members of the Florists' Club.

George Sykes, Chicago manager for Lord & Burnham Co., New York; A. C. Kohlbrand, with E. C. Amling; J. H. Prost, the city forester, and Jos. Koeberquist, private gardener, were elected to membership. The name of E. B. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, was proposed.

Nominations of officers for the ensuing year were made as follows: For president, George Asmus; vice-president, H. E. Philpott; treasurer, E. F. Winterson; secretary, T. C. Yarnell and L. H. Winterson; trustees, Leonard Kill, H. N. Bruns, Albert T. Hey, F. F. Benthey, J. F. Klimmer, John Degnan, Alex. Henderson, Walter Scott, three to be elected.

The club voted to apply for membership in the Illinois Outdoor Art Association. A communication from Robert O'Dwyer pointed out a possibility for the club to secure representation on the State Board of Agriculture and the president was instructed to appoint a committee to push it along. T. E. Waters, who acted as secretary in the absence of Frank M. Johnson, who was in Kansas City that night on business for the A. L. Randall Co., was added to the committee which is to publish the club's by-laws and list of members.

The usual cigars and refreshments were served.

Various Notes.

The use of corrugated paper boxes for express shipments of cut flowers, a comparatively new thing, has been so generally adopted that the Sefton Mfg. Co. reports this department of its factory is having some difficulty in keeping pace with orders.

Webster Randall has been ill a few days—tobacco heart, the doctor said, and limited him to three smokes a day.

Frank Oechslin is looking forward to an extremely busy fortnight. His stock of plants is larger than ever, and the quality also is uniformly fine, for Mr. Oechslin is a believer in that oriental custom, the destruction of the weaklings.

The big special Thanksgiving edition of the Christian Science Monitor, a Boston daily newspaper, contained a Chicago supplement in which there appeared the advertisements of four Chicago retail florists, H. N. Bruns, J. F. Kidwell & Bro., C. A. Samuelson and Schiller.

A. C. Spencer says that he had made up his mind that the first part of December was going to be decidedly dull, but that he has been happily disappointed; business took a boost December 3 and has been good.

Miss Minnie Wattman, who presides over E. C. Amling's money-box and books, has been off duty for several days because of illness.

It is current report that the retail florists have now perfected a permanent organization, with Lovelace R. Bohannon at its head and Herbert Craig secretary, but when asked for the facts for publication Mr. Bohannon said he was too busy to talk, see Mr. Craig, and Mr. Craig declined to say anything at all. A circular letter has been prepared defining certain classes of buyers and orders as legitimately belonging to the retailers rather than anyone else.

Frank Ziska, who has spent twenty-six years in the wire business with his brother, Joseph Ziska, of the Chicago Rose Co., is opening a retail flower store at Twelfth street and Forty-third avenue.

It is reported that the cold snap caught John Evert's Sunday cut of chrysanthemums stored in an unheated shed.

A. E. Hunt, who has a stand in the Flower Growers' Market, says there was an error in the official list of awards given out for the Milwaukee flower show. He says that the award reported as having been made to Bassett & Washburn

Vaughan & Sperry say the city buyers are interested in the subject of Christmas Beauties.

E. E. Pieser says the Bonnaffons still coming in at Kennicott's are selling rather better than at any other time this season.

John P. Risch says the prospect for Christmas business looks better to him than it ever did before.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. predicts a great popularity for the Cardinal rose the next few weeks, buyers taking it in place of medium Beauties.

Phil Schupp says the Jardine rose is coming to the front every day now, in the J. A. Budlong greenhouses.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. says crops are on the up grade at New Castle and a large holiday cut is expected by all the growers there.

George Pieser says Hoerber Bros. will have a cut of Richmond from the ground shoots for Christmas.

C. W. McKellar says the long hoped for cattleya crop is beginning to loosen up.

While on his way from E. H. Hunt's to the Northwestern depot Thursday evening, December 2, C. M. Dickinson suffered a fall, which resulted in badly spraining his left hand and forearm, laying him up for several days. December 7 Mr. Dickinson and family moved into their new residence, just completed at Park Ridge.

John Kruchten painted the stairs to his enlarged office this week, and every time a visitor stepped or sat in the paint he put on a fresh coat, ready for the next one.

High Grade Tags Should Accompany High Grade Flowers

A Florist's patronage depends in large measure upon the little niceties of service and the reputation established for refinement and quality, both in appointments and stock.

An artistic, distinctive tag is as essential to the well-equipped Florist establishment as a choice location, for it is the Tag that accompanies the flowers and imparts first impressions.

Dennison's Florist Tags

are used by the leading Florists of the country. Such tags are of course specially designed—of fine white stock printed and embossed in colors. Dennison Tags are distinctive—artistic—impressive—refined. A Dennison Tag specially designed will heighten the popular estimation of your business conduct. It will create a pleasant impression everywhere it goes. It will be noticed—commented upon. Therefore a profitable investment.

In ordering, send your trade-mark and suggestions for special design to Dept. "C" at our nearest store.

E. F. Winterson Co. reports that some of the finest late Bonnaffons coming into this market are from J. R. Falkenstein, of Naperville, who will have them for some weeks to come. His 5,000 calla bulbs are expected to be in full crop for Christmas.

Bowling.

The bowlers are all tied up in a knot. At the session December 2 the Violets beat the Carnations two out of three and the two teams are now tied for first place. The Orchids and Roses also are tied for third in the league.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The present week opened with Indian summer weather, but with the prediction of snow and a western blizzard. There has never been so favorable a fall for the nursery interest; not yet has a killing frost visited this section. But the holiday season is in the air and the Adirondacks have sent the advance guard of the Christmas tree consignments. The usual dullness preceding the Christmas business is here, and while stock is somewhat scarce and prices steady, no immediate advance from present quotations seems probable. Beauties have not gone above 40 cents and December 6 fine stock was selling as low as 25 cents in large lots. The Beauty supply this season promises to be abundant. Local growers of the standby are increasing in numbers, as the impossibility of competing with the American Beauty is realized. Of the pink roses, My Maryland seems to be gaining in popularity. The supply of Killarney is enormous; 8 cents is a fair average for the tea roses, a few selected ones bringing a higher figure and the bulk of the shipments selling from 6 cents down.

The shipments of mums are lessening daily and still there are more of the late varieties than ever before in December. It seems as if there will be a fair supply left for Christmas. Prices hold well. There are plenty of carnations and the perfect stock and the novelties bring good prices, 4 cents being a fair average. The top for violets is 75 cents. Rhinebeck stock is fully up to the average of other years in size and quality. Notwithstanding immense shipments to the west, there seems no diminution in the New York supply and the left-overs go, as usual, to the street men at unquotable prices.

Lilies have advanced at times during the last week, selling up to 12 cents. Valley is firm at 3 cents to 4 cents and even 5 cents for selected stock. The orchid is still king and everything arriving sells on sight, the price holding steady at 75 cents. Cypripediums bring from 10 cents to 12 cents and are of splendid grade. Hyacinths, narcissi and stevias are abundant.

Cold weather is needed to put snap and life into the business. The outlook for the winter season, and especially for Christmas, is optimistic. Prosperity is general and the using of cut flowers and flowering plants for the holiday promises to break all records. The plantsmen were never so well prepared for the inevitable buying wave that will soon be sweeping over Long Island and New Jersey, and not a perfect plant of any kind will be left unsold. The out-of-town buyers are already here and shipments are still being made with safety.

John Young's Plans.

John Young has decided to give up the sale of cut flowers at wholesale and devote more of his time to the development of the range of greenhouses at Bedford, N. Y. Large additions to this place are being planned, especially the erection of a big block of houses for growing carnations. The entire output of this place will be consigned to Traendly & Schenck. N. W. Young's address will continue at the store, 51 West Twenty-eighth street, which it is rumored will be occupied by him and Mr. Fenrich.

Various Notes.

W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, was in the city December 6, making extensive purchases. "A great Christmas," is his prophecy.

G. E. Bradshaw celebrated his forty-third birthday December 4, twenty years having been spent in the florists' business. He expects to have a branch holly and evergreen store for the holidays, as usual.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will take place Monday evening, December 13, at the Grand Opera House building on West Twenty-third street. It is election night and there will be a record crowd and much that is interesting in exhibits and entertainment.

The Aphine Co. will demonstrate its insecticide Monday afternoon, December 13, at the big store of the Manhattan Flower Market, 46 West Twenty-eighth street, from 2 to 5 p. m. Treasurer Ebel hopes for a large attendance and solicits the shipment of any plants affected with any of the insects to which plants are subject.

John Egenbrod, formerly with A. J. Guttman, is now on the staff of Millang Bros.

Mr. Paterson, formerly with Charles Thorley and lately with John Nicholas, died suddenly last week after an opera-

C. C. Trepel has secured larger and more convenient space in his department at Losier's, Brooklyn, and is now ready for his usual big Christmas business. Both here and in his conservatory on top of Bloomingdale's a large display of blooming plants is already installed.

Harry Crawbuck has sold a part of his nursery at Summit, N. J., and will move to Brooklyn for the winter season.

At the auction sale last week of the contents of a flower store on West Forty-fifth street, by judicious publicity, many leading florists were on hand and several of them were purchasers. Mr. Mallon secured the big icebox for $100. One private party bid up and secured most of the plants at about double their retail value. Auctions may become popular.

Mr. Bonnet, of Bonnet & Blake, was away last week in his sloop on his final fishing excursion of the year.

W. H. Kuebler's florists' supply department in Brooklyn is growing rapidly and the firm is badly cramped for room. Mr. Kuebler says he will have mums far into the new year.

It is rumored that Henshaw & Fenrich will move from their present location shortly, to the opposite side of the street and the ground floor.

Kessler Bros. have a great stock of fine palms and blooming plants ready for the Christmas demand at their big store.

Reed & Keller say 1909 has been their banner year. Large shipments go out daily to all parts of the country.

Charles Millang will celebrate at Christmas his silver jubilee, having then completed twenty-five years of trade experience.

The engagement of Herman Berkowitz, the artist of the retail flower store of Young & Nugent, and Miss Beatrice Wagner is announced.

At the new store of the Flower Shop, on West Forty-second street, near the Knickerbocker hotel, Mr. Neff, the proprietor, has had many years' practical experience in both greenhouse and decorative management. Around the corner on Broadway the store of Mrs. J. W. Scallen has been divided and half the space of the old store is utilized.

The Kervan Co. is kept busy by the call for evergreen roping.

The ribbon houses say that all the Christmas plant arrangements will carry ribbons this year, if the volume of their sales is any indication. They are rushed.

Bowling.

The Astoria Club's scores last week show steady improvement. The latest project is a grand tournament at these alleys, instead of at New York, on the evening of Tuesday, December 21, to which Flatbush, Madison and the New York Florists' Club will be invited. The entire alleys will be at the disposal of the club and forty bowlers can be accommodated. Entries may be made with Phil Kessler, Captain Berry or with President Siebrecht, of the Astorias. Three fine turkeys will reward the winners. The scores last week were as follows:

WORCESTER, MASS.—It is reported that the city water commissioner has refused to supply water to the Worcester Conservatories at manufacturers' rates, on account of the ruling made by the law department that growing flowers and shrubs is not a manufacture. The manufacturers' rate is 10 cents per 1,000 gallons, while others pay 20 cents per 1,000.

DETROIT.

Breitmeyer's recently had their annual chrysanthemum show. They showed many vases of fancy varieties, all of them their own growing. The main feature of the show was their table decoration, which was changed daily. This attracted much attention. The table was in the large show window on the Broadway side and drew many people. The designs on the table were the work of the young ladies in the store and were quite unique. H. S.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The dark, yet mild weather of the last week kept the market well supplied in all lines. Local business with most of the retailers was rather slow; consequently the prices varied at different times. For the first time carnations were plentiful. There were also plenty of roses. In mums only a few odd lots of the later sorts come in and they do not cut much figure; they again are a thing of the past. Violets are good and are cleaned up readily. Plenty of stevia can be had, and also some Romans and Paper Whites.

Sunday afternoon, December 5, the mild weather was pushed to one side by a cold wave, when the thermometer took a drop of 40 degrees. This was accompanied by a strong west wind, blowing at the rate of forty miles an hour.

Club Meeting.

The club meeting on Thursday, December 2, was a record breaker, not only in attendance, but also in what was accomplished. It was the best attended meeting of the year 1909. Cards announcing the election of officers, the flower show, the executive committee's report and refreshments no doubt helped to bring the boys around. Everyone present seemed highly pleased with the report, even if it did not show a financial gain, and with the grand success which was achieved by the committee in charge. A resolution was adopted providing that a flower show be held next year, if a guarantee fund half as large as the one secured this year could be raised.

C. B. Whitnall, an honorary member of the club, was present and President Dallwig called on him for a few remarks. He tried to explain in brief, for it was getting late, the benefits of the proposed civic center which is commanding the interest at present of the Metropolitan Park Commission, of which he is a member. His remarks were highly interesting and instructive.

After the meeting the boys sat down to a venison lunch furnished by C. C. Pollworth and put up in a most appetizing way by Mrs. Pollworth. They dispersed at 12:30, saying that that was the finest venison lunch they ever partook of.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Nic Zweifel; vice-president, Alex. Klockner; treasurer, J. G. Heitman; secretary, Eugene Oestreicher; trustee for three years, Art. Leidiger; trustee for one year, to fill unexpired term of Mr. Zweifel, Gust Pohl.

Various Notes.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. expected its first car of holly the first part of this week. Mr. Pollworth, who has just returned from the northern woods, says that he thinks bouquet green will be a scarce article for the holidays, as there is too much snow up there. They are cutting large quantities of fine carnations at their greenhouses.

fit of the Milwaukee Infants' Home. The firm had an unusually large amount of funeral work on Monday, December 6, which necessitated considerable work on the Sunday previous.

Mr. Benke, of Loeffler & Benke, Watertown, Wis., was a visitor Sunday forenoon. An extra order for 2,500 violets which they could not get into this market on time, if they depended on transportation companies, was the cause of his presence in our midst.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports a good supply of Beauties from the Brown Deer plant. Shipping trade, which continues fine, helped keep stock from piling up at certain periods of the week.

BOSTON.

The Market.

While business has been pretty good, on the whole, during the last week, the unusually mild weather has made the output of flowers quite heavy, rather more than there was demand for. With somewhat cooler conditions now prevailing, there should be lessened production and brisker business all around. Chrysanthemums still come in from a number of growers, but do not now dominate the market. As a rule, they are rather small. Roses are extra fine, and the Beauties are making $4 and $5 per dozen for the best and are unusually good. Killarney and White Killarney are exceptionally fine. Richmond are also of excellent quality. Some fine Bride and Bridesmaid are seen, but these are now back numbers so far as selling goes, the Killarney and My Maryland being in the ascendant.

Carnations are cleaning up quite well, but large quantities are coming in, which will cause prices to lower. Violets are now quite equal to midwinter quality and do not show much change in prices. Singles easily lead in popularity. A few growers, however, are successful with Campbells and bring in good flowers. Sweet peas as yet do not sell well. With mums out of the way they will do better. Mignonette is arriving from several growers, but the spikes lack size. Valley, gardenias and orchids are all in good demand. Lilies are not overplentiful. Callas are also rather scarce. A few poinsettias have appeared, but it is too early for them to be selling at their best. Paper Whites and Romans are more plentiful. For green stock of all kinds there is a good demand. Advance orders for Christmas greens of all kinds are large.

m., Saturday, December 11, for the field day at Nashua, N. H. A large attendance is already assured.

Vigorous steps are being taken by the society for the protection of native plants to put an end to the excessive cutting of mountain laurel in this state for Christmas and other festivals. Efforts will be made to sufficiently arouse public sentiment so that districts where it grows abundantly will be closed to the dealer in greens. The demand will certainly soon use up the remaining supply, unless prohibition is enforced.

The Boston Flower Exchange, recently incorporated, held an important business meeting December 4. Excellent progress was reported in the selling of stock, and the new company starts out under bright auspices.

William Spillsbury, of Woburn, whose specialties are cucumbers and single violets, is handling large quantities of the latter of exceptional excellence. Mr. Spillsbury is one of our largest violet specialists and does them well.

November was an exceptionally mild month. The mean temperature was 46.5, against the normal for thirty-nine years of 41.2. It just equaled the warmest November on record. The rainfall, which all came at the end of the month, was 4.11 inches, a trifle over normal.

William T. Walker has a grand lot of Lorraine begonias and other flowering stock for Christmas, grown in that gentleman's usual finished style.

John Barr, of South Natick, has, as usual, a superb lot of cyclamen of just the right size for commercial use. Mr. Barr's houses of carnations are giving him a fine lot of blooms at present and will be in heavy crop for Christmas.

Beacon, Enchantress and Queen are three of Andrew Christensen's best paying carnations at Stoneham.

MILWAUKEE PLANS SHOW.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club will give another flower show next year, providing a guarantee fund can be raised to cover any danger of deficit. Members believe that no trouble will be encountered in raising this fund.

"We did not make any money at the last show, but were not disappointed," said W. E. Dallwig, former president, to a reporter December 4. "When we undertook to give the show it was with the realization that we would not make a profit. We had a guarantee fund, however, to cover all losses.

"A new executive committee will be appointed in January, and steps will be taken immediately for the next show. We will be in a position next year for an event that will eclipse the one held recently."

New officers for the ensuing year have been elected as follows: President, Nic Zweifel; vice-president, Alex Klockner; treasurer, J. G. Heitman; secretary, Eugene Oestreicher; trustee for three years, Arthur Leidiger; one year, Gust Pohl.

BALTIMORE.

Maryland State Horticultural Show.

With the largest and finest display of fruits and flowers in the history of the organization, the twelfth annual meeting and exhibition of the Maryland State Horticultural Society was formally opened at the Fifth Regiment Armory December 2. The armory was thronged with large crowds of interested visitors from the state and city.

Aside from the exhibits, the program of the society's meetings contained many valuable features in the way of lectures and other items.

As the visitor entered the armory the first thing to catch his eye was the immense landscape gardening exhibit of the park board of Baltimore, which had been placed in the center of the armory floor, under the direction of James Boone, superintendent of Clifton park. The space covered by this exhibit was 30x65 feet and it was a complete display of the work of the skilled landscape gardener.

With a border of potted tropical plants, the entire floor space was covered with sod from Clifton park. In the center was an immense mound of tropical plants; at the side were design beds which were perfect in every respect. The exhibit called forth the admiration of everyone and it was the largest of its kind ever seen under a roof in Baltimore.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. exhibited two immense beds of pompon chrysanthemums which were extra fine. They had about fifty varieties grouped together, with large vases of them arranged about the hall.

J. G. Harrison & Sons, of Berlin, Md., exhibited an immense lot of trees, both fruit and shrubbery of every variety. This exhibit was laid off with a hedge of California privet about two feet high.

The Griffith & Turner Co. and J. Bolgiano & Son both had large displays of seeds and tools of every description.

The awards in flowers were as follows:

Roses—American Beauty, George Morrison, first.

Red roses, other than American Beauty, Andrew Anderson, first; Stevenson Bros., second.

Pink roses, James Hamilton, first; John Cook, second.

White roses, Stevenson Bros., first; M. J. Hannigan, second.

Any color roses, James Hamilton, first; M. J. Hannigan, second.

American seedling rose, John Cook, first, with fine red, not yet disseminated.

Carnations—Rose-pink Enchantress, Philip B. Welch, first; I. H. Moss, second.

Enchantress, I. H. Moss, first; P. B. Welch, second.

Lawson shade, P. B. Welch, first, with Alvina; H. Weber & Sons, second.

Red, I. H. Moss, first; H. Weber & Sons, second.

White, George Morrison, first; I. H. Moss, second.

Variegated, H. Weber & Sons, first; George Morrison, second.

Henry Eichholz, of Waynesboro, Pa., received a certificate of merit for a crimson seedling carnation, Christmas Cheer.

Chrysanthemums—Twelve blooms pink, M. J. Hannigan, first; George Morrison, second.

Twelve blooms white, George Morrison, first; M. J. Hannigan, second.

Display of cyclamen, C. J. Gregorius, first.

Poinsettias, I. H. Moss, first.

Begonia Lorraine, George Morrison, first; F. C. Bauer, second.

Specimen fern, F. C. Bauer, first.

Assortment of crotons, George Morrison, first; M. J. Hannigan, second.

Window box of hardy plants, for window decorations, F. C. Bauer, first, I. H. Moss, second.

Window box of flowering plants, J. Bolgiano & Son, first.

Pressed flowers—Exhibit of native flowers, Dr. J. F. Harned, Oakland, Md., first.

Mantel decoration, R. L. Graham, first.

Collection of evergreens, I. H. Moss, first.

Collection of decorative plants, H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, first.

Collection of pompon chrysanthemums, R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., first.

The best novelty was a new carnation, Christmas Cheer, a fine scarlet in bloom. It had, by actual count, thirty-two buds and flowers. It was awarded a certificate of merit. It was exhibited by Henry Eichholz, of Waynesboro, Pa., who also raised Alvina, which has proved to be a fine pink and an excellent bloomer.

The Rising Eastern Market.

[All mail trains arriving in Chicago December 8 were delayed by snow and cold weather. The usual Philadelphia market report had not come to hand when the hour of going to press arrived. —Ed.]

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, held Tuesday evening, December 7, the paper by Charles Henry Fox, published on page 21 of this issue of the Review, was read. Hearty applause greeted its conclusion and a most interesting discussion followed, participated in by Adolph Farenwald, Samuel S. Pennock, Leo Niessen, Edward Reid, Joseph Heacock, J. Otto Thilow, John W. McIntyre, Robert Kift, Robert Craig, John Westcott and others. The growers told of their heavy expenses and the wholesalers cited the law of supply and demand as governing the prices of cut flowers, both at holiday seasons and other days of the year. Mr. Fox said he thought this law was set at defiance when flowers were sold cheaply the day after Christmas. The reply was that it was not stock that the shops could use. Mr. Pennock said he thought that if the retailers would help the market in times of oversupply by pushing flowers, prices at the holidays could be lower; in his view, extreme depression causes extreme altitude.

Henry Eichholz, of Waynesboro, Pa., exhibited a fine white sport from Chrysanthemum Helen Frick and a bright pink sport from Carnation Enchantress.

PHIL.

CHARLESTON, ILL.—Etta J. Nott says trade is excellent, roses and carnations looking fine and the sale of fall bulbs the best ever.

DIGHTON, MASS.—J. Harvey Briggs has completed a new greenhouse, at his residence on Williams street. The house will be used for violets and sweet peas.

SHRUBS FOR EASTER.

What is the proper treatment to give the following shrubs to have them in bloom for Easter: Amygdalus flora rubra, Prunus triloba, Weigelia Eva Rathke, Cytisus Laburnum, Magnolia stellata, Spiræa Van Houttei, wistaria, Genista Andreana? They were all imported this fall and pot grown.

S. N. P.

All the plants named are better left outdoors until they have had one or two freezings. The pots, of course, should be protected. Keep them in a frame, laying them on their sides if there is not much headroom, or in a cold cellar until it is time to start them. This will be preferable to leaving them outdoors, as they will be more easily got at when wanted.

Prunus triloba, Magnolia stellata, Amygdalus flore pleno rubra and Wistaria Sinensis will come into flower in forty days if started in a house with a night temperature of 60 degrees, removing them to 10 degrees less heat as they expand. The spiræas, weigelias and Cytisus Laburnum should be allowed two weeks longer. Genista Andreana we prefer to start about the new year in a cool greenhouse. It is better when not subjected to hard forcing. Of course, by starting any or all of the plants early in January in a temperature of 50 degrees they will flower by March 27, and if you have bench space to spare and can grow them in this way they will be all the better for it. Any which may seem somewhat late can easily be pushed two or three weeks before Easter. It is of course possible by hard forcing to get these shrubs in flower in less time than we have named, but the flowers will be much lacking in substance and will wilt quickly if exposed to cool draughts.

SHARON, MASS.—Mrs. Jennie P. Snow has opened a flower stand at Somerville, Mass., in the store of W. C. Stickle, newsdealer, in Teele square.

P/M QUALITY

BEAUTIES

Philadelphia Growers have a national reputation for the quality of their Beauties and it is with pride that we can say the best are coming to the P/M establishment. They are now cutting freely all lengths, especially the better grades, quality, deep rich color and long, heavy bud, satisfying the most critical buyers.

Mission No. 1.

Florists' Baskets

Our aim is Artistic Baskets; that is what makes them appeal to discriminating people. Every basket is made by hand, and finished as if our whole reputation depended upon that particular basket. Madison Basketcraft Co.'s baskets are designed for use as well as beauty. They are practical, indestructible, made of willow in odd and artistic shapes, and colored in various delicate tones. Greens, gun metal and browns are the best colors.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Another week of bright weather has brought quantities of flowers into the market. Roses were never better at this season of the year, nor carnations more plentiful. In fact, the quantities coming in make one feel that there will be nothing left when the bad weather comes, which is likely to happen any day now. Notwithstanding the big cut, the wholesalers seem to get rid of it all. The shipping business has been exceptionally good, and this, with an increased demand in the city and a rather extraordinary day's business Saturday, seemed to clean up nearly everything in sight that sold at a reasonable price.

The retail shops are slowly bringing out holiday goods. As a rule, they do not show these more than two weeks before Christmas and they are in no hurry this year, as the weather seems to make them look out of place.

Various Notes.

Harvey Sheaf, manager for Mrs. E. A. Williams, caught the crowd last week with a gold window. The background was green. With the new gold basket, a vase of yellow orchids and specimen plants of yellow crotons, it was really artistic and deserved the many compliments it received. Mr. Sheaf generally uses one kind of flowers in his window and gets an effect that is always artistic.

A. W. Smith, in the many windows in his big store, has many effects, which are changed every day, and there is always a study for the passer-by that makes it worth while going out of the way to see what is new.

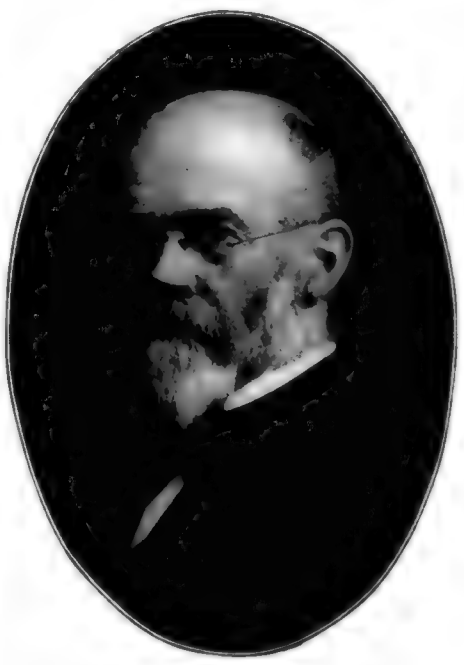
Randolph & McClements, in their several windows, showed fine effects in roses and orchids. The corner on the Beatty street side showed ferns. On the Baum street side were Lorraine begonias, crotons and other blooming flowers.

H. L. Blind & Bros., in the Center avenue store, had a fine show of begonias and other plants, arranged to catch the eye of the connoisseur.

In fact, a person passing from one shop window to another does not wonder when he sees customers inside, and though in the trade yourself, you can scarcely resist going in and buying some of the pretty things. I believe it is not saying too much when I give the retailers in this city credit for showing, not the most lavish display, but fully as artistic effects as are seen anywhere in the country, and this is largely responsible for the quantity of flowers sold in this city. The day when a dealer got in his supply, placed it in the refrigerator and waited for someone to come in and buy is past.

William Loew, the Christmas green goods man, is as much in evidence as ever. He is like a ball player; every year is his last until the next comes around.

John Bader unloaded several cars of imported stock last week and several more are expected this week. Mr. Bader reports the plant trade as above the average and getting better.



John Foss, who scratched his hand about Thanksgiving, is at the hospital. Blood poison set in and it is reported that he may lose his arm.

John Murchie, of Sharon, Pa., was a visitor, spending a day with Fred Burki in going over the plant of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. Mr. Murchie is one of

Carnation Dorothy Gordon

Joseph Heacock—Disseminator

THIS is a new Carnation of rich color, large size and striking beauty, introduced and now offered for sale by the Joseph Heacock Company, Wyncote, Pa. It is a seedling of Lawson on Enchantress, and has been given a series of very thorough trials which fully warrant the statements now made for it.

Dorothy Gordon Carnation was first exhibited at the annual meeting of the American Carnation Society at Washington, in March, 1908. It there received a Certificate of Merit and the following score: Color, 22 points; Size, 18; Calyx, 3; Stem, 20; Substance, 8; Form, 12; Fragrance, 3—a total of 86 points.

At a meeting of the National Gardeners' Association in New York this year, "Dorothy Gordon" was awarded a silver cup as the best seedling for 1909. Further description will be found on the next page.

Dorothy Gordon—For Whom Named

Carnation Dorothy Gordon

A more vigorous grower than Pink Enchantress, and entirely free from disease. Produces an abundance of large and fragrant flowers in good form on long, stiff stems; flowers average over three inches diameter. The color is a shade darker than Pink Enchantress.

Extract from the minutes of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, January 5, 1909

Your committee on Novelties visited the establishment of Joseph Heacock Company and examined their new Carnation, "Dorothy Gordon," on December 30. The variety resembles Rose Pink Enchantress in color and form, but it is superior to that variety in being of a more uniform color, and is also larger and of greater substance. It is of stronger constitution and has a stiffer flower stem. Your committee tested the keeping qualities and find them to be good The flowers were kept in an ordinary potting shed, and were salable four days after being cut.

Attest: DAVID RUST, Secretary

Although we had not advertised the Carnation "Dorothy Gordon" previous to November 1 we had up to that time sold 60,000 rooted cuttings on the merit of the plant itself. We are thoroughly convinced that "Dorothy Gordon" is a Carnation of decided value, and have accordingly greatly enlarged our facilities for growing it. Our Houses are in charge of an experienced propagator, assuring the production of strictly "Quality Stock."

Double the Profits of Enchantress

Our experience has convincingly demonstrated that "Dorothy Gordon" will yield, in actual cash, double the returns that can be expected from Enchantress. When given the best of attention, Enchantress produced one-third less flowers than did "Dorothy Gordon" under the same conditions; moreover, the flowers of "Dorothy Gordon" brought us 50 per cent more money in the market. Using as a basis, therefore, the price paid for Enchantress, "Dorothy Gordon" made the following showing.

100 Enchantress, worth, say . . .	$6.00
Additional value of extra one-third produced by "Dorothy Gordon" . .	2.00
Fifty per cent higher price received for "Dorothy Gordon"	4.00
	$12.00

These are conservative figures, supported by our experience, showing conclusively that "Dorothy Gordon" can and does produce twice as much money as Enchantress, with the same care.

WINTERING BOXWOOD.

I have some boxwoods that I bought about three months ago. I am keeping them in my store-room and keep them moderately damp. The leaves are turning brown and are falling off and the plants look as if they were going to die. Will you please tell me something about the treatment of them? F. B. F.

Boxwoods, like bay trees, should have a cool shed, cellar or store-room over winter. They are almost hardy and dislike fire heat and its drying influences. I am afraid your plants must have suffered from dryness at the roots, either before or since you received them. You must keep the soil constantly moist. Dry conditions at the root annually kill more evergreens than cold. It is not unusual for the leaves to assume a brownish tinge after the arrival of cold weather and some will probably fall from time to time. Keep the plants moderately cold; just clear of frost will answer, but wherever they are, never let them get in the least dry at the root. Place them outdoors early in May. C.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The retail business last week was not at all satisfactory. There is no steady demand and we hope that the cold wave that came down on us Sunday, December 5, will make the business more lively from now on. There were no receptions or weddings of any note and the only work that kept some of us busy was the funerals, which used up considerable quantities of white stock and left the colored stock in the hands of the wholesalers. Stock of all kinds has been plentiful all during the last week. The wholesalers say that the demand was weak and that quite a lot of stock was dumped, especially colored stock.

Chrysanthemums are coming to an end fast and this week will about see the last of them for this season. Carnations have been coming in heavily of late and of excellent quality in all varieties. Roses, too, are most plentiful in all grades and varieties, with prices low. Beauties are coming in fine, with fair demand only. Romans and Paper Whites promise to be good and plentiful this season. Harrisii and callas sell well, but there are not any too many coming in. Violets are not so good, but the colder weather will bring them out. Everything in greens can be had in plentiful supply.

Various Notes.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville; Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, and Henry Emunds, of Belleville, were visitors last week, buying supplies. All had a good word for Thanksgiving business.

C. A. Kuehn is putting a fresh coat of paint on his store front. The wire and supply departments are kept busy now for the holiday trade.

Mrs. Berry, grandmother of George B. Windler and Robert J. Windler, died last week. The funeral took place from her late residence on South Virginia avenue. There were many beautiful floral designs sent by friends in the trade.

John Connon, of Webster Groves, is cutting a nice lot of carnations for this market. Mr. Connon says he has a large wedding to furnish, in the city, next week.

The Kelley Floral Co., at Eighteenth and Olive streets, is having a big run on goldfish. Its window display has been attractive during the last week.

Miss M. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., has been a guest of Miss M. Meinhardt since the flower show. Miss Vesey likes St. Louis very much.

Ostertag Bros. have several swell weddings for this month. They have had an unusual amount of funeral work during the last week.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. is having a good run on florists' supplies of all kinds. Its consignments of carnations and violets have been large.

Miss Theresa Badaracco has been rather busy since Thanksgiving with work of all kinds. She is known as the art florist.

Henry Berning is receiving good consignments daily from A. Jablonsky, William Winter and Mr. Ude. Carnations have been coming in heavily of late.

Alex. Johnson has all of his new houses completed.

Hugo Gross, of Kirkwood, daily is sending to this market a fine lot of carnations and violets. A fine lot of sweet peas will be in soon.

Fred H. Weber, on Boyle avenue, has displayed in his show house a fine lot of blooming and decorative plants. Business has been good with him of late.

George Angermueller has had good consignments of American Beauties and other roses during the last week.

The plant trade has been improving of late with the west end florists, who are showing some fine stock. Charles Beyer, William Schray & Sons, R. J. Windler and Sanders have some excellent stock coming on for the holidays.

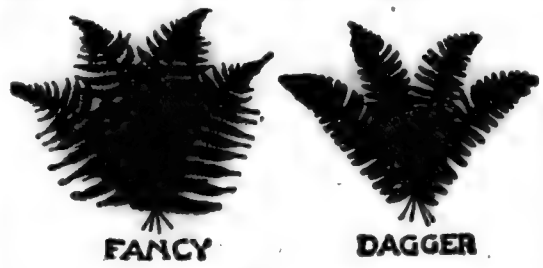
The management of the poultry show, which is being held this week at the Coliseum, has invited all the members of the Florists' Club, who attend the club meeting Thursday, to visit the show in a body after the meeting.

J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind., was a recent visitor. J. J. B.

Max Herzog, the florist and landscape gardener, formerly located at 6957 Scanlan avenue, is preparing to open a store, with a greenhouse attached, at 2600 California avenue. The new place will be ready for business about Christmas.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.



Excepting for funeral work, there was little doing last week. It was the usual lethargy that follows a holiday. The cleaning-up of mums is now on, although several of the growers have small crops that have been held back for Christmas. Carnations are coming in their best form, Beacon and Enchantress holding the popular favor. In nearly every instance they are of good size and good color and have long, stiff stems.

The first of the potted stock for the Christmas holidays has made its appearance, Jerusalem cherries, cyclamens, primroses, palms and ferns now being seen. Azaleas and poinsettias will begin to arrive in a day or two, with a small quantity of bulbous stock. Greens have also made their bow, but it will be ten days before this feature attains its height.

Various Notes.

The funeral of Carl H. Jurgens took place from his home on Pelham street, Newport, Monday morning, November 29, and was, by the wish of the deceased, of a simple character. There was no singing and no pallbearers. The house overflowed with relatives, friends and associates. It was appropriate that the deceased should be covered with his favorite flower, valley. The casket cover of this flower was arranged by Gibson Bros. There were many floral tributes from gardeners, the Newport Horticultural Society, many of its leading members and florists. The employees of the deceased, fifty or more in number, who marched in a body, headed by the foreman and oldest employee, Henry Nissen, sent a large wreath of roses. The interment was in the Island cemetery.

HOW CEMENT IS MADE.

Portland cement—it gets its name from its resemblance to the color of Portland stone—is now so largely used about greenhouse establishments that florists in general may be interested in the manufacture of the article. The Atlas Portland Cement Co., the largest firm in its line, has issued a book on cement and its uses, from which the following paragraphs are taken:

"Portland cement is manufactured from a mixture of two materials, one of them a rock like limestone, or a softer material like chalk, which is nearly pure lime, and another material like shale, which is a hardened clay or else clay itself. In other words, there must be one material which is largely lime and another material which is largely clay, and these two must be mixed in exact proportions, determined by chemical tests, the proportions of the two being changed every few hours, if necessary, to allow for the variation in the chemical composition of the materials.

"Portland cement, then, is made by quarrying each of these two materials, crushing them separately, mixing them in the exact proportions, and grinding them to a very fine powder. This powder is fed into long rotary kilns, which are iron tubes about five or six feet in diameter, lined with fire brick and over 100 feet long. Powdered coal is also fed into the kilns with the ground rock and burned at a temperature of about 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit, a temperature higher than that needed to melt iron to a liquid, and there is formed what is called cement clinker, a kind of dark, porous stone which looks like lava.

"After leaving the kiln, the clinker is cooled, crushed and ground again to a still finer powder, so fine, in fact, that most of the particles are less than 1/200 of an inch in size, and this grinding brings it back to a light gray color.

"It is now placed in storage tanks or stock houses, where it remains for a while to season before it is put into bags or barrels and shipped. The barrels weigh 400 pounds gross, or 376 pounds net. When shipped in bags, the weight is ninety-four pounds per bag, four bags being equal to one barrel.

"Portland cement must be stored in a dry place, that is, in a barn or shed, for dampness is the only element which will injure its quality. The cement will become lumpy and even form a solid mass when kept in a damp place, and when in this condition it should not be used. All lumps which do not crumble at the lightest blow should be thrown out.

"Cement stored in a building must not be placed on the bare ground. Make a platform which is at least six inches above the ground, and store the cement on this platform. If the building has a concrete floor it is advisable to cover the floor with planking, upon which to place the cement.

"Concrete is composed of a certain amount or proportion of cement, a larger amount of sand, and a still larger amount of stone. The fixing of the quantities of each of these materials is called proportioning. The proportions for a mix of concrete given—for instance, one part of cement to two parts of sand to four parts of stone or gravel—are written 1:2:4, and this means that one cubic foot of packed cement is to be mixed with two cubic feet of sand and with four cubic feet of loose stone.

"If, when placing concrete with the proportions specified, a wall shows many voids or pockets of stone, use a little more sand, and a little less stone than called for. If, on the other hand, when placing, a lot of mortar rises to the top, use less sand and more stone in the next batch."

We have had a nice trade this season on pansies; the Review did it.—J. H. Krone, Jr., Fort Smith, Ark.

SYRINGA JAPONICA.

By botanists the different species of syringa are divided into two groups, firstly, the true lilacs, represented by Syringa vulgaris, and, secondly, the ligustrina group, of which Syringa Japonica is an example. The members of this last are distinguished from the true lilacs by flowering later, and by having large panicles of smaller, privet-like flowers. All of them are white in color. The best of this section is S. Japonica, good specimens being simply a mass of white, covered with their large, branching panicles of blossoms. The fragrance is less pronounced than in the case of the common lilac. At a little distance the name of the group, ligustrina, is apparent, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine, as the inflorescence much resembles that of some of the privets, such as Ligustrum lucidum or L. Japonicum. At all events, Syringa Japonica forms a most ornamental small tree for a lawn of limited extent.

WIREWORMS.

Prof. H. A. Surface says that the later in the autumn the cultivation is continued the better will be the success in destroying the larvæ of wireworms. If it be continued until the soil is cold the pests will be much less active in providing winter retreats for themselves, and, therefore, will be much more certainly killed. In fact, it is important that the ground be stirred deeply just before the winter freezing sets in. If the cultivation be not late enough, the grubs or worms that are turned up toward the surface and exposed to the cooler temperature will have time to work down where it is warmer, and thus escape the destruction of freezing and defeat the very purpose of the cultivation. Thus cultivation can stop too soon in the autumn, but cannot be continued too late, if the purpose is to destroy wireworms, grubworms or other pests in the ground.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Ralph J. Bruce, of this city, has purchased the farm formerly owned by the late John H. Ockington, at South Deerfield, and will grow a high grade of outdoor stock. Mr. Bruce is a successful grower of dahlias and gladioli and has received first prizes at various exhibitions.

WESTFIELD, MASS.—C. H. Jacobs, who recently purchased the establishment of Henry Barton on Elm street, held a formal opening at the store, November 5. Mr. Jacobs was in business on Smith avenue for several years.

BUFFALO.

S. A. Anderson tells us that he has a complete stock for Christmas. His begonias are his leader. He also reports a big sale on his artificial poinsettia.

Conrad Forbach, as he always does, has a fine lot of cyclamens, but he is disappointed in not being able to grow the Lorraine, owing to the conditions at his place. He showed specimen plants of this stock when he was the grower for Rebstock.

The William Scott Co. has succeeded again in getting the poinsettias to perfection. Plants grown singly, pans and combination are fine here.

Charles E. Schoenhut has completed his store and has finished decorations. His place is a big improvement over his smaller store, where he was greatly handicapped for room. R. A. S.

weather in sight, no doubt the wholesale houses will clean up daily.

Roses, except American Beauties, have been equal to the demand and prices have stiffened up on them accordingly, top grades reaching $5 per dozen, wholesale. Violets and valley were of short supply. Paper Whites are now coming in quantity and fetch $3 per hundred. Green goods are plentiful in all sorts, with a steady call.

Various Notes.

J. T. Herdegen, of Aurora, Ind., was a caller last week.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE Wisconsin pea canners are in convention at Milwaukee this week.

THERE are still some varieties of muskmelon that are being sought for, and apparently are scarce.

BEAN deliveries will be more satisfactory than peas, from latest accounts. There will be quite a cut on some of the popular sorts, however.

J. B. GIBSON, representing the Routzahn Seed Co., Arroyo Grande, Cal., who is now in the east, reports a most satisfactory business all along the line.

KELWAY & SON, the well-known seedsmen, of Langport, England, say this is a year in which it is not necessary to push seed sales, seeds are so scarce.

THE pro rata delivery of peas has in most cases been made, and although the percentage is low in many cases, the recipients seem to be grateful for that much.

THE market gardeners' store of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is now located at 810 West Randolph street, where it has fitted up one of the best equipped market gardeners' stores in the country.

TRADE in general is reported to be in good shape and the outlook for the coming year is all that could be desired. The wholesale seedsmen are busy filling and shipping orders out and the catalogue men are preparing for the best year in their history.

THE produce dealers, who have been complaining about the unseasonable weather hurting their business, have nothing to complain about at present. The onion set people are also better satisfied now that the zero weather mark has been reached.

IT looks as though the valley crop in Germany must have been large and importers buying on the same scale as two years ago.

THE many friends of Fred King, of Mandeville & King, Rochester, will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. King a few days ago.

THE shipments from the other side are not coming over fast enough to suit the majority of those interested, and the worst of it is that the varieties most needed are the ones that come slowest.

THIS is one of the years when there seem to be enough onion seeds for all purposes. The shortages of the last year or two induced the amateur to try his hand at growing, which in a measure is responsible for the present sufficiency.

BEANS are coming in heavily now, and the shortages are becoming more apparent. While a few sorts are extremely short, there is a price limit beyond which beans can not be sold at retail and substitute varieties will be taken instead.

HENRY A. SALZER, president of the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., is a director in the American Timber Holding Co., a six million dollar corporation. Mr. Salzer also is president of the Henry A. Salzer Lumber Co. and has other holdings of timber and timber lands.

game, disinclined to shoulder a big job without an adequate profit.

Albert McCullough, Cincinnati, has taken up his routine after a month's outing in Florida.

Seedsmen who are interested in the market gardening trade should take a look at page 71 of this copy of the Review.

Otto Katzenstein & Co., Atlanta, Ga., report that quite a number of the mail-order seed houses will catalogue their new vegetable, Helianti, this season.

H. W. Beck & Sons Co., who handle seeds, principally grass and field, at St. Louis, suffered a fire loss of close to $25,000 November 29. Their building was destroyed.

The speculative community of grain dealers finds no joy in the reports that come to hand of farmers building private elevators on their farms for the purpose of withholding their crops until the cash market suits the producer.

The newly organized Ozark Seed Co., Springfield, Mo., is rushing the remodeling of the building it will occupy at 209 West Commercial street and will soon be ready for business. The officers of the concern are: President, J. R. Barrett; vice-president, R. R. Ricketts; secretary, A. S. E. Sanders.

DUNCAN BANKRUPT.

William A. Duncan, proprietor of the Duncan Seed Co., 412 Felix street, St. Joseph, Mo., filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy November 27. The liabilities are given at $10,109, and assets at $5,402.93, of which $2,700 is claimed as exempt. C. E. Walker, of Kansas City, is the largest creditor, with a claim of $1,182. The other creditors are: German American National Bank, $800; First National Bank, $1,000; Harding Manufacturing Co., Hudson, Mich., $333.93; Mangelsdorf Brothers Co., Atchison, $580; Chesmore Eastlake Mercantile Co., $432; American Printing Co., $112; Dadant & Sons, Hamilton, Iowa, $612; Leahy Manufacturing Co., Higginsville, Mo., $351. James J. Garth has been appointed temporary receiver.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending November 27 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto	20	$ 255	Lycopod'm	36	$ 2885
Anise	30	350	Millet	4425	10259
Canary	330	2167	Mustard	675	6831
Castor	3024	13231	Poppy	919	4989
Clover	150	4627	Rape	166	781
Fennel	8	248	Other		3571
Grass	355	3155

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $44.332; peas, $8,091, and beans, $8,301.

CLARK'S GREEN BAY PLANT.

The Gazette at Green Bay, where Arthur B. Clark has been spending some weeks, recently printed a description of the new plant there of the Everett B. Clark Co., which is of sufficient interest to the trade to justify printing it in this department almost in full:

"One of the new concerns to begin business in an entirely new building in Green Bay is the Everett B. Clark Seed Co. This company purchased a piece of property along Fox river over a year ago and last spring began the erection of its building. It is now completed and the company has been doing business since September. The property, building, machinery and factory equipment cost about $15,000. The company employs some seventy people at this plant and brings a large number of farmers to the city with the crops each season. Farmers all through this vicinity are under contract to furnish seeds from the stock of peas supplied by the Clark people.

"E. L. Olmsted is manager of the company's business here. The Everett B. Clark Seed Co. is one of the oldest concerns of its kind in the country. Everett B. Clark was its president until the time of his death a few years ago. Now his sons, Arthur B. Clark and Frederick M. Clark, have full charge of the business. Both are young men who learned what they know of the seed business from their father and have associated with them men of wide experience and men capable of handling the biggest projects in connection with the seed industry. The main offices are located at Milford, Conn., and besides this Wisconsin branch there is one at East Jordan, Mich., and an auxiliary branch at Sister Bay. The East Jordan and Green Bay plants are of about the same size and capacity. The company is engaged in the growing of seed for the wholesale trade. Commercial peas are handled on a commission, but no particular attention is paid to that line by the branch houses.

"The building which the Everett B. Clark Seed Co. has erected here is substantial, well ventilated and well equipped. It is constructed of cement blocks throughout and is three stories high. The Schuette Cement Construction Co., of Manitowoc, erected the structure. This concern holds the rights on this particular make of cement block. DUNCAN BANKRUPT.

Malcolm V. Duncan, proprietor of the Duncan Seed Co., 412 Felix street, St. Joseph, Mo., filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy November 27. The liabilities are given at $10,109, and assets at $5,302.93, of which $2,700 is claimed as exempt. C. L. Walker, of Kansas City, is the largest creditor, with a claim of $1,182. The other creditors are: German American National Bank, $800; First National Bank, $1,000; Harding Manufacturing Co., Hudson, Mich., $333.93; Mangelsdorf Brothers Co., Atchison, $780; Chesmore Eastlake Mercantile Co., $132; American Printing Co., $112; Dadant & Sons, Hamilton, Iowa, $602; Leahy Manufacturing Co., Higginsville, Mo., $351. James J. Garth has been appointed temporary receiver.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending November 27 were as follows:

Name	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Anise	20	$ 255	Lycopodium	36	$ 2885

stored in the building, by virtue of this construction.

"The building is 36x100. The cement blocks up to the first floor are twelve inches thick and from that floor to the top they are nine inches thick. The first floor is twelve feet in the clear, the second floor is ten feet eight inches high and the third floor ranges from seven and one-half feet to eleven feet high. All of the weight of the building rests upon pilasters and there are eight of these pilasters along each side wall and two on the end walls. Heavy beams extend through from wall to wall and rest upon the pilasters. These pilasters are of heavy construction and give the building a solid, massive appearance, and insure firmness.

"The main floor is of cement construction. The bed of the cement is five inches thick, with one inch of surface dressing. The second and third floors are of mill construction, with maple as the top material. The fire risk is materially reduced on account of this construction.

"The process through which the seeds pass from the time of their arrival at the plant until they are finally ready for shipment is so complete that the seeds are as thoroughly cleaned and perfect as human hands and improved machinery can make them. All seeds arrive at the plant in bags. They come either by boat, by rail or by farmer's wagon. They are unloaded onto trucks having a carrying capacity of twelve bags; the average load weighs approximately 2,500 pounds. The seeds are taken aboard an elevator on the trucks and lifted to the third floor, where the process of cleaning them starts. On the north side of the third floor is situated what is known as the feed bin. The peas are removed from the bags to this feed bin and pass down to the mill on the second floor. This mill is called the '29 Clipper' and is used in ninety-nine per cent of the seed plants in the country. It has a capacity of 200 bushels per hour and is operated by an electric motor. It carries four screens, each screen being 48x66 inches. It also carries two fans. The upper fan takes out all dust, dirt, chaff, etc., from the seed stock and then the peas pass over two sets of screens and the small peas are removed. Next the peas pass through a second strong air blast and this process removes the light weight peas. Pulleys are used so that the speed of the mill may be regulated.

"What is called the dust room is a part of the mill. It derives its name from the fact that all dust and dirt, refuse of all kinds, accumulate in this room. The lighter weight dust is blown out through a window, while the heavier dust settles on the floor and is removed. The heavier screening drops through a chute and eventually gets to the first floor and is there drawn off in bags and disposed of. Waste is taken out in eight grades from this mill. The A. T. Ferrell Co., Saginaw, Mich., is the builder of the mill and representatives of the company aided in installing it. Mr. Olmsted had the mill placed so that it takes up as little room as possible and each bit of space around it is utilized for some purpose or other. All available space is put to some purpose and as much of the floors is used for the storage of seeds as possible.

"After leaving the mill the peas drop to the main floor into ba~ and the seed stocks are then taken back to the third floor.

"On the south side of the third floor of the building are six feeder bins connected with the picking tables on the south side of the second floor. These six picking bins afford room for sixty pickers. Girls act as pickers and it is their duty to sort out the small, defective and split peas from the perfect ones. The peas come down through a chute onto the picking tables and as they do so the girls take out the defective and spoiled peas. A board accommodates four pickers. Each girl works close to a separate slot through which the peas pass from the feeder bins to the picking tables. The board is arranged so that the peas sorted out by one picker do not come in contact with the peas sorted out by another picker. In this way a good picker can be easily distinguished from a poor picker and the blame placed when poor peas leave the picking table.

"An inspector is present in the room in which the picking tables are situated and he passes upon the peas as they are sorted by the girls. Each girl draws a quantity of the peas down into a box and as the inspector walks by and examines them he pulls out a slide and the peas drop further down to bins built on the main floor, where the peas are ready to be drawn out into bags and are in condition to be placed upon the scale, weighed and tied up ready to be shipped. Ample light enters the picking room and the other rooms through a long row of windows. Good light is absolutely necessary in the picking room. The Everett B. Clark Seed Co. will turn out nearly one car per day this season. The number may not exceed five cars per week, however, depending upon various circumstances. This season a total of perhaps 40,000 bushels of seeds may be handled by this plant.

"Farmers are supplied with stock seed in the spring and they are paid for all that is raised over the amount of stock seed. As the farmer delivers his supply of seeds grown, the bag is tagged so that there can be no confusion or mistake as to whom the peas belong to. The entire crop of one farmer may be run through the mill before another farmer's crop is touched. The difference in quality may be noted in each particular instance under this arrangement. There have been cases where farmers have sold the crop of seed peas on the market, but correct records are kept, and in case of a breaking of contract the farmer is generally dealt with severely.

"The Clark plant is located so that it can receive and ship peas by both lake and rail. A dock extends from the plant to the Fox river, where the water is deep enough to permit large steamers to land. A siding running to the front door of the plant is accessible to four railroads, the Chicago & North-Western, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Green Bay & Western and the Kewaunee, Green Bay & Western.

"The elevator installed in the plant is made by the Otis Elevator Co. It has a lifting capacity of 5,000 pounds and a speed of thirty feet per minute. The building is lighted by electricity. Steam heat is used in the office and lower floor and hot water in the picking room and other parts of the building."

foliage, which practically lies on the surface of the pots, and are hard to reach. A weekly fumigation will keep them well in hand. A good compost for the last potting consists of three-fourths fibrous loam and one-fourth well rotted and dried cow manure, with some broken charcoal, soot and sharp sand added to keep it sweet and porous.

Callas.

Where callas are grown in pots, as they generally are, the flowers will now be coming more plentifully and of increasing size. The pots are now probably well filled with active roots and the plants should have waterings with liquid manure at least once a week. If an ample space at potting time was left for water, a light surface dressing once a fortnight of Clay's fertilizer, mixed with fine loam, will be found beneficial. Never allow callas to suffer from lack of water. Remember that they are semi-aquatics and must have an abundant supply while in active growth.

Lilacs.

The earliest lilacs should now be placed in a warm, moist and dark pit or cellar. A mushroom house is an excellent place for this class of stock, but these are scarce on commercial establishments. Early winter lilacs are usually entirely without foliage and of course are somewhat fragile. If they can be allowed to expand in the light, they will have better substance and some foliage. Syringe them freely. Given a night temperature of 70 degrees, lilacs can be flowered in a month in winter. As a rule, it pays to give them a little more time and not grow them in the dark all the time. Marie Legraye and Charles X are still the popular forcing varieties. Each comes white, of course, when grown in the dark.

Japanese Anemones.

To increase the stock of Japanese anemones, lift a few plants before the ground freezes up. Cut the roots into pieces one-fourth to one-half inch long and lay on a propagating bench. Just cover with sand. Water freely. With a bottom heat of 60 to 70 degrees many will start to grow in a few days, and in a month the bench should be green with foliage. Potted off later, gradually hardened and planted out early in April, these will flower well the following fall. For florists' use A. Japonica alba and the double variety Whirlwind are the most valuable.

Pansies.

It is not too late to plant pansies for winter or early spring flowering in a cool house. Let the soil be well manured and run the temperature as you would for violets. Plants in frames should have a covering of leaves or hay after the soil is firmly frozen. Let all covering be

Forcing Gladiolus

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladiolus are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose.

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $3.25 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.

Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs. 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.

Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

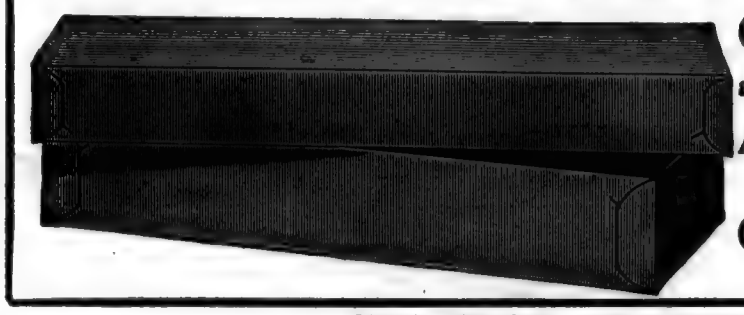
perfectly dry and endeavor to keep it dry where you have sashes over them. Plants outdoors are better not covered at all until the ground is frozen hard. Then cover them, but only lightly, with leaves, hay, straw or pine needles. It is not the early winter frosts which injure these so much as the constant changes in March, which keep the ground alternately thawed and frozen.

Propagating.

The propagating bench or benches should have had the sand and drainage renewed and, now that there is a nice, steady bottom heat, propagation of many plants can be effected. Any bedding plants of which there is an insufficient stock can now be readily increased. Be sure to give such subjects as crotons, coleus, achyranthes, etc., a bench with more bottom heat than is necessary for verbenas, ageratums, chrysanthemums or carnations. Provided the bench has ample drainage and sand of the right porosity, there is far more likelihood of underwatering the cuttings than the reverse. More cuttings, it is safe to say, are ruined by being kept too dry than too moist. It is not sufficient to merely damp over the cuttings. Give the bench a watering each day which will thoroughly wet the sand and your cuttings will appreciate it.

Compost.

Before the winter sets in it is well to lay under cover a generous supply of loam, decayed manure, leaf-mold, sand and other soil constituents. It is not a pleasant task to go foraging for supplies with the thermometer at zero and the ground thickly covered with snow, as is often the case. If it is not possible to house a sufficient supply in sheds which are heated, lay at least a goodly quantity under cover, if only in an open shed, where rain and snow will not reach it.



In December there are often mild spells when it is possible to plow up or cut a supply of turfy loam to stack up for next season's supply. A good plan is to make a square pile and add one-fourth as much cow manure as there is loam. This, if chopped down and turned over in spring, will make an excellent soil for mums, carnations and many other plants.

DON'T WAIT.

A subscriber has sent the Review a marked copy of the local newspaper containing an obituary notice and also sends a postal card on which he wrote:

Probably you have heard of this, but I send it anyway; if everybody waited for the other fellow you would not get it at all.

The Review appreciates the thoughtfulness of its readers in sending it not only important items, but those of minor importance as well. It has happened that because someone thought "Oh, well! They know all about this," and did not act on his first impulse to drop us a line, or send us a wire, we altogether missed an important piece of news. Don't sit back and wait because you think some other fellow has sent in the same piece of news. Important matters should be reported by wire if mail will not arrive Wednesday. Telegrams containing news matter only are accepted by the telegraph companies at a special rate, if marked "Collect press rate." The night rate is half the day rate.

A Hedge of Roses at Portland, Ore., Photographed September 10.

PACIFIC COAST.

ROSES AT PORTLAND.

Portland, that progressive city in Oregon, known as one of the best flower towns in the country, also is called the City of Roses, and the accompanying illustration shows one of the reasons why. Here is a hedge of roses photographed September 10. There are hundreds of such hedges all over the city, and they are loaded with flowers from early June until frost. This photograph was supplied by G. S. Crego, the originator of the Crego aster, who recently removed to Portland from Maywood, Ill. Mr. Crego, writing November 5, said that roses still were plentiful in the gardens at that date.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

After several weeks of rain, we are enjoying a gentle cold snap, just enough to make men and animals step briskly. The flower market has also been enlivened considerably. Thanksgiving was good, going ahead of last year, and everybody seems to be well satisfied with the results. Considerable funeral work since then has kept all the stores busy. Mums still hold sway, and last much longer than is usual in the east. Good valley, carnations, snapdragons, roses, callas and excellent violets are to be seen. Coast Oregon grape and huckleberry are now more important factors than are wild ferns, with the cut flower trade.

Various Notes.

The spirit of improvement seems to have taken possession of the downtown places this fall. Miss Armstrong has put in a new icebox, home-built, with a balcony overhead. H. M. Sanders' store is remodeled. The repairs carried on by the Spokane Florist Co. amounted to a complete remodeling of the store. Upon the completion of the repairs a flower show was given. The energy and good taste displayed reflect much credit upon Mr. Kipp and his helpers. There was recently added to his force Eugene Szuchiewicz, formerly with F. C. Weber, of St. Louis. Mr. Szuchiewicz is a trained German decorator and designer. Pictures of the store at the date of the opening appear on page 15 of this issue.

Mr. Lambley, of the McCoy store, in Seattle, was a one-day visitor at the stores and the apple show.

L. I. Milot, of the Milot-Mills Co., of Wenatchee, Wash., was in town on business last week.

The death of John Rodenhurst occurred a few days since at St. Luke's hospital, Spokane. Mr. Rodenhurst was employed by the Hoyt Bros. Co., as chrysanthemum man. Further particulars about him will be found in this week's obituary column.

The Hoyt Bros. Co. is showing a fine lot of primulas, sweet peas and violets. Their mums this year were the finest they have ever grown.

A good piece of work was done recently by C. E. Sullivan in decorating the best booth at the apple show. The exhibit was that sent by the Salmon Ann, B. C., Chamber of Commerce. The background was of black velvet and the decorative material used was Asparagus plumosus, Beauties and immortelles. The apples were all red. The decoration was pronounced by capable judges the best of the kind seen at the apple show. S.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

More rain has fallen, accompanied by thunder and hail. Stock of all kinds is plentiful and all of the stores are making beautiful displays. Roses are especially good, and fine chrysanthemums are still in the market. Whitmani ferns are to be seen everywhere.

Japanese Banquet.

At the banquet given by the Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Alexandria, for the Japanese commissioners, great quantities of chrysanthemums were used, the mum being the Japanese national flower.

On the speakers' table a sunken garden, with a lake, was built from end to end. Two Japanese fountains were playing, and many goldfish were swimming about. The edges of the lake were concealed with flowers and growing plants. A line of green-blue electric globes gave a beautiful effect. Japanese pond lilies floated on the surface of the water. Two tiny castles, with two triumphal arches, also had been placed on the water, giving a true Japanese effect.

At the tables for the women of the party and the special guests of the Chamber of Commerce, two large vases of American Beauties were used, with roses and ferns banked at the base.

At an entertainment given for the Japanese ladies by a lady of Pasadena who had visited Japan two years ago with the American party, the decorations were roses, great quantities being used. The ices were served on crystallized Maman Cochets, with the center removed. Many crystallized Cecil Brunners and loose petals were used on the tables.

Various Notes.

Morris Goldenson reports a splendid Thanksgiving trade, with chrysanthemums and violets taking the lead.

The Redondo Floral Co. had a heavy trade last week, quantities of chrysanthemums being sold.

H. N. Gage has just received a consignment of Jerusalem cherries, which are of good size and well berried.

At the American Florist's they were making up a lot of funeral pieces and a quantity of violet corsage bouquets, with one red rose in the center of each. They were too busy to say much. They carry birds and goldfish as a side line.

The flower store in the Pacific Electric building changed hands during the summer. The present proprietor, Fred Westrum, reports trade as being highly satisfactory.

At Wright's, Wolfskill's and The Angelus they were too busy with funeral work to say much. All seemed to be satisfied with the Thanksgiving trade.

Lichtenberg & Wolfskill report an excellent business in both stores. They have several large decorations booked. Their new store, on Fifth street, is quite handsome and they carry a fine stock.

S. A. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We were treated to several varieties of winter weather during last week. At the time of writing, in the neighborhood of San Francisco, the wind was blowing a fierce gale from the northwest, which meant frosty weather. Earlier in the week we had copious showers of rain, which have given the planters sufficient moisture with which to continue working the soil. The effect of the dark weather and the cold, frosty nights has been quite disastrous to both outside and inside stock. Of the former we have little else than violets, chrysanthemums and narcissi. The Italian growers, owing to the fact that business since Thanksgiving has been rather light, have not yet raised their prices. The quality of the violets for the last month has been exceptionally fine, although the few days of frosty weather seem to have shortened the stems somewhat.

Chrysanthemums are yet in their prime, and are being sold by the growers at reasonable prices. The best outside Bonnaffons can be bought from the growers at the rate of $4 per hundred, while the white sorts can be had at somewhat lower prices. The pink varieties are cheapest of all, and appear not to have sold as well this season as they did last. Paper White narcissi, although not unusually plentiful, are being brought into town in considerable quantities. They can be bought for about $1 per hundred.

In the lines of inside stock, carnations show a tendency towards scarcity since Thanksgiving. There has been practically no increase in the prices for the last three weeks. Although the stock is short, the excess of chrysanthemums, together with the quiet condition of trade, has tended to keep the prices lower than should be ordinarily expected at this time. Regarding the quantity sent to town, Enchantress easily takes first place, with Lawson and Estelle as close seconds. There is a better showing of the white sorts than we have seen since early summer. The price of carnations ranges from $1.50 to $3 per hundred.

In roses there is such a dearth of fancy stock that many of the retailers are afraid to accept orders from particular customers. The greatest scarcity seems to be with Beauties. Nothing with stems over two feet in length is being displayed in shop windows. Some good Bridesmaid are being sent into town by the Burlingame growers, but they are only a small percentage of the amount of stock handled. Liberty and a few Testouts, with a fair sprinkling of Brides, are all that we have to offer at present.

Valley are plentiful and of good quality, and the wholesalers are charging from $3 to $4 per hundred for them. Quite a few growers are bringing hothouse sweet peas into market at present. There is only one fault to be found with this flower, and that is that they are invariably short-stemmed. The varieties grown are principally Emily Henderson, Prima Donna and Blanche Ferry.

Business, with the exception of funeral trade, runs rather light. Everyone is apparently saving money for the holidays.

Various Notes.

A. H. Hills, the orchid grower of Fruitvale, is cutting some very fine cattleyas at present.

A visit to the greenhouses of Ferrari Bros. shows a splendid stock of Beauties for the holidays.

Miss Charlotte Williams, the well-known decorator, attended to the decorations at the big Schillings reception in Oakland, during the present week.

Domoto Bros., of Elmhurst, are cutting heavily of Brides and Maids at present. They have several houses of Beauties which should be in full bloom in a couple of weeks.

The old Bonneau greenhouses have been planted entirely to asparagus, by the California Evergreen Co., which has bought the ground.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

PACKING NURSERY STOCK.

Large European nursery centers, such as Orleans, Boskoop, Naarden and Gand, each has its own regular system of packing. A consignment of parcels from any of these places will show its origin at a glance to the experienced eye, and one cannot do better, when the opportunity arises, than to carefully unpack such parcels and examine them; they are often worth copying.

Many growers are little good at packing; on the other hand, some of them pick it up quickly. It is a knack, nothing else. There is a good deal of waste going on in packing sheds, judging from what one sees. "We have had parcels come in, and been surprised at the yards of string used," says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser, "or, on the other hand, the scanty packing was insufficient to do any good. Straw, of course, is largely used; but it requires experience to make neat-looking parcels with straw as packing. The finished work has a much neater appearance if the straw is passed and cleaned through a rake tied on a ladder. A good handful is taken at a time. The coarse straw can be used between the stems and roots, or ordinary parcels can be done entirely with this short stuff. The long straw also comes in handy for making bands around evergreens; long lengths can be tied together for big trees. The French are extremely skillful in making use of straw.

"Hay, be it ever so rough or coarse, makes splendid packing material. It cannot come up in finish to straw, but it looks what it is, and certainly has not the amateur look about it that a badly packed straw parcel has. In one of the largest nurseries near Paris, a kind of coarse, flat grass is used, having the appearance of growing in marshy places. There was a huge stack of it tied up in bundles, and thousands of parcels were wrapped up in it; in fact, straw was very rarely used for this purpose. They were without doubt excellent examples of packing, the best I ever saw; they were not the work of a few men alone, but all hands aided in packing at night after dark, and started again in the morning at 6 a. m. for a few hours. The orders were all put into bundles beforehand, by an experienced hand, and all the men had to do was to finish them off.

"Boxes and crates are handy for all kinds of seedlings, dwarf roses, etc., and are largely used in Orleans for dispatching young nursery stock abroad. Round baskets are largely used for special orders, but particularly for plants with balls. In Gand, practically nothing else but baskets is used, and it is really surprising how many plants they manage to pack inside one of these; and no doubt it is as much to their skillful packing as to their high-class stuff, that Gand is such a center of horticulture.

"Mats are largely used here and in Holland for packing around the root end of bundles; they are, however, an expensive item. Now, in some nurseries in France, no mats are used for any of the parcels; big or small, the roots are covered in the same way as the rest of the parcel, which does just as well; in fact, is better and cheaper. Mats alone without plenty of packing is little protection for the roots; in fact, you are obliged to cover up the roots well to make the mats fit on evenly. All the mats do is to keep the packing in place. It will pay to get the men to pack without mats. All small plants can be packed torpedo-shape fashion, saving much time and labor. Only when the roots of big trees have to be covered, must a butt end be made; but even then, by overlapping the roots it can be made less bulky at the end.

"When I was in Naarden, the willows were twisted around and a loop formed on the end, but I have since learned a far better way. The thick end of the willow is held with the left hand, the other end looped on and twisted around a few turns. The advantages are quicker work, the saving of a nice thin end of the willow, which comes in for all kinds of tying, and much stronger work. There is no getting away from this, no matter what your men may tell you, and they only talk because they can't do it in any other than their own way. Using willows for packing is not learned in a day, and without skill in this a packer cannot earn his salt, so to speak.

"I noticed a query about packing with machines. They are handy for large quantities of forest plants, stuff which is not hurt by being pressed tightly together, where thousands have to be handled, but for ordinary nursery stock they would be little good."

STARTING EARLY CABBAGE.

I want to make a contract to grow 100,000 early cabbage plants for a kraut factory, and not having had any experience in this line, I should like some information. How much should I get per thousand plants, grown to size to be planted in the field, and what is the best way to grow them? E. S.

The earliest cabbage should be planted the last week in February or March 1. The seed should be planted in the greenhouses in flats, or on a bench especially prepared. When the seed is up only a few days, it is time to transplant the tiny plants. It is best not to sow too much seed at a time, or a large portion of the seedlings will get too big and spoil before they can be transplanted.

They may be transplanted into boxes, or they may be put directly into the coldframes outside, covered over with glass and banked up with manure. The very earliest would have to be put in boxes, ten or twelve dozen to a flat. After they take hold and start to grow a little, then they can be carried out and placed in the coldframes, being careful to set the boxes perfectly level. They stand the cold better if started this way, and the weather would improve, anyhow, by the time they could be carried out. Cabbages stand severe cold if they are hardened to it by cool temperature and plenty of air. I had a large field out so early last season that the ground was frozen on several cold nights in April after planting, but this did not injure the plants.

These extremely early plants are so much more trouble that they are too expensive for kraut factories. Seed planted a little later and transplanted into the coldframes can be handled more cheaply. In this case the frames should be put in place now and the soil all spaded up and raked down nicely, so as to be soft and ready when wanted in the spring. It is a good plan to put the sashes on, too, and keep the ground from getting too wet, lest it might be muddy when wanted.

I never heard before of a sauerkraut factory wanting early cabbages. The later ones are so much larger and better that they are generally used. The later ones are planted in drill rows in the early garden, like radishes, and dug up and planted directly to the fields, without transplanting. If not sowed too thickly, they will make nice plants for the field in this way.

Of the early varieties, I find the Charleston Wakefield decidedly better than the Jersey Wakefield and only a few days later.

The price per thousand for transplanted early cabbages is usually about $4. It will depend largely upon what kind of help you have for transplanting (which is the greatest expense), whether or not you can make much profit in growing them for a factory. Plants from the south I have found to be unsatisfactory.

FORCING WATER CRESS.

Would you kindly give me expert information on the greenhouse culture of the true water cress? I want instructions as to the kind of soil, the temperature, the moisture, the distance apart to plant and the general treatment. I am located in southern Manitoba. E. M. A.

This is a crop which I have never tried to grow in the forcing houses. In fact, I have never seen it tried. Perhaps some reader can give E. M. A. some pointers on the subject. I, however, wish to say that while it would be nice to have a small amount for personal use, I doubt if it could be produced and sold at a profit as a forcing crop.

It requires considerable attention to grow a good crop of it outside. Some growers make a specialty of it in certain localities. Running water is considered necessary. Beds are prepared along little streams, usually coming from springs. Old plants are divided up and pushed into the wet soil a few inches apart. When the planting is done, the little stream is dammed up so as to back the water up over the bed, raising the water higher as the plants grow, until it is about a foot deep. Late in the fall, on frosty nights, the water can be raised to entirely cover the plants and keep them from freezing, which would make the leaves turn brown. The water is lowered again in the morning, and in this way the crop can be kept producing until well into the winter.

Important Announcement to Carnation Growers

At the earnest solicitation of a large number of commercial and private growers, the Cottage Gardens Company has decided to disseminate this year the two famous Carnations

MRS. C. W. WARD and ALMA WARD

two varieties which are well known to all the leading growers of the country. 4 years' test in the New York market has demonstrated their popularity and good staying qualities. For the past 3 years we have been growing from 15,000 to 25,000 of each, during which time they have always commanded the highest market prices, and at no time has the supply been equal to the demand.

On the exhibition table they have taken the highest honors, and we believe it is safe to say these two carnations stand without an equal.

INVITATION

We extend a cordial invitation to all those interested to visit our establishment, where they will have an opportunity to see them growing and compare their good points with other standard varieties grown under the same conditions.

MRS. C. W. WARD

MRS. C. W. WARD is a perfectly formed flower with full center; color, deep pink, several shades lighter than Lawson, deeper than Winsor; having strong, erect stems 24 to 36 inches in length. A vigorous, healthy grower and has never shown disease of any kind.

A very early and free bloomer, producing fine flowers as early as September 1st, which bring from 25 to 50 per cent more than any other variety on the market

The keeping qualities of this variety are remarkable. Several shipments of blooms sent to Europe reached their destinations in perfect condition, and wherever exhibited it has always been the last to show signs of wilting.

ALMA WARD

This beautiful Carnation is pure white except during dark weather, when it shows delicate splashings of pink similar to the Cattleya Orchid, increasing its popularity.

ALMA WARD is the largest and most fragrant Carnation ever grown, producing perfect flowers, 3½ to 4½ inches in diameter, on strong, erect stems 36 to 42 inches in length.

This most remarkable variety takes the same place among Carnations as the American Beauty Rose among Roses, and has, during the past 4 years, been awarded numerous prizes, including the following:

UTICA, N. Y.

A fine display of carnations and other flowers and a dinner, followed by an address by Barney Myers, of Lancaster, marked the fifth annual show of the Utica Florists' Club in Genesee hall on the evening of December 2. The club embraces in its membership the leading florists of the city and vicinity and its annual displays have always proved entertaining and educational to all who have attended them. The company present December 2 comprised members and their ladies and a few invited guests. The early part of the evening was devoted to an inspection of the flowers exhibited and after this came the dinner.

The largest displays made were by Brant Bros., of this city, and W. A. Rowlands, of Whitesboro, and were principally of carnations. A large vase of exquisite Killarney roses, which stood out conspicuously among the carnations, attracted much attention. A bunch of Gov. Herrick violets displayed by J. R. Auld, of New Hartford, and a vase of sweet peas from W. A. Rowlands were other special exhibits which contributed to make the display as a whole an attractive one.

Among the varieties of carnations shown by Brant Bros. were the Enchantress, White Perfection, White Enchantress, Beacon, Winsor, Harry Fenn, Apple Blossom and others. The collection exhibited by W. A. Rowlands comprised Pink Delight, Variegated Lawson, White Lawson, Mrs. Lawson, Winsor, White Perfection and Apple Blossom. L. F. Goodwin, of Clark Mills, had on display White Perfection, Apple Blossom, Enchantress and others, and Kilbourn & Williams, of Clinton, had Enchantress, Queen, White Perfection and other carnations and a large fern. The comparatively small room in which the display was made was filled with fragrance.

The dinner was served about 9 o'clock by Caterer Hauser. Bergner's orchestra furnished music. The president of the club, Frank J. Baker, performed the duties of master of ceremonies and after a few words about the organization and its objects, introduced Mr. Myers, who is superintendent of the greenhouses at Lancaster, belonging to W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo. Mr. Myers spoke on the cultivation of carnations, the construction of greenhouses and other matters of interest to florists. The florists and all present listened to him with close attention.

The committee in charge of the show consisted of W. A. Rowlands, A. R. Wilcox and Robert Boyce.

Shasta

During October Shasta gave us 2 blooms per plant. During the first 15 days of November we cut 2369 good blooms from the same bed of 1800 plants. The cut is getting better every day.

Growers who come to see it growing, marvel at its productiveness and fine quality of bloom. We would like to have you come and see it too. Once you see it, you will want to grow it.

Sangamo

Brilliant, glistening pink. Winner wherever shown: Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee. The greatest bloomer and fastest grower of any. Flowers perfect, stems long and stiff.

Why You Should Grow SANGAMO

1st.—It will give you more blooms in a season than any other variety. The fastest grower we have ever seen. 2nd.—It is the best color of anything in this class, Winsor, Rose-pink Enchantress or any other. 3rd —The blooms are well formed, nicely rounded out in the center, and do not fade. 4th.—The flower stands well above the calyx, making it impossible to split. 5th.—It comes early with long stems that are always stiff, holding the flower gracefully. 6th—The entire stock is clean and healthy. The cuttings root easily and the plants lift from the field and establish themselves without a set-back. 7th.—Not only an exhibition variety, but the best bread and butter Carnation for any florist to grow. Let us pay your coal bill for you.

Rooted cuttings guaranteed. January delivery, 100, $12; 1000, $100

Call and See it Growing Miami Queen

In dissemination of this new carnation, the introducer feels confident it excels all similar varieties in the following respects:

It has a strong constitution and will thrive with ordinary culture.

The color is a grand cerise pink and very double, shows up fine under artificial light.

The blooming qualities are of the best, commencing in early Fall and continuing throughout the season.

During the dark days of Winter, this carnation, having a strong calyx, does not split to any extent, like other pinks.

The form is ideal, the flower being from 3 inches to 4 inches; the plant compact, with no surplus grass; the stem is long and graceful; keeping qualities are excellent; a good shipper; and we fell confident that this is one of the best commercial carnations sent out in years; we have given it five years' trial, and it is better this year than ever.

We are booking orders for January, 1910, delivery, at $10.00 per 100; $85.00 per 1000. Orders filled in strict rotation. For sale by

AMHERST, MASS.

The short course in floriculture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College last year was so successful that it will again be given, commencing January 4, 1910, and lasting for twelve weeks. Last year the department was somewhat handicapped because of lack of classroom, laboratory and greenhouse facilities, but with the fine equipment which has been built during the last year this difficulty has been obviated. French hall has excellent classrooms and laboratories and the range of greenhouses of the commercial type is up-to-date in every respect.

Aside from the lectures dealing specifically with the growth of florists' crops, greenhouse construction, heating, management and the marketing of flower products, there will be lectures by specialists from the college faculty on greenhouse insects, diseases of greenhouse crops, soils, fertilizers, and general plant life or botany.

Last year one of the most valuable features of the course was the various talks by practical growers. These will be repeated this year and the following well-known men have consented to talk on their specialties: W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, Mass., and Madbury, N. H., will talk on rose growing. Eber Holmes, of Montrose, will give his personal experiences along this same line of work. Peter Fisher will speak on the improvement of the carnation by breeding and give personal experiences in carnation culture. M. A. Patten, of Tewksbury, will give his experiences with this important crop. E. O. Orpet, of South Lancaster, will speak on orchids. William Sim, of Cliftondale, will speak one afternoon on "Sweet Pea Culture Under Glass" and in the evening will speak on violet culture. E. MacMulkin, of Boston, speaks on retail marketing. E. J. Elder, of the Lord & Burnham Co., will talk on greenhouse heating. It is expected that several experts will be present and give valuable suggestions in regard to the culture of other crops, but these arrangements have not been fully completed.

Each Saturday during the twelve weeks will be devoted to an observation trip to some greenhouse establishment, where details of management will be studied. The cost of this course will be comparatively small. No tuition is charged. The rent for furnished rooms in private families ranges from $1 to $2 per week. Board can be had at the college dining hall at $3.75 per week. Aside from these expenses the incidental items for books, traveling expenses on observation trips, etc., will be small.

The Review will send the Book of Grafted Roses for 25 cents.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

General trade conditions here are good and the prospects for brisk Christmas trade are encouraging. With chrysanthemums still on the market, of first-class quality, carnations are not moving so readily as they did in the earlier part of the season, the quantity having greatly increased. Roses are selling well and at present are on the short side. American Beauties have fallen off in demand, owing, no doubt, to the advanced prices, it being difficult to command fancy prices here, especially if the stock is not up to grade. Christmas greens are moving readily and the demand promises to exceed that of last year. Violets have fallen off in demand the last few days, a reason for which can not be given; however, it is not on account of the quality, as it is the finest seen in Rochester for many a long day.

Club Affairs.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Commercial Florists' Association recently was held, at which the report of the treasurer was read concerning the flower carnival. It was extremely satisfactory to all concerned. After all accounts were paid, a balance was shown of about $1,200. This was a rather startling revelation when it was shown that at the commencement the association had the munificent sum of $12.03 to its credit.

Plans for obtaining suitable quarters for the association were discussed and a committee composed of E. S. Osborne and J. M. Keller was instructed to make an investigation of the probable cost, etc., of such an undertaking. The report will be given at the next meeting, Monday, December 13. At this meeting it is expected Dr. Algernon S. Crapsey will deliver an address on the vacant lot gardening commission and its work. We trust a large attendance will be on hand to hear this interesting lecture.

New Salem, Mass.—The Crowl Fern Co. says that the fern pick this year was rather larger than usual. The quality in some places has been better than previously. The weather was favorable to the growth of ferns, and the fall was favorable for collection.
